How the BBC covers the war media times pages 42-45

No. 66,477

FRIDAY APRIL 2 1999

=http://www.the-times.co.uk

Maundy euros? The fight to keep sterling silver page 20

TOMORROW IN THE SATURDAY TIMES Sex and drugs and sticky-back plastic

FOR SCHOOLS token page 28

The American soldiers cap-

US outrage at PoW show trial

America will stand by her own

By Michael Evans, OM WALKER AND IAN BRODIE

THREE bruised and battered American soldiers, snatched by Yugoslav troops across the border from Kosovo, are to appear at a show trial in Belgrade today.

The sight of the three men on Yugoslav state television looking shocked and haggard caused outrage across the United States and President Clinton said that President Milosevic would be held personally responsible for their safety.

He said: There was absolutely no basis for them to be taken and there is no basis for them to be held. There is certainly no basis for them to be tried. President Milosevic should make no mistake, the United States takes care of its own. We will hold him and his government responsible for their safety and well-being."

The three were named as

Staff Sergeant Andrew Rami-Sergeant James Stone, 25, from Michigan, and Specialist Steven Gonsalves, 24, from Texas. All are cavalry scouts serving with the 4th Infantry Division based in Schweinfurt, Germany.

They were grabbed in their Humvee vehicle as they were carrying out a routine reconnaissance mission in the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia. They were described as operating for the United Nations, but the UN out out a statement last night pointing out that its mandate in Macedonia had expired. Nevertheless, Nato insisted that the men were well inside Macedonia, while Belgrade claimed that they had strayed into Kosovo. The capture - the second propaganda coup in a week for the Yugoslavs after the downing of an American Stealth fighter - caused celebrations in Belgrade. And there was another setback for Nato yesterday when Ibrahim Rugova, the moderate leader of the ethnic Albanians, was seen on Yugoslav state television in a meeting with Mr Milosevic in Belgrade. There had been fears for his life when he disappeared last week, but he emerged yesterday saying that he was under the protection of Serb forces.

TV & RADIO _____54,55 WEATHER28 CROSSWORDS .. 28.41.56

OBITUARIES

ROSEMARY RIGHTER...24

CHESS & BRIDGE48

COURT & SOCIAL26

LAW REPORT.....41

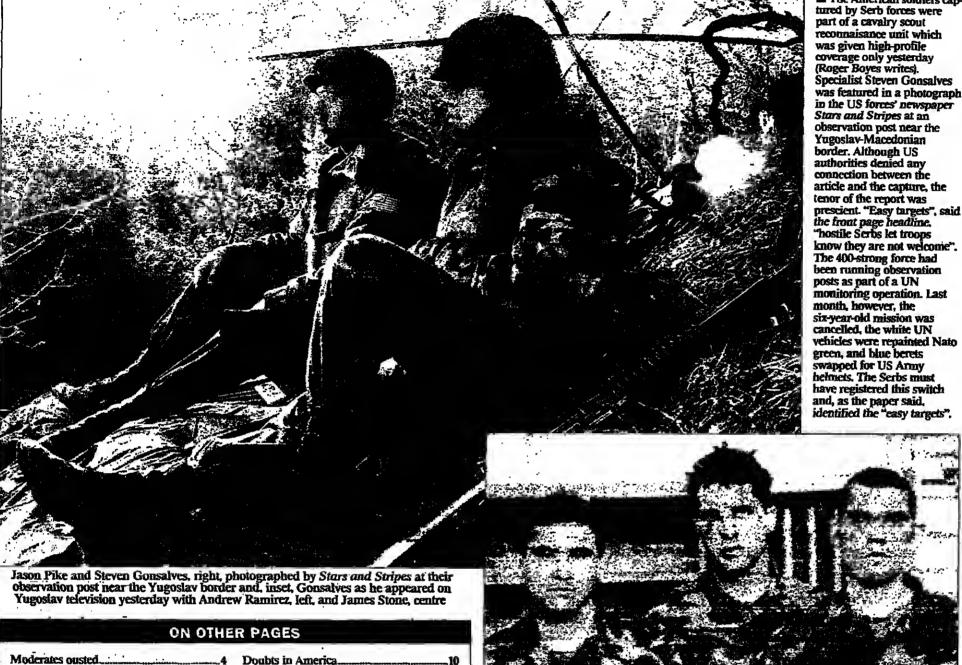

LETTERS ...

EDUCATION ...

Buying The Times overseas Austria Sch 50, Belgium B Pry 110: Can

3 Austria Sch 50, Belgium B Pre 110: Canada SUSt Canarias Pre 400; Cyprus CLL 20: Comment Dir Z2.00; Finland Fruk 30:50; France FR 17:00; Cermany DM 5:50; Gibraliar 90p; Greece Dr 750; Netherlands Fl 0:50; Italy L 5:000; Lumenbourg Lf 110: Madeira Esc 350; Malia 80c; Morocco Dir 30:00; Norway Kr 25:00; Portugal Esc 350; Spain Pre 400; Sweden Skr 25:00; Switzerland S Fre 0:00; Tunitia Dia 32:00; USA 53:50.
Pernodicals Postage Paid at Rahway NJ Postmaster: Send address corrections to: The Tures of Mercury International 365 Blair Road Awenel NJ 07001.

Road Avenel Ny 07001.

Soldiers ambush -Yugoslav defiance Limited invasion. Refugees in Britain Track of despair.

Blair under pressure. Rosemary Righter. Vanora Bennett Letters BBC radio war coverage

He later appealed for an end to the Nato bombing campaign and called for a political solution. But his appearance was denounced by fellow Kosovo rebels who said that he had been captured and was speaking under duress. In a further blow to Nato, Moscow confirmed yesterday that intelligence information gleaned by a reconnaisance ship on its way to the Mediterranean would be passed to Belgrade to help it counter the air

The fate of the three American soldiers, however, was the greatest concern for the alliance yesterday. David Leavy. a National Security Council spokesman, said: "We're thankful that the servicemen are alive, but clearly the signs that they have been mistreated are very disturbing." An official protest was delivered to the Swedish Government which represents American interests in Belgrade and the Yugoslav authorities were warned to treat the three soldiers in accordance with the Geneva Convention, even though neither side has formally declared war.

Under the convention, prisoners are supposed to be fed, unharmed, taken care of and not exploited for propaganda purposes. Washington has asked that a neutral party be allowed to see the three men. The soldiers had reported in a radio message from their Humvee vehicle that they were surrounded and in a small arms fight. Whether they later escaped and drove in the wrong direction or escaped on foot was unclear, General Hugh Shelton, Chair-man of the US Joint Chiefs of Staff, said. A manhunt was launched, but the next thing American officials knew was

.43

If convicted of spying at the court martial, the three could face up to 20 years in jail, according to new provisions set up under the state of emergency in Yugoslavia. However, in an extraordinary interview on the three men's television ap-the Serb paramilitary leader Arkan gave his word that they would come to no harm He said: "They are brave soldiers, they have been fighting, they didn't want to surrender and I said thanks be to God that they are alive." Arkan, an indicted war criminal, went on to say that they had "put up a fight", adding: "The Yugoslav Army is keeping them and they'll be treated under the Geneva Convention. They will be well treated, don't you worry."

General Nebojsa Pavkovic,
the commander of the Yugoslav unit that grabbed the soldiers, assured those involved that they "would become legends in the history of Serbia". Nato meanwhile announced that it would continue stepping up the air campaign against Yugoslavia and the first indication of the new expanded targeting strategy became apparent when a bridge over the Danube at Novi Sad, was destroyed, blocking all traffic on one of Europe's busi-Despite Nato claims yesterday that eight days of bombing had caused substantial age to Yugoslavia's military infrastructure, the supreme commander General Wesley Clark confirmed that discussions were under way about a possible limited ground troops operation to set up a sanctuary for civilians in Kosovo.

"Ien't this the iunction

Unseasonal sun, seasonal jams

By Stephen Farrell and Adam Sherwin

with a sub-machine gun. Jewish groups said that at last "justice had been done". The mandatory life sentences wrath of other prisoners. Towards the end of the eightweek trial, the judge had or-dered him to be detained for security reasons in Belmarsh Prison, East London. There, for four nights, he was subjected to constant taunts by other inmates as they goose-stepped and gave Nazi salutes. After being told of this, the judge granted him bail until the verdicts yesterday when he was returned to Belmarsh. On his last day of freedom, an angry Sawoniuk threw stones at photographers waiting for him to leave for court.

His war crimes took place in Domachevo, Belarus, when he became one of the first to join' the local police force established by the Nazis after they over-ran the town in 1941. The judge ordered Sawoniuk, who the hierarchy of those involved in the liquidation of Jews in Eastern Europe, but to the Jews of Domachevo it must have appeared otherwise." Sawoniuk had faced four specimen charges under the War Crimes Act 1991. They stated that he had committed murders "in circumstances constituting a violation of the laws and customs of war". Two charges were dropped on the instruction of the judge because of lack of corroborative evidence. Sawoniuk was implicated in other murders.

He claimed that he had been a friend of the Jews. In the court's public restaurant, he was overheard expressing his hatred of them. The de fence is considering an appeal. The jurors are to be excused jury service for their lives.

SUN worshippers fleeing the Motoring organisations recities for Easter yesterday enported heavy congestion on countered huge traffic congesmany major routes in unseasonally high temperatures tion, with the consolation that of 21C, with the M5 at a standthey are likely to enjoy nearrecord temperatures when still and ten-mile tailbacks on they reach their destinations. the A30 near Exeter. Tailbacks stretched for 18

The M25 around London was also badly affected. Problems in Essex were exacerbated by a protest staged by lorry drivers against fuel and vehicle tax rises. A convoy of more than 50 HGVs embarked on a crawl along the M25.

timate 10 million cars will take to the roads across Britain over the four-day holiday."

expects temperatures to rise to 22C (72F) on Easter Day and Bank Holiday Monday. Although 1.5 million Britons are expected to fly overseas, temperatures in Britian topped those in mainland Europe yes-

Premiers issue a challenge of peace for Ulster

By MARTIN FLETCHER CHIEF IRELAND

TONY BLAIR and Bertie Ahern challenged Unionists and republicans to adopt a radical new plan for implementing the Good Friday peace accord yesterday after marathon talks failed to break the dead-lock over IRA disarmament.

At the end of four days and more than 40 hours of negotiations at Hillsborough Castle, the British and Irish Prime Ministers published their joint plan, sent the parties away for a 12-day "pause for reflection", and effectively defied them to reject it. Both leaders insisted it provided the "basis for agree-

The plan sets out a complex sequence of events designed to break the impasse caused by the IRA's refusal to disarm, and David Trimble's refusal to admit Sinn Fein to government until it does. It calls IRA disarmament an "obligation" that should be completed within two years, and says Sinn Fein has acknowledged that Mr Trimble, the First Minisier, gave the plan a cautious welcome, even though it does not explicitly insist on the prior decommissioning he has been demanding. Gerry Adams was more guarded, reiterating that he could not deliver IRA disarmament.

Mr Adams in particular will face a tough task persuading his republican constituency to back the plan, but any party that rejects it when the talks resume on April 13 would no longer be challenging a rival party but the two governments

The four-page document Continued on page 2, col 5

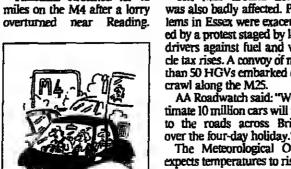

Trek Nepal'99

War criminal weeps for an old age in jail By Tim Jones and Alan Hamilton SAWONIUK ANTHONY was given two life sentences at the Old Bailey yesterday after becoming the only person to be convicted in a British court of Nazi war crimes. The former British Rail ticket collector broke down and wept as the jury announced its first verdict, that almost 60 years ago he had murdered two Jewish men and a woman and pushed their bodies into an open grave. Four hours later, they returned and by a majority of 10-1 said he had also been guilty of ordering 15 Jewish women to strip and face an open grave before killing them

passed by Mr Justice Potts

AA Roadwatch said: "We es-The Meteorological Office

Could you trek for a week in Nepal to raise funds for Deafblind people? Imagine a landscape covered with show capped mountains, fascinating wildlife, glaciers, rivers and lakes - then imagine the opportunity to spend a week trekking through the heart of this wilderness. You'll only need a week off work. The Annapurna Challenge is a trip of a lifetime. Cost to you: £195 Departures: October 16th, 23rd, 30th November 6th, 13th 1999 For more information call 0870 1290101

By TIM JONES

A SIMPLE error in transliteranion almost ensured that Anthony Sawoniuk was never called to account for his crimes.

Because of the misspelling. after an intensive year-long hunt the trail grew cold and the War Crimes Unit established by Scotland Yard became convinced that he was not living in Britain. In April 1992, they wrote to the Home Office to stay they were taking him off their list of 376 war crime suspects.

But then, after being briefed by a historian about Russian spelling, they revisited the National Immigration Centre and saw that he had entered Britain in 1940.

Armed with the fresh lead. the historian Alastair Mac-Leod, one of two experts on the Nazi Holocanst who had been drafted on to the team, visited Brest, in Belarus, where he discovered KGB records that revealed Sawoniuk's hloodstained past.

Unbeknown to Sawoniuk. who was leading an unremarkable life in London, the damning file had been started by a KGB "extraordinary commissions" unit that visited Domethevo in 1944, after the Nazis had been driven out, to ask questions about who had been fighting for the Germans. In 1951, five years after he entered Britain as a member of the Polish Free Army, Sawoniuk had made the fatal mistake of writing to his hall-brother, Nikolai, who still lives in Poland, to tell him of his new life beyond the Iron

The letter, which was rou-ninely opened by the KGB, established that Sawoniuk was living with his third wife. Christina van Ghent, on the South Coast of England, The KGB took no action but they never forgot. More than 30 years later, in the early 1980s, the KGB were able to update their files on him when they intercepted another letter. This had been sent by a man named Stephan Androsiuk who died more than three years ago in a car crash. Wriding from London to his sister who still lives near Brest. he mentioned that he was acquainted with Sawoniuk.

As Sawoniuk neared retirement in 1986, he probably thought he would never be called to account for the mass murders he committed. But he was about to become unwitringly caught up in the political turmoil sweeping the Soviet Union.

Mikhail Gorbachev was introducing glasnost and per-estroika, and Margaret estroika.

FIRST STOP A HIGH-SECURITY JAIL

Anthony Sawoniuk spent last night at Belmarsh high secu-est prisoners in the country. However, at the age of 78, Sawonluk is destined for the hospital wing at another jail.

marsh in a special unit for lifers, where he will be assessed. He is then likely to go to a prison with a sophisticated health care unit, as he suffers from diabetes and heart disease. One possibility is Wormwood Scrubs, which has a unit for lifers as well as a medical centre, or another large prison in the Home Counties. Healthy, older life prisoners are held at Kingston prison, near Portsmouth, where almost half the immates are over 70. The prison's E wing provides a quieter regime for prisoners: the oldest immates are held there.

The jail, in southeast London, holds some of the tough-

Prison officials say that he will spend some time at Belrity prison. (Stewart Tendler writes).

THE HUNT

ter, declared he was a man with whom she could do business. In the glow of the new re-lationship, the Soviet Embassy in 1988 provided the British Government with a list of more than 100 suspected war criminals, one of whom was Sawoniuk.

Even then, Sawoniuk was safe, for there was no mechanism to bring him to justice. That changed in 1991 when, in the face of opposition from the House of Lords, the War Crimes Act of 1991 was introduced and a War Crimes Unit set up by Scotland Yard, Armed with the list, the team began to track down Sawoniuk.

The KGB had told them the man they needed to hunt was Andrey Andreyevich Savanyuik. The way they transliterated his surname, particularly the use of the letter "v" instead of the letter "w", almost ensured his escape.

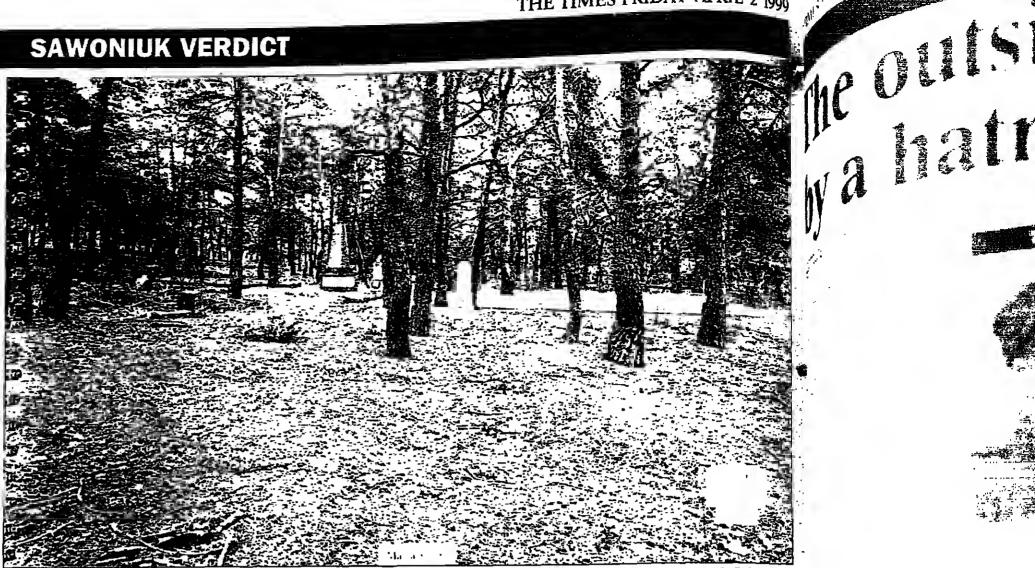

Using computers, the Scotland Yard team entered the letters "Sav" into the files of more than 15 government agencies from the Inland Revenue to the Department of Social Security, They drew a blank.

Believing they had exhausted every avenue the team in-formed the Home Office that Sawoniuk did not exist. Again, it seemed that fate had conspired to save Sawoniuk but his luck was running out.

The Yard, told of the possible different spellings of the name. looked again at the immigration files and Mr Mac-Leod, a fluent Russian speaker who works for the United Nations War Crimes Commission, flew to Brest There, searching through dust-covered sacks and boxes, he uncovered the file that was to send Sawoniuk to prison.

In March 1996, Sawoniuk's life of lies and denial began to crumble when, 54 years after his crimes, he answered a knock on his door. Detectives were waiting to interview him.

Michael Pinto-Duschinsky,

The memorial marking the mass grave where the Jews of Domachevo were murdered, during the Nazi occupation of the town, now in Belarus

The only trial out of 393 suspects

Tim Jones looks at the results of eight-year manhunt that changed British justice and cost £11million

ANTHONY SAWONIUK was the first and probably will be the only war crimes defendant to face a British murder trial. His trial also made legal histowhen the jury became the ry when the jury became the first to be taken abroad to view the scene of a crime.

Now one man remains under inquiry out of 393 suspects investigated by British police. A decision has not been made on his future but it is expected that he will not face trial for the alleged murder of a Jew in Ukraine. After an eight-year manhunt costing more than Ell million. Britain's efforts to track the Nazi killers of the last war is now certain to be closed down.

Two junior officers remain at Scotland Yard from a tearn that once numbered 18, including detectives and war historians. All the officers were seasoned investigators, accustomed to dealing with the Lon-don underworld, but many were appalled and moved by the stories they heard from the survivors of the Holocaust. One detective chief inspector visited Auschwitz in mid-winter and later recalled how he suddenly realised how terrible conditions must have been. Former Detective Superintendent Eddie Bathgate, who headed the investigation when it was launched, said from the very beginning that the biggest problem was time. The crimes took place so long ago that police had to prove not only that a suspect was the man they were looking for but also that he was the war criminal that the Holocaust survivors believed him to be. The possibility of a war rimes unit was raised 13 years ago when the Simon Wiesenthal Centre, established to find Nazis who had escaped jusoce, sent the Prime Minister, Margaret Thatcher, the names of fugioves who were said to be living in Britain.

Mrs Thatcher launched a war crimes inquiry, headed in England by Sir Thomas Hetherington, former Director of Public Prosecutions, and in Scotland by William Chalmers, the Crown Agent. After examining 301 allegations, they decided that there was a "realisoc prospect" of convictions and the Government brought in legislation.

The possibility of a retrospec-the Lords refused for a second time, in May 1991, to give the War Crimes Act a second reading, the Government invoked the Parliament Act to force it

> Nineteen days after the law was passed, the Yard opened its unit. Officers received information from a wealth of sources including the former Soviet Union and war crimes units in the United States, Canada and Australia.

on to the statute book.

tive law met uncompromising opposition from the Lords, where speakers argued that nothing would be gained by old wounds. When

In all. 376 cases were identified by the Yard and another 17 were investigated by Scottish officers. The investigators found themselves wading through records of scores of thousands of people who came to and left Britain after the war. Officers visited 20 countries at a cost of £6.5 million. The detectives discovered that 117 of the men involved were dead and in 257 cases inquiries have been dropped, either through insufficient evidence or because the suspects were too ill to be inverviewed The only other prosecution came in April 1996, when Szymon Serafinowicz was commitled for trial from Dorking Magistrates' Court to the Central Criminal Court to answer allegations that he had murdered Jewish civilians in Belarus. In January the following year, a jury found him unfit to stand trial and the Attorney-General entered a permanent stay on the prosecution be-health. He has since died. criminals in Scotland ended after the Lord Advocate ruled against prosecutions even though a man named in the Wiesenthal list had lost a libel trial against Scottish Television. Antanas Gecas, a retired mining engineer from Edinburgh, was accused of having been the head of a murder squad involved in annihilaling thousands of Jews in Lithuania and Belarus. The judge in the libel trial said that he was satisfied Gecas was involved in the murder of elderly men, women and children. The Crown abandoned its criminal case in 1994 and inquiries involving another 16 Scottish suspects were Demachevo's police station. In 1941, Sawoniuk joined the local force set up by the Nazis Moves to prosecute war

Kodak of

DC210+ DIGITAL CAMERA Megapwel resolution for dazzling detail and wind colour . 2x optical zoom tens . AC adapter . BMB CompactFlash" card . TFT colour screen . Free Kar's Photo Soan software Our Verdict? For hassie-free digital-sharp photography look no turther

JA30 APS COMPACT CAMERA 35-80mm zoom lens • Droo in toading Three point formats • Mid-roll film change. Our Verdict? A great new Advanced Photo System carriera with a powerful zoom lens. Comes with a FREE JA11 APS COMPACT CAMERA worth £59.95!

EOS 300 35mm SLR CAMERA zone evaluative and partial metering patterns • Wide 7 point ante focus • Compact. lightweight design Our Verdict? Canon's latest SLR tooks like another best sefler with

FREE FILM FOR LIFE APS developing and printing Plus free variables worth up to £13 · Full range of unlargements reprints and

ESPIO 140M 35mm COMPACT CAMERA • 38-140mm zoom tens • Multi-point auto locus with locus lock . Quality 6 segment metering system. Our Verdict? A compact camera that packs a massive zoom and an impressive

POTONEX 250 APS COMPACT CAMERA • 35-55mm acom lens • Which Camera? magazine Best Buy - Orop-In loading - Three print formals. Our Verdict? A fully leatured APS zoom compact packaged in a great gift kit.

JESSOPS

If you take our advice, you'll take great pictures.

www.jessops.co.uk

DC200+ DIGITAL CAMERA Stores up to 60 pictures on a 4mb CompactFlash* card. Our Verdict? Measquel

LEXMARK

5770 DIGITAL CAMERA PRINTER Pron photos from digital carneras without the need for a PC . Compatible with SmartMedia" and CompactFlash* memory cards • 1,200 x 1,200 do resolution Our Verdict? The printer that every digital camera

 Heavy weight glassy paper - Pack of 15 sheets with 5 edia free . Practical Photography paper with stunning colour and detail

PRACTICAL PHOTOGRAPHY RETAILER OF THE YEAR. If you can get a better deal locally within seven days we'll retund the difference. Ask in stone for details 121 outlets nationwide, call 0800 652 6400 for your nearest store or a free catalogue.

'Time does not lessen the guilt'

JEWISH groups greeted the conviction of Anlony Sawoniuk with satisfaction that "justice has been done".

The Jewish rights campaigner Lord Janner of Braunstone, QC, said: This evil man was accorded a fair trial, which is more than he gave his victims. The Nazis did not try their victims, they murdered them. Lord Janner, a founder member of the All-Party War Crimes Group, added: "I am sorry that so many other war criminals who sadly found refuge in Britain have so far escaped justice. This trial and the jury's just verdict has vindicated our war crimes procedure.

"This trial is a symbolic beacon relight-ing memories of the hideous barbarities of the past. It reminded us all of the dangers that flow from allowing racist dictators to rule, and there could be no better time for that reminder than now." The Jewish Information and Media Service said the verdict "is to be welREACTION comed as an unfortunate necessity". Rabbi Dr Jonathan Romain, its director, said: "It is not pleasant to have to take an elderly man to court but it is even less pleasant to think of the murders of which he is accused going unpunished.

"Mere passage of time does not make a guilty person less guilty. If Myra Hind-ley's crimes had only just been discovered now, it would be inconceivable that she would be told that she need not face any charges as the murders happened so

He described the War Crimes Act. under which Sawoniuk was prosecuted, as legislation of justice rather than venge-

"At a time when war crimes are being committed in Kosovo and elsewhere, this prosecution in Britain will give a powerful message to President Milosevic that people have to face the consequences of their actions, now or later, for the way in which they made others suffer.

Conversely, lack of prosecution would have undermined the credibility of the War Crimes Tribunal in The Hague and implied that those involved in war crimes today might go unpunished in the fu-

Neville Nagler. Director-General of the Board of Deputies of British Jews. said: "Justice has finally been secured for the Jewish inhabitants of Domachevo murdered by Sawoniuk and the Nazis. His trial and conviction have finally justified the cost and effort involved in bringing war criminals to justice."

The Crown Prosecution Service said: This has been a remarkable trial in many ways. Its successful conclusion is the result of close co-operation between the CPS and Metropolitan Police and is also a tribute to the courage and resilience of the witnesses."

Challenge over the Ulster deadlock should be shared out, but no power devolved to the new executive pending a "collective act of reconciliation" that would take place within one That act would involve the paramilitaries putting some arms "beyond use on a volun-tary basis", further moves by the government towards demilitarisation, and ceremonies of remembrance for all victims of violence. The intention would be to remove any suggestion that the IRA was engaging in an act of surrender, or capitulating to Unionist demands. The plan says that "around the time" of that act of reconcili-ation. London would devolve power to the execurive and all other institutions in the Good Friday accord. including the cross-border bodies, would come into force. It offers Unionists the assurance that if there is no decommissioning the assembly would not confirm Sinn Fein's two ministers. The Prime Ministers published their plan at the end of 20 hours of non-stop talks that saw hopes of a deal rise and fall almost by the hour, and it helped to deflect attention from the fact that today's third deadline for establishing the executive will be missed.

However, there are obvious perils in adjourning the talks, even for a few days. The accord's poliocal opponents will have time to rally against a plan that would clearly involve major compromises hy both Mr Trimble and Sinn Fein. Loyalist paramilitary splinter groups bent on wrecking the accord may step up their bombing campaign to make it yet harder for the tRA to contemplate disarmament. Mr Blair called the plan "another huge and significant milestone on the road to our destination", and said he was convinced the parties would all back it.

Both Mr Blair and Mr Ahem put the best face on deadline. Mr Blair said the parties were "absolutely wedded" to the accord, and praised their positive, construche was now certain that "the spirit of democracy contained in the Good Friday accord will win out against all of the negarive and destructive forces we have had to deal with over the Ian Paisley, the Democratic Unionist Party leader, denounced the "April Fools Contract" as another fudge whose 'act of reconciliation" lent credibility to terrorists.

Adams's task, page 19

The outsider driven by a hatred of Jews

Illegitimate child turned into a sadist who relished his role in genocide, reports Tim Jones

THE GUILTY

ALTHOUGH he is now a sick old man, there was a moment at the Old Bailey when it was easy to see why, almost 60 years ago, the Jews that Antho-Sawoniuk persecuted so hithlessly had good cause to

It came when he was questioned about his membership of the Waffen SS by Sir John Nutting, QC. Shaking with rage, the veins in his neck throbbing. Sawoniuk roared out his denial. His voice booming across the court, he said that he had more sympathy for animals than the witnesses against him.

For many people in the little village of Domachevo in 1942 it was this mindset that condemned them to death.

Sawoniuk had kept his past a secret since arriving in Britain in 1946 by adopting what one senior policeman described as a life of "classic anonymity". Since 1986, when he retired from his job as a British Rail ticket collector at London Bridge station, his life has been lonely and dull. On most days, he would leave his shabby flat on a runwn council estate in Bermondsey, southeast London. to go window shopping. He cut a pathetic figure limping along on his walking stick, half-blind, half-deaf, diabetic could not even turn for help to his son, a 38-yearold civil servant who lives in London. The two became estranged many years ago. before Sawoniuk's fourth wife his son's mother. died in 1995. Last night, the son, who is married with two children, said: "My father left my mother within months of my birth and I have nothing to do with him.

"There is nothing I can say on this because 1 do not know the man ... I have never discussed it with him.

Sawoniuk was born in Domachevo in 1921 and brought up to speak mainly Polish, although he had some Russian and a smattering of Yiddish. His mother, who took in washing for Jewish people, died when he was very young. Sawoniuk never knew his father, and he lived with his grandmother and half-brother. Nikolai, in a two-room wood-

Nikolai now lives in a small Polish village not far from Domachevo. Although the two have not spoken for years. Nikolai, who was briefly a member of the local police force during the war, defends his brother and refuses to ac-

Sawoniuk in uniform: he was a policeman before joining the SS cept that he was a war crimi-

Even by the standards of the local peasants who lived by trading their produce with the Jewish people who ran the town as a spa resort, Sawoniuk and his family were poor. He was regarded as little more than a street child, and earned a pittance from the Jews for lighting fires, chopping wood or fetching water from wells on the Sabbath. Ragged and almost Illiterare, he hated the Jews because of their comparative success. To most people in the village, he was known as Andrusha, but because his parents never married he was also routinely described as "the bastard".

Within days of the German invasion in June 1941. Andrusha, a powerfully built 20-year-old, was one of the first to volunteer for the police force the Nazis established. They gave him a gun, a uniform, food, and a chance to vent his spleen. Making no secret of his hatred of the Jews, he patrolled the barbed wire gheno to which they were confined with an obsessive zeal and delighted in subjecting them to humili-ation and cruelty. A few days after the massacre of

2,900 men, women and children on the Jewish holiday of Yom Kippur in September 1942, he ordered 15 Jewish women to strip and stand in front of a pit before murdering them with a sub-machinegun. He also forced one of the witnesses against him. Fedor Zan, to stand by as he shot three Jews, two men and a Loathed and feared by the Gentiles who were eventually the only people remaining in wealth country.

the town, he took command of the local force in December 1943 when his first wife was killed by partisans.

But the tide of war was turning and the Russians advancing. Accompanied by another woman, Nina, whom he is believed to have married. Sawonfuk retreated in July 1944 with the German forces. The following month he joined the 30th Waffen SS division in Poland and was transferred in November to another SS regiment. He deserted in France and joined the 10th Hussar Regi-ment of the British Army's Polish Corps, serving with them in Egypt and Italy.

He landed in Britain in June 1946, disembarking from a troop ship. Living in Hove, East Sussex, in December 1947, he married his third wife, whom he divorced in 1951. She told police that she left him because of his viosence. In 1954, he moved to London to work as a hospital

In the 1950s he applied for citizenship through a solicitor as he could not write. He was sent the documents but could not sign them as he was then in a mental hospital after a nervous breakdown.

He applied again in 1994. but was turned down as he was not from a Common-atmosphere of court 13, the tales of a European nightmare that happened before any member of the jury was born pricked by the evidence of Mr

Blustein and that of the simple, dignified peasants, it never showed. To him, they were all liars. He had been their friend and defender, and he was the victim of a bizarre plot between Scotland Yard and the KGB.

were difficult to comprehend. If, deep down, Anthony Sawoniuk's conscience was Sawoniuk grins after being cleared of two of the murder charges earlier this month

Haunted by memories of atrocities

BY TIM JONES

LIKE ghosts from a hidden past, elderly men and women appeared at the Old Bailey to haunt Anthony Sawoniuk with memories of his crimes. He raged against them, calling them liars, denying that he had ever known them. But their memory of his cruelty.

ras clear, their scars too deep to have properly healed. in the words of William Clegg, QC, for the defence, it was one of the most emotional trials in British history - a fact proved by the testimony of Ben-Zion Blustein, one of the few Jews who survived the horrors of Domochevo. As Mr Blustein, 76, who now lives in Israel, gave his evidence, some women in the court wept and others on the jury wiped tears from their

Mr Blustein, glaring at Sawoniuk, said: This trial has come 50 years too late. I came here as a mouth for the ins of hundreds of people killed by this man. I came to be their voice.

He said that on the eve of Yom Kippur in September 1942, he, his mother, stepfather, young brother and sister had squeezed into a tiny freezing trench they had dug beneath their home in the ghetto, rather than answer the roll call that spelt death for 2,900 men, women and children. In the darkness, he said, freezing and without food or water for days, the family decided to commit suicide. His stepfather drank a bottle of morphine and succeeded in killing himself but the powdered drugs the rest of them near Domochevo, seemed to writhe in agony.

Witnesses, clockwise from top left: Ben-Zion Blustein,

On the orders of his mother he left and was spared by the Germans because he was

In contrast to Mr Blustein.

Fedor Zan. Fedora Yakimuk and Alexander Baglay

good at working with horses. He never saw his family who was well dressed and seemed prosperous. Fedor Zan, 75. who still scratches a living as a peasant farmer be almost overawed by the pomp and solemnity of the

However, his evidence was clear as he recounted the main atrocity committed Sawoniuk. He told the jury that, soon after the main massacre, he was walking through woods when he heard Jewish women wailing.

From a hiding place behind Sawoniuk order 15 women to remove their clothes as they stood before an open grave, and then kill them with bursts from a sub-machinegun.

Damning evidence also came from Alexander Baglay. who recalled how he and a schoolfriend had been arrested by Sawoniuk because they were scavaging for clothes in the deserted ghetto. Mr Baglay, 69, said that Sawoniuk had forced him and his friend to accompany him to where three Jewish people - two men and a woman were standing before an open pit. Sawoniuk ordered the three to undress and then shot them in the head with a pistol, pushing them into the pit as they fell. Even Gentiles were not safe: one day. Fedora Yakimuk. 73, told the court that Sawoniuk. who knew her well, did nothing to help as she kissed the feet of a German soldier who was threatening to shoot her because he mistook an iodine stain on a bandage on her arm for the vellow mark that Jews were forced to wear. She was saved only because the soldier ripped off the bandage to reveal her wound. Another woman, Galina Puchkina, 68, said that as an II-year-old girl she was in the Catholic church on the day of the main massacre when the congregation was ordered out to witness the Jews being marched to their death. Later. she said, at a time when Sawoniuk had become commandant of the local police force. she and her family fled to the forest after being told that they could be shot because of their support for suspected

At times, in the civilised

The jury's still out on the delights of Domachevo

THE Indian restaurant in the Belarussian frontier lown of Brest is said to be the best of its kind between Warsaw and Moscow. It is also probably the only one of its kind, an unexpected oasis of exotic food among the unrelentingly stolid cuisine of the Steppes. Sadly, the jury in the Sawonink trial, on their ground-breaking visit to the distant scenes of old crimes. were denied the pleasures of a chicken tikka masala amid the snows of Eastern Enrope. But Mr Justice Potts had warned them, before they left the comfort and warmth of the Old Bailey for their 1.000-mile journey, that the historic expedition would be no holiday. Counsel were under no such restraints. Sir John Nutting, QC. and William Clegg. QC. men with appe-tites as sharp as their legal taurant within moments of arriving in the otherwise shared a table with their entire legal teams at the end of a day's adversarial business in sub-zero temperatures.

The eight men and four women of the jury. forbidden the risk of contagion with reporters or any others with whom they might be tempted to discuss the case, were not so lucky. During their two nights in Brest, the nearest civilisation to the village of Domachevo. they were held virtual prisoners in the Intourist Hotel, a bostelry exuding all the charm of a tax office.

The judge, a kindly man, took pity and hosted a drinks party for them. Otherwise they were constrained to their own floor in the dingy inn, court staff taking it in turns to guard against intruders.

Who they were expecting to intrude was unclear. The only visible threat came from the elegant, lanky prostitutes who plied openly for trade in the hotel's bar and lobby. Whatever they might have wished to discuss with the jurges, it was unlikely to have been the finer points of

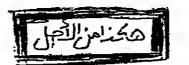

The judge cut quite a dash as he conducted his court in the open air around the village of Domachevo and in a nearby wood, with snow deep on the ground. He wore a jannty, red, pointed hat with ear-flaps as though it were an Arctic-grade judicial wig. Sir John Nutting strode about in the manner of a grand Shakespearean actormanager, clad in an expensive-looking full-length coat of leather and suede. Despite the court being in full session and subject to all the usual Old Bailey rules, even in a Belarussian village street. Sir John felt no compunction about puffing on his pipe. William Clegg, an altogether more round and avuncular figure, adopted an informal approach. He wore a brightly-patterned Austrian ski jacket with a hood which be raised over his head on occasions when the freezing Siberian wind es carrying judge, jury, legal leams, court officials and press battled its way back from Belarus to the relative civilisation of Warsaw in a blizzard. For their pains, the jury were rewarded with a coach tour of the Polish capital, in which historic buildings are thin on the ground thanks to the combined efforts of the Wehrmacht and the Red Army.

It was indeed hardly the holiday that the jury would have chosen. Their only consolation was that the taxpayers. not they, were paying

BALKANS WAR: MODERATE OUSTED

Montenegro military chief replaced by Milosevic ally

THE tiny Yugoslav republic of Montenegro was dragged a step closer to the war in the Balkans yesterday, after its military chief was replaced by a supporter of President Milosevic. The reaction of the people bordered on panic as stories of a coup d'état circulated throughout the capital. Earlier this week President Djukanovic admitted: "There is a serious and authentic danger that even our state could disappear and burn down in the violence.

Last night, the Government. under great pressure to toe the Belgrade line, called emergen-

The next four or five days will be critical to Montenegro," said Drasko Djun-arovic, editor of Monitor, the first independent weekly mag-azine in Serbia and Montenegro.

The news of President Milosevic replacing the popular General Milorad Martinovic with General Milorad Obradovic was frightening. "I don't think it's good," Mr Dj-unarovic said. "It suggests there is a fear of the military. I do think there is danger."

The theory here in the capital is that General Martinovic was replaced because he did not comply with Mr Milosevic's hard line on defending Yugoslavia against Nato altacks. Montenegro has refused to recognise itself as being in a state of war and has maintained a delicate balance between satisfying Mr Milosevic while keeping long-term op-tions to the West open. Privately, government of-ficials have admitted to journalists that their hope is for Nato to crush Mr Milosevic, but publicly they must con-demn the strikes. "It is obvious

Rumours of an imminent coup fuel panic in tiny republic, writes Janine di Giovanni in Podgorica

we play this game here," one source said. "We have 10."

Montenegro is important to Mr Milosevic. The Yugoslav Navy is based in the Bay of Kotor, in addition to an estimated 12.000 Yugoslav troops, 80 per cent of whom come from

The police force - most of whom are loyal to the President - number around 10,000 and includes a Special Force di-vision of around 2,400. In addi-tion, most Montenegrans are

Some residents are not waiting to find out how the power struggle will be resolved.

Maja has been crying for three days. She is worried about her mother, who arrived on the last domestic flight here from Belgrade just in time for the first airstrike last week, and who stoically refuses to leave Montenegro, no matter what happens. Maja is worried about the daily, anti-Western and pro-Milosevic rallies in Podgorica which grow more and more frenzied, and the fact that Sky News and CNN were taken off

ON OTHER PAGES Yagoslav defiance... Ground war. The refugee trade.

Journey into extle... Doubts in America...

Rosemary Righter.

Blair's burder

the air and replaced by Serbian state television. Today, Maja gets her Croatian transit visa and is leaving the country as soon as she can.

Most people feel that Mon-tenegro will eventually go the way of the other former Yugoslav republics and opt for independence. But they know it will not be without a fight. Mr Milosevic has lost Slovenia. Croatia and Bosnia and if he loses Kosovo, the Serb holy place, it is inevitable that he will want to salvage Montenegro. The question is when.

Some people here believe a coup d'état will take place within 48 hours, others say that it will not happen while Mr Milosevic is embroiled in Kosovo.

The Government will change," says Zoran Zizic, the Vice President of SNP, the pro-Milosevic party, adding that the change of army commanders was a first step. "But now is not the time. We will be elected democratically, and we will get in, because people here are

'My worry is that these [prodemonstrations will move from gatherings in front of the American Cultural Centre and go further into town, which will provocate the police," said Mr Djunarovic. "But you will know something has happened when you see tanks in front of the presidential building. Then you can join all of us lighting in the Montenegran Army."

Serbs wipe out rebel resistance in two-pronged onslaught

THE Kosovo Liberation Army, the rebel force fighting for independence from Yugo slavia, is only days away from complete military destruction after a fierce Serb offensive in the province. According to military sources and members of the guerrilla army on the Macedonian and Albanian borders, lightly armed rebels have suffered huge casualties and face defeat unless they can receive re-But others are not so sure. inforcements, ammunition and heavy weapons capable of taking on Serb armour.

The KLA are reported to be retreating to their hideouls in mountain caves in the far north of the region as Serb armour pushes them out of most cities and towns.

Poor weather in recent days has hampered airstrikes on the 400 tanks the Serbs are believed to be using in Kosovo. Sources say they have driven the KLA from the vital Dreznica triangle west of Pristina. The main battle now is reported to be further south, at Malisevo, where KLA units are massed. Serb forces were last night said to be manoeuvring to cut them off from east and west.

Daniel McGrory in Macedonia and Sam Kiley in Albania predict defeat for the KLA guerrillas

A senior source for the Or-ganisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe said last night. There are two wars going on simultaneously Kosovo. Milosevic wants to cleanse the ethnic Al-banians and will let his paramilitary gangs take care of that. His main aim in the time he has left is to deal with the

"He will drive them back to the mountains and then attempt to seal them in there. He knows he can't defeat them in such terrain, but he wants to push them out of the population centres, and in this he appears to be successful.

The best estimates are that the KLA now has 40,000 men. The majority are no more than village militias, defending their own homes as they swore to do. They are lightly armed and no match for the Serb

Certainly the bedraggled and demoralised forces reaching northern Albania confirmed reports of a defeat. Exhausted and bloodfed in battle, two young men lay in Kukes hospital recovering from wounds, the result of a Serb ambush on one of their guerrilla routes for smuggling arms into Kosovo. Six others died when Serb special forces cut them down in a brief burst of gunfire.

Azen Syla, a founder mem-ber of the KLA, told The Washington Post recently that the KLA faced defeat unless it was supplied with anti-tank weapons and other equipment.

Many military analysts have been surprised at the lack of foresight Nato has shown in not being able to predict that the Serbs would step up their campaign against Ko-sovo's Albanians during the airstrikes. They were also dismayed that there were no plans for safe areas in the country, nor any real preparations by humanitarian agencies for a refugee problem.

Shadowy groups linked to killings

BY MICHAEL EVANS, DEFENCE EDITOR

HIGHLY secret groups state security organisation are helping to mastermine the killing of ethnic Albani ans in Kosovo, according to British defence intelligence officials.

One key figure named yesterday was Franki Simatovic. said to bave a long history of "organis-ing, arming and directing" Serb paramilitaries in the Bosnian war, and who was also now active in Kosovo. An intelligence official said: "He is a shadowy individual and we have no picture of him.

As well as looking after the paramilitaries, which now included the notorious Tigers, led by Arkan the indicted war criminal whose real name is Zeljko Raznatovic — Simatovic also ran a "highly secretive and specialised group" called the JSO. This was a force of about 5.000 men recruited almost exclusively from army special forces. The official said: "This group is well trained, well motivated and very dangerous. They also act as Milosevic's Praetorian Guard," The Interior Ministry police had about 5.000 personnel in Kosovo, commanded by Major General Lukic. They had a heavily armed specialised group within them called the

"They are the police as-sault troops and are armed and equipped ... with mor-tars, heavy machineguns and armoured personnel carriers," the intelligence

The PJP was the "backbone of Serbia's control in the province and has been responsible for the majority of the atrocities". It was commanded by Lleuten-ant-Colonel General Ste-

Another fearsome organisation was the SAJ, a counter-terrorist learn.

Forgotten that Easter Monday's the last day to buy a PEP?

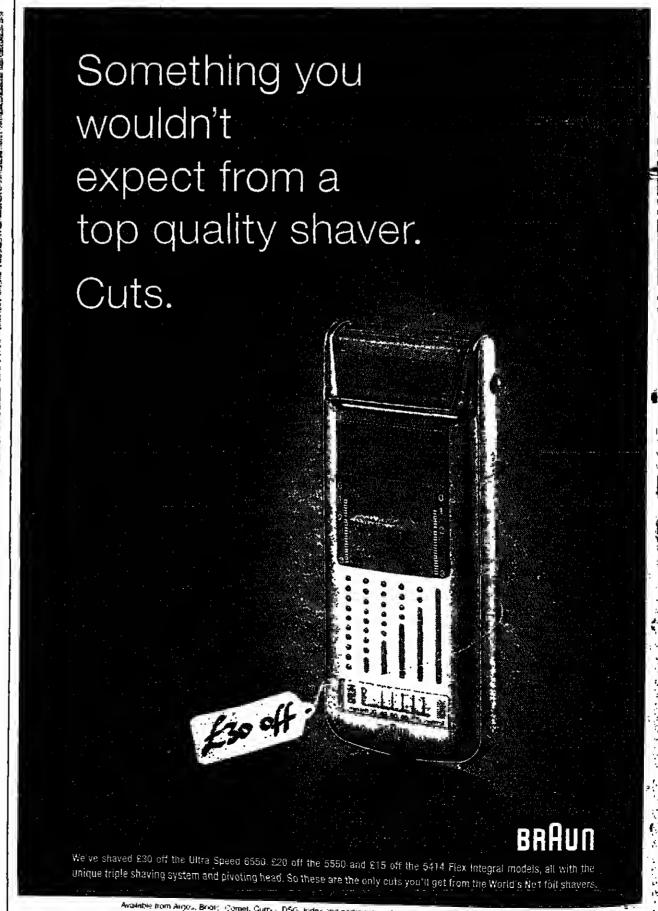

Don't worry, we'll forget it's a holiday.

For those of you that still haven't opened a PEP, selected Abbey National branches will be open on Good Friday and Easter Monday (2nd & 5th April). So, if you don't want to miss out, call us for details of a branch that will be open near you. (Lines are open Friday, Sunday and Monday, 10am to 4pm and Saturday, 8am to 4pm.)

Of course this won't be the end of tax-free savings, since we are now offering a full range of ISAs. For PEPs, however, we could be your last chance.

> 0800 30 20 30 ABBEY NATIONAL® with the same lat advantages as the new account. PEP and ISA products are provided by Abbey National PEP and ISA Managets Limited, which is regulated by IMRO.

BALKANS WAR: THE HOSTAGES

Villagers claim credit for ambush

Daniel McGrory in Staro Nagoricane hears conflicting boasts from local three Americans. Their mission is regarded as too vital and sensitive for them to have broken their cover.

EXECUTIV

militias about who was responsible for the attack on a Nato patrol slavia, where he claims they handed the beaten Americans over to Serb troops.

STANDING in the shadows of a 13th-century church, the Serb farmer points proudly to the hilltop 200 yards away where he and his fellow villagers claim to have captured the three American soldiers. He was not alone yesterday in making such a boast.

In the ribbon of hamlets that runs along the largely un-marked border, scores of Serb men were taking credit for the ambush which has severely embarrassed Nato. Aleksandar Serasimovic, 36, showed the tyre tracks that the Humvee Jeep allegedly made as it veered into a field and past a 2 ft-high stone that marks Serbian territory. He gestured to where he claims the reconnaissance team strayed some 200 yards onto enemy ground.

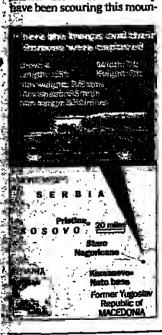

"The Nato troops asked for war. We gave it to them. We have guns, we are organised and this is just the start. There will be more ambushes," the former soldier said.

Village militias like his in Staro Nagoricane said they had been told to grab Nato forces if they could. This was easy." he said. "The Americans left the rest of their convoy and we were waiting for

His boasts could not be veriabduction Nato commanders at their base at Kumanovo, four miles south, were still investigating precisely where the Americans were seized. They did insist that the convoy was "several kilometres" inside Macedonia when its last radio burst gave a warning that the Humvee was coming under small-arms fire. Using a code, the team said that they were trying to pull back but were surrounded, and the radio went dead. The patrol should have

UN peacekeeping operation. When the airstrikes began, the Americans were told to paint their white UN vehicles green and step up their border surveillance to protect Nato guns dug in a few miles south. One senior Nato officer said last night: "The tracks they pa-tainous and rugged area for months as part of a former troi weave back and forth on the border with Serbia and it's easy to get confused and stray. If they did, it was an accident." Only one road leads into Staro Nagoricane, past a foot-ball field and a clutch of dilapidated apartments and then onto the exquisitely carved St George's church that sits in a small walled orchard. Directly opposite, Dr Kratina Haueva stood outside the village clinic watching as another Humvee reconnaissance patrol passed. They have been busier than ever since the three were captured. I suppose it's to show they're not scared."

Her assistant, Slagana Ilieva, sneered at the passing con-voy and shouted insults. They should not be here. They are killing civilians and should go home. I hope we capture more

It is impossible to trace the frontier accurately as there are foothills of the Koziak mountains that straddle the two countries.

The Macedonian flag flies over the village police station that is tucked behind the church, but almost every one of the 250 families living here still prefer to think of themselves as part of Yugoslavia.

Inside the white walled police station, the local commandant shows on the map where he thinks the Humvee was captured. He would not say if his men chased the abductors across the Serbian frontier. which is less than five minutes walk from the back garden of the police station.

The young officer simply shrugged his shoulders when asked if his force was investigating whether any of the villagers were responsible for the kidnap. "That is Nato's

The hatred towards Nato is all too obvious here. Graffiti are scrawled on most buildings. Children spit at the pass-ing convoys. Old women scream bloodcurdling threats and farmers give the Serb salute to passing patrols.

Zikic Kuzmanovski, 36, felt cheated he hadn't been part of the ambush. "If I had got to them, I would have strangled them with my two hands. Nato is worse than Hitler for us. The Americans must know they can never defeat us be-cause we know these hills."

Cook posts his regrets on Web

By MICHAEL BINYON

ROBIN COOK, the Foreign Secretary, yesterday sent an Internet message to the people of Serbia - addressing them directly in Serbo-Croat — telling them how deeply he regretted that two old friends and allies against the Nazis were now on different sides. He promised that Nato would take "enormous care" to ensure that Serb civilians suffered as little as possible.

His message, on the Foreign Office website. spoke of British gratitude and respect for Serb courage in fighting the Nazis. Nato idid not want this action and it was not intended to Jundermine Serbia, it said.

Serbs nor Albanians can live in peace". He recognised that this had caused considerable misery and stress for all Serbs. "I regret that. But I assure you that we shall continue to take enormous care to ensure that civilians suffer as little as possible." Mr Cook said be had used the Internet because the state controlled the media in Serbia. The Foreign Office said that its website had attracted 10,000 hits from Serbia and Montenegro since the Nato

LINKS

Patrols continue yesterday near the area where a Nato vehicle was ambushed

Hostages did not stray, say friends of the three American soldiers being held by the Serbs last night said that the men were experienced and highly trained and they could not believe that they would have blundered across the border into hostile territory (Dami-an Whitworth writes). Captain John Clearwater, spokesman for the 1st Infantry Division, said the men had trained for six months for the peacekeeping mission. Jim Stone, the father of one of three captured men. Staff Sgt Christopher J. Stone, said: "We're pretty much in shock. We didn't know anything was going

William Cohen, the Defence Secretary, said the men were considered "illegally detained", not prisoners of war. "We will do everything to secure their safe return." David Leary, the White House National Security Council spokesman, said: "We're thankful that the servicemen are alive. Clearly the signs that they have been mistreated are very

RAML DVD hardware

Microsoft Digital Sound 80 Speaker

Tift from side to side and up and down to control

49.59

£69.59

79

Graphics Card fully equipped with 12th RAM and the legendary Woodce? chipset from 30th for outstanding 30 acceleration and unique

Sound Card Professional quality soun

game. MODEL: Microsoft

System

NEW

EDUCATION

Aircom GCSE & A-Level Range

Improve your chances of gaining those all important grades with this range of terraines for CCSE and A-Level. Titles available: A-Level Mattin, Biology, Physics, Geoptophy, Chemistry, G. Royald, Chemistry, G. Royald, G.

Children's

FREE

£19.59

free serve

NEW NEW SAVE ELO pi pare. Nas C34.99. NEW 305

Force Feedback Joystick
Hold the Winghlan Force.
MODE: Logitech Winghlan Force.
Was 699.99.

Nato destroys Tito bridge in city of culture

FAMILIES living near the with the famous bridge, which bridge over the Danube in the is named after Tito since his northern city of Novi Sad that partisans repaired it towards was destroyed by cruise misthe end of the war. Blowing up siles early yesterday morning spoke of their terror as they the most graceful bridge in one of Serbia's most moderate awoke to the sound of thunder towns has done little to win Nato any new friends. and mayhem.

since yesterday was her birthday. Ironically, when she was born in 1941. German air raids against Novi Sad began just five days later, and she confessed she felt a shared destiny

Stana Krasavac, who lives Novi Sad is the capital of the in an old town house just 600ft from the blast, described how northern Vojvodina region. where the Serbs actually conshe thought an earthquake had hit them. "The lurniture stitute under half of the population. It is famous for its theatre was ratiling, the doors were and arts, and until yesterday thrown open and every winhad a town hall where Presidow in the house was broken." dent Milosevic's Socialists and It was an especially mide awakening for Mrs Krasavac. the far-right radicals were on the wane.

"For the first time in my life, I am convinced that stupidity prevails," said Mrs Krasavac's daughter, Biljana, an economist. "When something like this happens to your family, then you begin to feel really angry." If democracy is ever to flourish in Serbia. as Nato avows it must, then jemsoning families like the Krasavacs is not a great start. Biljana described how her mother had to pull her 95-year-old grandmother, Olga. from her wheelchair between the first and second cruise missile blasts, and no windows.

"We knew something was wrong when our Scottish terrier, Vanja, started running in circles and going crazy." she said, thanking the 18in thick walls of the 1920s house for probably sparing the family from injury.

drag her into a corridor with

As Belgraders anxiously looked towards their many crossings of the Sava and the

The bridge over the Danube at Novi Sad destroyed by Nato's cruise missiles. Locals at first thought the town had been struck by an earthquake vital Pancevo bridge - Serbia's largest — spanning the Danube. President Milosevic. made his boldest move towards ending the airstrikes: bringing ethnic Albanian leadthruhim Rugova to his White Palace residence in Belgrade. State television showed the two men shaking hands after their noon meeting, and Mr Milosevic's office issued a statement describing how both leaders were "commined to working out a political solution, Vuk Draskovic, federal Deputy Prime Minister, said the encounter was good news. 'We're continuing to look for a political dialogue, but bombing and all aggression must first stop," he said. Local political commentators said Mr Milosevic and Mr Rugova were in the same posicion, with both vulnerable to being ousted or even assassinated if they make eration Army mushroomed their electorates. Mr Rugova is supposed to command the support of 98 per cent of ethnic Albanians, but his standing has declined as the Kosovo Lib-

ce Track · Price Track · Price Track · Pr

Value Basics Bulk White Tiles Pack of 72

(150mm x 150mm)

Unbeatable Prices Guaranteed Prices We constantly check 1000s of prices. Buy any Price Track product and R creatier anywhere else Within 14 days

RCD Adapter

Micro Lite Lawnmower

2Bcm Cutting Width

Value Basics Brilliant White Emulsion Silk or Matt Malmo 3-Piece Pine Furniture 5et

YOU'RE BETTER OFF AT HOMEBAS

www.homebase.co.uk Thursday 1ST APRIL 8AM - 10PM* . GOOD FRIDAY 8AM - 7PM . SATURDAY 8AM - 8PM . EASTER SUNDAY SCOTLAND OPEN 9AM - 6PM. ENGLAND AND WALES CLOSED . EASTER MONDAY 8AM - 7PM. 14 days on a product equivalent to a Price Track product, we'll refund the difference. Price Track products are highlighted in:

Homebase

Pansies

Pack of 6

Large Plants

£19.99 Garden Tool Set Dulux Exclusives Coloured Emulsion 2-5 litre Choice of colours

£3.98 Garden Timbercare 5 litre Choice of colours

> Value Basics 16oz Steel Shaft Claw Hammer

EXTRA POINTS SAVE UP TO 10% COSTS YOU NOTHING

SAVES YOU ELES * SEE INSTORE FOR FULL DETAILS

http://oubs.open.ac.uk

Veteran of rock inspires songs against bombs

By TOM WALKER

THE inspiration behind Belgrade's daily songs-againstbombs protest is a veteran of the Yugoslav rock scene.

Dejan Sukic.

A lifetime resident of the city, Mr Sukic, 39, said yesterday that he felt so betrayed by America, the country whose music he once loved, that he never wants to go there again. "I think they are right behind the Kosovo Liberation Army." he said, horrified by Naio's destruction of the bridge over the Danube in Novi Sad. one of his favourite towns, "I dread to think what they will do next."

Come what may. Mr Sukic vows the protests will contin-ue until the bombs stop, and then there will be "the biggest celebration of all. The trouble is. I don't think they will stop. I don't see an end lo it".

Much of the music thudding out during the protest was written during the collapse of Yugoslavia, and was often inspired by events elsewhere. Many tunes date from the Eighties, when Yugoslavia was the Eastern bloc country to be envied. The irony is that many of the songs now have an additional poignancy as the missiles and bombs rain down and the air raid

I want to sing some more, because life comes only once, is Mr Sukic's best known number, and has become a lunchtime favourite for the tens of thousands of Belgraders who now flock to Republic Square armed with often comic banners mocking the West and its leaders.

Another crowd favourite, by Boro Djordjevic and Fish Soup, is entitled Aeroplane. I want to break your wings. It was written long before the era of the Stealth bomber: Mr Djordjevic wanted to get the pilot of the aircraft that was taking his girlfriend away.

The whole thing is getting out of conrol, and I honestly don't think the people in the West know what they are doing," said Mr Sukic, "For us, it's put the new world order in a totally different perspective. It seems that America doesn't want individualism in the world any more — it's creating societies seduced by luxury into ignorance. And on the other side of that they start supporting totalitarian causes like the KLA, whose politics are based on Stalinism.

"An American pilot has no idea of what he's doing to us." Mr Sukic said. "If they lived here, they'd see il pretty differently."

The fast track management certificate

Now you can achieve a Professional Certificate in Management in one year, with the Open University Business School. The certificate covers managing people, operations, information, resources and finance.

As world leaders in supported distance learning, we offer everything you need to make learning effective and enjoyable. You work in your own time, at your own pace. But your personal tutor is only a phone call away, and you can meet fellow students through study groups and residential schools.

All OUBS courses are backed by 30 years' expenence in distance learning. Our methods and materials were given the highest rating of 'Excellent' by the Higher Education Funding Council for England.

For details of our courses return the coupon. Or call 08700 100311 quoting code B967L.

Send Io: Course Sales and Development Centre, PO Box 625,

(! Please send me your Management Development prospectus

__ Date of birth_____ 19 OUBS Hotline 08700 100311

THERE'S NO SUBSTITUTE FOR THE OU EXPERIENCE

MODEMS

FROM UNDER £60

MODULAR TECHNOLOGY

Safety zone plan for limited invasion

Charles Bremner in Brussels and Michael Evans, Defence Editor, on Nato's options for going in ing for action to halt Serbian massacres. Nato planners are reviewing options for a limited ground operation in Kosovo to secure a safe zone for civilians. General Wesley Clark, the Nato Supreme Commander in Europe, confirmed the discussions were under way on a "sanctuary" plan — a scheme that would spare the allies the burden of a full-scale ground war. But he said: "t have heard these discussions. l will not discuss any details or a ome line, or what such a mission might be."

His remarks reinforced the view that a limited zone operation could prove feasible and far faster than the massive deployment of ground forces that would be required for an

The prospect of Nato troops fighting their way into land-locked Kosovo appeareds to be looming closer as the Yugoslav armed forces continued their scorched-earth campaign. Western governments continue to treat an all-out ground war as a virtual taboo, given the military conclusion that it would take at least 200,000 troops, plus hundreds of aircraft and tanks, to con-Front Yugoslav forces in (iremely hostile terrain. A safe areas policy, if it involved forced entry into Kosovo, would still require a large number of troops, military sources emphasised yester-

If the Nato plan were to seize a small piece of territory in Kosovo and guard its perimeter with troops, tanks and artillery, modern Western military doctrine would make it imperative for Nato countries to commit at least 100,000 troops for the task - not because they would necessarily need that number for the initial operation, but to sustain it for a long period.

This is why an invasion force to take the Yugoslav Army on in a high-intensity yar has been effectively pismissed as unrealistic, because of the numbers of troops that would be needed long campaign.

Nato unquestionably has the overwhelming technological advantage over the Yugoslav Army, and with air superiority - or, ideally, air supremacy - Nato would defeat President Milosevic's forces. However, a war in Yugosla-via would not just be about numbers and technology. Other factors, all in the Yugoslav Army's favour, would be terrain and weather and, above all, national motivation. The pilots in the Battle of Britain defeated the mighty armada of German bombers because each flyer was fighting for the survival of his country.

When Nato planners study the military intervention opthese factors. The required troop numbers in an ideal battle strategy for Kosovo would have to be based on about a ten-to-one advantage for the invader, not the traditional three-to-one for a war fought on tank-friendly flat terrain.

However. Nato's huge technological advantage would bring those numbers down. In the Gulf War, the US-led coalioon never achieved arrywhere near the three-to-one ratio, because the Iraqis had a million

But in the desert the standoff technology of the American bombers and advanced long-range artillery reduced the Iraqi advantage in numbers to such an extent that the odds changed dramatically.

Kosovo, however, would be different, and as one military source said it would depend on the length of the campaign. Britain's military strategy is predicated on having the capability to sustain two armoured brigades in two separate operations at any one time - one engaged in a high-intensity conflict lasting no more than six months, and, the other involved in a permanent peace enforcement mission, with units rotating, such as it already has in Bosnia, Most of the other Nato countries could

Even the United States works on the basis that no more than 11 per cent of its armed forces should be opera-not match this.

⁶ A force to take the Yugoslav Army on has been effectively dismissed as unrealistic?

tional at a time. Despite all these reasons for rejecting troop intervention. Nato is clearly considering a middle option — the safety zones idea.

But if this is to be imposed against the wishes of the Bel-grade leadership, a Nato force would have to be considerably larger and more heavily armoured than the proposed 28.000-strong peace implementadon force that would have been sent into Kosovo had Belgrade signed the Rambouillet

HOW NATO COULD SET UP A SAFE HAVEN WHERE THE EXTRA TROOPS WILL COME FROM THE AIR COVER Crucial for providing class air support to THE ROUTE IN agrebushers THE THREAT FROM THE HILLS FORCES NEEDED For a lumited safe navon man eded to keep operation going for extended scried on troop-rotation Treopradine American Let Armeores Division WHAT THEY ARE UP AGAINST Reserves : 460.000 KEY NATO WEAPON ARMY roops: 90,000 AS90 155MM SELF-PROPELLED GUN Tunies 1.270 ArtiBery: 1,315 Combet abcrast, 226

For example, Britain's lead ing battle group in the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia - about 4.800 troops has only 14 Challenger tanks. A fully equipped British armoured brigade of about 8,000 troops, preparing for an opposed intervention, would need nearly 120 Challengers. This indicates the scale of the military expansion that would be required, even for a safe

If Belgrade made it clear that such a strategy was out of the question. Nato could not contemplate going in without the heaviest armour. If the plan was to grab limited territory, it is possible that some 30,000 to 40,000 troops, profrom the air. move into southern Kosovo from Macedonia and Albania.

But the single road from Macedonia into Kosovo passes through deep gorges and tunnels in 6,000ft mountains. This would leave vehicles and men highly vulnerable to small Serbian units. Similar obstacles apply on the Albanian frontier. Airborne operations would also be severely hampered in a mountainous region where Tito's guerrillas played havoc with German forces during the Second World War.

Ex-envoy says it is time for 'havens'

BY MICHAEL BINYON DIPLOMATIC EDITOR

A FORMER American Ambassador to Croatia has called on Nato to set up safe areas in Kosovo to protect the ethnic Albanians from Serb attacks. Peter Galbraith said Nato was failing in its primary humanitarian and political mission. which was to protect the people of Kosovo. Nato had, therefore, to contemplate further action: the use of ground troops. But, he told BBC Newsnight, by the time such a force was assembled. "ethnic cleansing" might have been completed and the people of Kosovo gone. He proposed an interim - the creation of havens in Kosovo for the refugees as a prelude to full-scale military action to expel Presi-dent Milosevic's troops. Meanwhile he said, Nato should begin to look as though it was going to use ground troops, as this would change Mr Milosevic's calculations.

MODEL: MII-300 PC PLAN – OWN THIS PC PACKAGE FROM ONLY £13.27

PRICE - WE CAN'T BE BEATEN

radust must be new, complete and in stock. It's di

PER MONTH

Mr Galbraith, now a lecturer at the National War College in Washington, insisted that, despite President Clinton's promise oot to use ground troops, "this is war things change".

One consequence would have to be a Western change of attitude towards Kosovan

"If ground troops went in to Kosovo, then it would be absurd for this province to re-main in Serbia or Yugosiavia contrary to the will of the vast majority of its citizens ... the outcome has to be an independent state."

free) serve

FREE

UNLIMITED

INTERNET ACCESS

DOONS ON-LINE WHILE

A Friend is the one thing he needs right now

Many of the animals rescued by the RSPCA have never known a moment's kindness in their lives. Abused, neglected or abandoned - the one thing they need more than anything else

For just £3 a month by standing order, you can become a Friend of RSPCA and help us to give them the love and care

As a Friend you'll receive Animal Life magazine RSPCA Annual Report * enamel badge * regular updates and

QUOTING REFERENCE 0151

or complete and return the coupon below Yes, I want to become a Friend of the RSPCA. Please send me my free non pack. Once completed send to: RSPCA, FREEPOST, Bristol BS38 7AJ. Please don't send any money now.

THE AIMS OF THE RSPCA ARE TO PREVENT CRUELTY AND PROMOTE KINDNESS TO ANIMALS

99NF01 015 I

BALKANS WAR: EXODUS TO BRITAIN

British lorries used to smuggle refugees

BRITISH lorry drivers are being used by gangs to smug-gle Kosovan refugees across the Channel every night.

Many drivers are the unwitong victims of an operation that involves slipping asylum-seekers into the backs of their lurries at Channel ports and European service stations. But some charge money — up to El.500 — to take groups of refugees to Britain.

A gunfight between rival groups of traffickers left one Kosovan dead and three injured in Calais earlier this week. The shots were fired after two groups of traffickers began disputing a payment received from a refugee who had been put on a lorry bound for Britain, a French investigator said last night. Olivier Brachet, director of the French Council for Refugees and the Right to Asylum. said: "We know there is a huge business in getting people across Europe and that lorries are the main means of transport. A lot of drivers from all countries are on the take,"

A weekly total of between 250 and 500 Kosovans are anempting to reach Britain from the ferry port of Calais. Others use the Channel Tunnel or other ports. But these numbers are likely to escalate as the impact of the war spreads across Europe,

A French police officer, who.

Channel port drivers profit from trade in human cargo from Kosovo.

reports Adam Sage in Calais asked to remain anonymous. said: "We have the Albanian mafia here in Calais. These gangs know which lorry drivers will take the Kosovans. They charge whatever the refugees have ... and the driver gets a cut of that. Many of the drivers involved are British. The traffickers know that Britons are less likely to be stopped at Dover."

On Wednesday in Calais there was clear evidence of the refugee trade, with about 40 Kosovans waiting to slip across the Channel. As night fell, three of them huddled in a shadowy corner of the vast lorry park beside the port. In hesitant English, they told of their desperation to get out of France — which they see as pro-Serb — to reach Britain, "a good country, on our side".

They had left Prizren, south of Pristina, as Nato bombing began and travelled to Vlore in western Albania. There they paid a middleman a total of £5,200 to get them across the Adriatic and find them a European lorry driver to transport them to Calais. "We will be in Britain tomorrow, said one of the three, hinting that he had done a deal with a driver at the French police had spotted the trio, but did not try to stop them, "Unless we see them getting into the lorry we can do lay (Adrian Los on behalf of 15 leading nothing," said an officer. "The powers that be do not want us to clamp down."

PLEAS FOR REFUGEE AID

A man in a black leather coat walked away as soon as the police car pulled up. "We know he's one of the traffickers," said the officer.

Some of the British drivers waiting to cross the Channel said they knew of colleagues involved in the trade. Bob Hodges, 33, from Manchester. said: "I was offered £1,300 to take a load of Kosovans across last month. I was at a service station in Belgium when a man in a white BMW drove up and said I could have the money in cash, I refused."

Barry Lawton, 51, from Oldham, said he had been the victim of a plot involving Italian police. An officer flagged him down outside Milan. "When I got to Dover, t was stopped by the customs. There were 36 Kosovans in the back.

☐ No arrests: Police in England and Wales have been told not to arrest Kosovan refugecs illegally smuggled in by lorries (Richard Ford and Stephen Farrell write). The aim is to give people claiming to be Kosovo Albanians the benefit of the doubt" and stop them filling police cells. Any illegal immigrant daiming to from Kasova should go to the Immigration and Nationality Directorate in Croydon,

Kosovan activists in London yesterday, including Syle Krasniqi, left, who says that he plans to join the KLA

London provides uneasy haven for young victims of conflict

MILAH SEIDfU celebrated his 16th birthday alone in the back of a lorry while fleeing Kosovo for Britain. His parents spent all their savings to pay for their eldest son's escape, and had oo choice but to stay behind with the rest of their children.

The baby-faced Kosovan, who is living in a bedsit in Joanna Bale, Elizabeth Judge and who lost his job after his newspaper was banned. His father paid for him to be taken by Stephen Farrell on exiles in UK east London, has not heard from his family for two months. Terrified that they are among the thousands who have been murdered by the Serbs, he spends his days scouring the newspapers for confirmation they are alive.

"It was too dangerous for me to stay," he said, his expression etched with anxiety. "The Serb police would regularly beat me and my friends, demanding our ID papers. Our schools were closed, our teachers imprisoned. My parents spent all their mooey sending me here to safety, but now I am very worried that they might be dead."

Milah is just one of hundreds of Kosovan children whose parents sent them to Britain alone as the crisis escalated over the past few mooths. Most of them are teenage boys, although there are increasing numbers of girls and some children as young as eight. Those under 16 are sent to

to look after themselves are condemned to the isolation of bedsits. All are sent to schools where they struggle to keep up with lessons. Most of them are given vital additional support, including foster families by local author-

English lessons, by Albanian Youth Action, a new charity set up to deal with the crisis.

The project manager, Caro-line Ffrench Blake, said: They are all very vulnerable and desperately need support. We give advice and provide social activities for them so that they can get together and not feel so isolated, but our resources are very limited."

At the charity's headquarters near The Oval in South London yesterday. Mon Kurtti, 14, told of his mixed feelings at being in Britain: "I am obviously pleased to be safe, but I won't be happy until my family are safe too. I spoke to them a week ago, but have heard nothing since."

Others have similar stories to tell. Resul Sadriu, 16, has not heard from his family for three months after travelling to Britain alone by lorry.

All the boys are dominated by fears for their families, but also by their anger at what the Serbs have done. Arde Kelmendi, 15, is the paid for him to be taken by taxi across Europe on a three day trip to Britain with two other boys. He said: Nato should have attacked before and sent in ground troops. We just want to return to out homes and live in peace." The boys are slowly being integrated into an estimated 30.000-strong Kosovan community in north and northwest London which includes pockets of political activists. A group of activists meet in a former car-wash in Golders Green. Men in their thirties sit huddled in groups talking in low voices. The walls of the dingy meeting place are deco-rated with pictures of KLA leaders and a radio broadcasts in their native language.

Ooe of the activists. Syle Krasniqi, 26, said: "I will go as soon as I get the chance. If I get word within the hour. I will go and fight with the

Mon Kurtti, centre, is in the UK but fears for his family

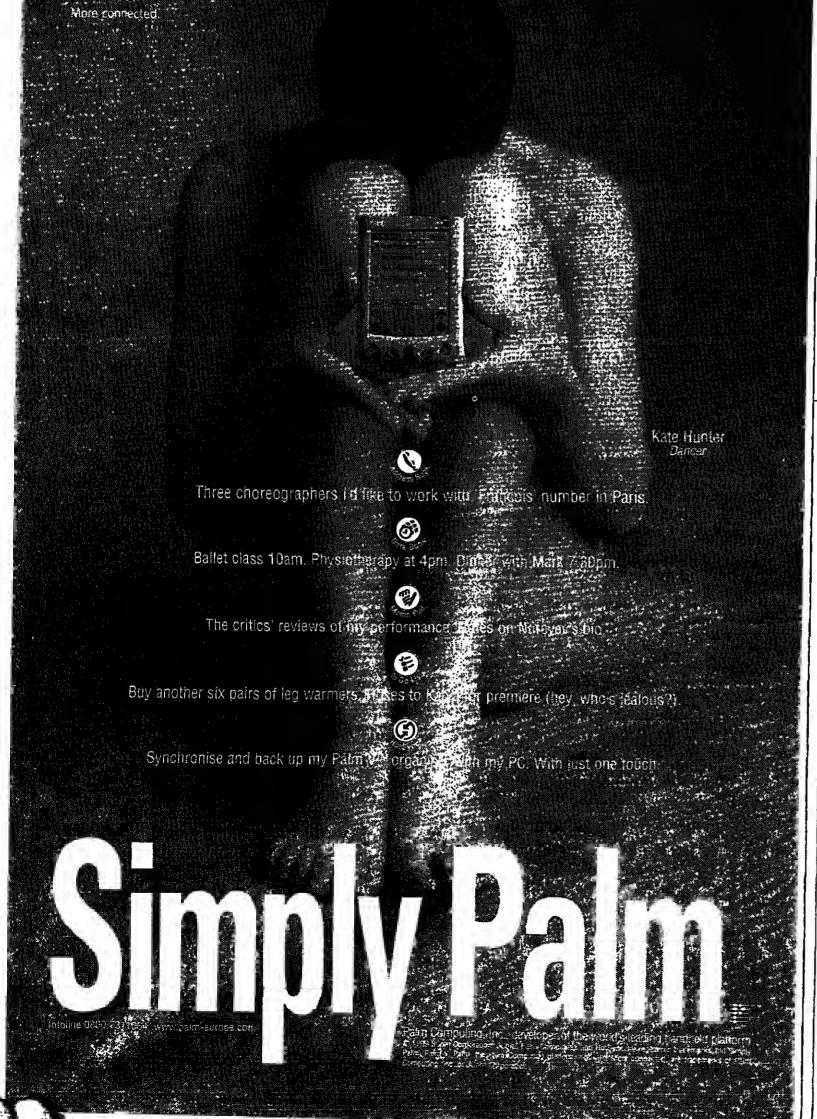

AT HARRODS THIS EASTER THERE'S AN EGG WITH YOUR NAME ON IT.

Whether you're Sarah or Sophie, Andrew or Antoinette, Harrods can personalise an egg for you, or your loved ones. There are over 60 different eggs to choose from, in every size and variety imaginable. We've got milk chocolate ones, white chocolate ones, dark chocolate ones, even layered and marbled ones. So visit Harrods this Easter and, just for once, put all your eggs in one basket.

Harrods Ltd., Knightsbridge, London SWIN 7XL, Tel: 0171-730 1231.

Refugees herded down track of despair

THEY were forced at gunpoint to walk two by two for miles yesterday along the railway track. About 10,000 refugees picked their way along the narrow rails as the Serbs speeded up their evacuation of Pristina by herding everyone they could find on to trains that ended their journey in a minefield.

Masked Serb gurmen told those families on board they had five minutes to start walking or the carriages would be shunted into a siding and they would be shot.

A blind man tapped his stick on the edge of the rails, clinging to his daughter's arm. She carried her own child on her back. Nobody dared step off the track to help her.

off the track to help her.

An aid worker turned away, appalled at the sight of this miserable trail that seemed to have no end as it trudged towards the border crossing at Blace yesterday. "We thought such things ended with Hitler's Germany and this is Europe on the verge of the millennium." he said.

nium." he said.

Aid organisations cannot cope with the Increasing numbers pouring into Macedonia and there were moves last night to enlist the help of the 10.800 Nato troops here to prevent a humanitarian disaster.

After their precarious walk, the railway refugees have to scramble down a steep bank into a field where many of

Kosovans are being drivenfrom a hostile land to an unwelcoming one, writes Daniel McGrory in Blace them slept last night without shelter or sanitation. Arjeta Voglici, 22, staggered among the exhausted bodies

Arjeta Voglici, 22, staggered among the exhausted bodies asking if anyone had milk she could give her four-month-old daughter who was too weak with hunger to cry.

with hunger to cry.

Three local Red Cross officials stood helpless on the edge of the field, harangued by refugees who told them it had been 24 hours since they were given anything to eat or drink.

Aid organisations say there

Aid organisations say there is convincing evidence that the Serbs have embarked on an operation to evict all ethnic Albanians from the regional capital of Kosovo.

Lucas Mjaku, 52, a teacher, described how he, his wife and three daughters had been told to leave their home two nights ago and march to Pristina's main railway station. They could barely force their way on to the concourse because of the thousands in front of them.

thousands in front of them.
"We did not know where we were going. We were just shunted into carriages. There was hardly room to breathe
When the train stopped the Serbs showed us the mines

they had laid and told us not to leave the tracks until we were out of their country."

if the Serbs are ensuring it is impossible for the refugees to stay, then neighbouring governments like Macedonia's appear to be making it difficult for them to escape. Police are taking so long to let vehicles cross that by last night there was reported to be a 12-mile queue of cars. Many refugees simply abandoned their cars and walked. When they do get across, refugees are made to queue for hours to register at two makeshift tents on a scrap of wasteland and then pushed onto overcrowded buses.

International monitors said 10,000 refugees who had arrived in Albania earlier this week were simply put on buses and tipped over into Macedonia, which refused to take them. They remain in noman's-land.

The authorities in Skopje said they would take only 20,000 refugees. By last night more than 40,000 had already crossed into Macedonia. Another 30,000 are said to be on the road behind them.

Albanians are indignant that the authorities in Skopje have closed only schools used by their children for use as temporary shelters. One local Albanian leader said: "Everyone in Macedonia must help, not just our community. Where is the UN, the Red Cross and the rest?"

Aid organisations which have been caught unprepared were last night asking Nato to use one of its pilotless drone spy planes to pick out where the refugees are heading so they can move tents and food supplies.

Six trains arrived in a matter of hours at Blace yesterday and the authorities there have been told to expect many more today. The Macedonian authorities have not explained why the first train was turned back at the rail border. Only two Macedonian families were allowed off.

have here. burb-by. So with them all on that train. They are terrorists and we don't want them in Macedonia."

At the trackside in Volkovo, local villagers in this strong-hold of Serb nationalism jeered at the refugees. One man shouted: "I will burn them all on that train. They are terrorists and we don't want them in Macedonia."

As more refugees arrive, the fear is that local tensions between rival communities could ignite violence on this side of the border.

A senior monitor watching yesterday's arrivals said:
"This is what Milosevic wants— to destabilise the whole area. That could start here if we're not careful."

Middle classes join the exodus

By SAM KILEY IN MANICE ON THE ALBANIA-KOSOVO BORDER

THEIR expensive leather jackets soaked with rain, their pockets emptied, all evidence of their identities taken and burnt, Pristina's middle classes joined ordinary peasants as penniless European refugees yesterday.

pean refugees yesterday.

A damburst of people surged into Albania after the Albanian authorities stopped trying to register every refugee entering the country and relieved the mounting pressure caused by murder and robbery at the hands of Serbs preying on a 60-mile backlog of misery.

"I can't believe I am here," said a computer programmer, who had his own company in Pristina. "This is something you see on the TV from Africa. This isn't something I thought that could ever happen to people like me.

"Stupid, really, but I have only just realised I am a real refugee as I crossed into Albania."

At 24, he had faced a successful future. He owned a VW Golf and a small busiTHE ALBANIA-KOSOVO BORDER

ness, and enjoyed the same sort of popular music as any other similar European. "I am ashamed to give my name. But I want you to tell my story. That way perhaps people in the rest of Europe can understand what it is like to be a normal citizen one day, and a refugee the

"John", who still has a family hiding in Pristina, was ordered to board a bus at a moment's notice. "The police came to my door and said, 'pack and leave'. It was as simple as that. Get out, or we'll kill you. They have been clearing everywhere. They have done it suburbly-suburb, very carefully. So far, so far as I know, with very little killing."

The result is the line of vehicles and refugees (those bussed out are dumped five miles short of the border and forced to walk.)

"I am so ashamed of myself... I somehow perhaps thought I was above anyone else, that it could not happen to me. Now I am alone, penniless. "John said.

The UK's leading

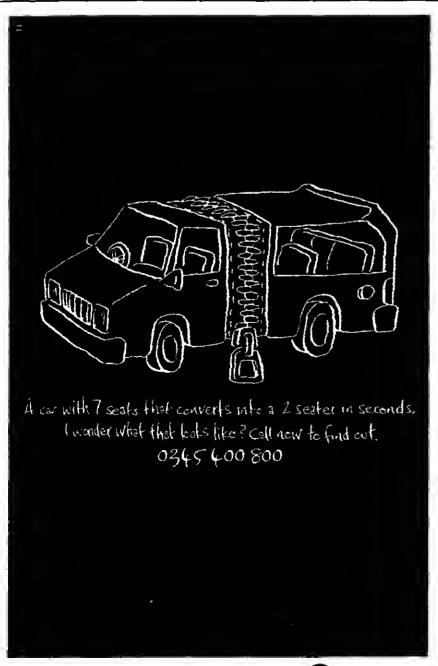

FREE

Internet service

DSG

free serve

www.freeserve.net

ZAFIRA. A work of genius.

 \subset

BALKANS WAR: DOUBTS IN AMERICA

Clinton rejected warnings of fiasco

PRESIDENT CLINTON was yesterday accused of going to war despite the repeated warn-ings of senior US intelligence and military advisers, who told him that bombing Serbia could lead to a humanitarian disaster and a military fiasco. As a dismayed America watched its captured soldiers Ben Macintyre being paraded on Serb television and the Kosovo conflict threatened to spiral into the worst foreign policy crisis of his presidency. Mr Clinton also found himself on the defensive on another, more familiar front, insisong that the im-peachment trial stemming from his relationship with the former White House trainee Monica Lewinsky was "nut a badge of shame".

For weeks before the Nato bombardment George Tenet. the CIA Director, was predicting that an air campaign might only exacerbate Serb brutality in Kosovo. At the same time, according to The Washington Post, several senior military advisers told the President that air power alone

Wrong-footed President is forced on to the defensive, writes would never halt the Serb of-fensive, a warning backed up by military intelligence.

Mr Clinton and his senior aides pressed ahead, wedded to a decision taken some six months ago that ground troops should not be deployed in Kosovo and would not need to be. With recrimination rising and morale dropping at the White House, in the space of a few days Mr Clinton's ione has changed from bullish exhortation to something close to pleading.

"It takes a while to get up and going," he said in televi-sion interview on Wednesday night. "I would urge all the American people, indeed the people in all the Nato nations, to stay with your leaders, to give us a chance." Senior administration spokesmen are becoming increasingly snappy and defensive, and earlier this week Mr Clinton felt it neces-

While House officials frankly admit that the scale and ferocity of the Serh ethnic cleansing campaign has wrong-footed policymakers, even though intelligence sources and military analysts said that President Milosevic was preparing an onslaught throughout the peace negotia-tions at Rambouillet, and that airstrikes might only trigger a wave of further bloodshed.

ed by The New York Times and completed just before airstrikes started, concluded that the Serbs planned to "ethnically cleanse" Kosovo of 1.8 mil-lion Albanians within a week. President Clinton, already haggard from a heavy cold and allergies, is said to be losing sleep over the deteriorating situation in Kosovo and devoting all his energy to the problem. Yet he has also managed to give the impression that his mind is still not fully on the job.

tmmediately after his meet-ing with senior advisers on Monday, Mr Clinton knocked off work for a sunny round of golf in Virginia, in a studied display of nonchalance entirely at odds with what he had just told key officials. The move also recalled former President Bush's much-criticised jaunt on a boat off Maine while sending troops to the in Serb captivity could under-Gulf War.

America was once more reminded of Mr Clinton's tendency to let his mind wander from affairs of state during an interview with CBS on Wednesday night, when he dis-missed his impeachment trial as a politically moovated plot. He declared he was "honoured" that the impeachment had given him the chance to defend the US Constitution. "I do not regard this impeachment vote as some great badge of shame. I do not," he said. The sight of bruised and beaten American servicemen mine the already lukewarm support for military action in Kosovo, while making any possible move to send in ground troops yet more remote. Mr Clinton has repeated that he still has no intention of using combat forces, without enfirely ruling out the option. Pentagon planners are belatedly exploring what few oprions there may be for using ground forces, including possible deployment of the crack 82nd Airborne Division to open a corridor or safety zone for fleeing refugees.

Mr Clinton knows well that political and public opposition to the use of ground forces would be fierce, and while publicly urging patience he is pressing Nato to step up the pace of airstrikes.

The Clinton Administration is tying itself in knots to avoid using the word "capture", when referring to the three sol-diers now in Serb hands, referring instead to their "abduc-tion" or even "kidnapping". Mr Clinton entered the fray in Kosovo with a conunitment that US foot soldiers would not be drawn in, but already he has found himself a captive sary to gather his top foreign policy officials for some spine-One intelligence report, citstiffening talk. "Guys, let's not lose sight of why we did this. Let's not forget who's responsible." he reportedly told his advisers.

US memories of Vietnam chip away at morale

FROM IAN BRODIE IN WASHINGTON

EVERY BATHROOM SUITE HALF PRICE AMERICA'S vast generation of baby-boomers has suffered jitters about war ever since Vietnam, the searing experience of their youth. Vietnam taught them to mistrust their Government's war aims and to be especially sceptical of "mission creep", the escalation of bombing sorties and troop levels. At the height of the Vietnam War. 450 body bags bearing the remains of American soldiers were flown home in one week.

As a result unease is widespread and reaction to an episode like yesterday's hostage-taking of three US soldiers or the loss of a F117 fighter-bomb er can be out of proportion. Risk avoidance has become a national obsession.

A classic example was Presi-dent Clinton's first military fiasco in Somalia six years ago, when army rangers were ambushed. Eighteen American soldiers were killed and some of their bodies were Mutilated. The uproar at home led to bipartisan congressional calls for a US withdrawal. Mr Clinton complied.

II does not help that Mr Clinton worked hard to evade the Vietnam draft. His lack of military service and the disdain he expressed then for the armed forces continue to undermine confidence in his authority now that he is Commander-in-Chlef.

It was a remarkable triumph for George Bush and Colin Powell to overcome American doubts sufficiently to build the international coalition that tackled Iraq in the Gulf War. But Mr Bush had credibility as a former navy pilot who had been shot down by the Japanese. And there was an unambiguous mission to defeat President Saddam Hussein. The present mission in Kosovo is less clear-cut.

Worse, perhaps. American forces have shrunk in size and are short of spare parts and recruits at all levels. Some retired officers point to a decline in warrior mentality among the forces. They blame the increase of women in uniform, although many perform to the highest standards.

Concerns are voiced, however, that the army sometimes seems determined to turn itself into one big, happy, diverse family. Last month a meeting of sergeants-major was addressed by Lieutenant-General Claudia Kennedy. army deputy chief of staff for intelligence. She lectured them on the army's new politeness policy, dubbed "COO". This stands for Consideration of Others and she made clear that those who did not join in COO sessions were "resistant and insensitive to others". Such behaviour would not be tolerated, she said.

Many in the audience. some with four combat tours behind them, were squirming and rolling their eyes.

SOBIGit comes in 5 PARTS

LAST CHANCE

Only the UK's leading fitted bathroom company can offer you value like this. Every single bathroom suite is half price, with many luxury extras reduced and everything taken care of to bring you complete peace of mind. From design to craftsman installation, joinery, electrics, plumbing and tiling, no detail is overlooked in Dolphin's total bathroom service.

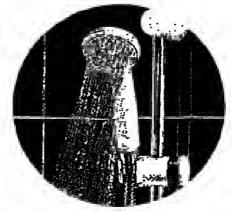

OVER 150 LOCAL SHOWROOMS NATIONWIDE TALK TO YOURS DIRECT ON MOST SHOWROOMS SHOWROOMS OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK: MON - FRI 10.00-5.30 SAT 9.00-5.30 SUN 11.00-5.00

TO REPAY UNTIL SUMMER '99' LUXURY BATHROOM EXTRAS LESS THAN 16 JET TURBO SPA WAS E470 PINE/MAHOGANY VANITY LIST NOW £155 GLASS SHOWER SCREEN Now£69

NOTHING

PLUS THIS WEEK WITH EVERY BATHROOM

WHEN YOU BUY A DOLPHIN FITTED BATHROOM

Without Tensing, would Hillary have scaled such heights?

Things get done when you've got the right partner. It was teamwork that got both men to the top. Likewise, we'll team up with your business. Supply you with all the information you need to select the most profitable trading partners. And make the best-informed credit decisions. So let's talk. Because with the right partner, who knows how high you'll climb?

Dun & Bradstreet

For more, information call 98/Tx 616/1979 or visit www. ignanobrad.c-flux

BALKANS WAR: PRIME MINISTER UNDER PRESSURE

Blair's heavy burden of war and peace

ony Blair reached the sanctuary of Chequers last night after the most gruelling fortnight any British prime minister has endured in decgles. At stake, war and peace in Ulster and the Balkans.

Although aides try to main-tin the image of the unflag-ging man of steel, he is exbusted and shows it. It would the slightly worrying if he were So immersed was Blair in the talks at Hillsborough Cas-tie on Wednesday that he gave in his bed - he was allocated the Queen's Bedroom — to a senior Unionist and worked through the night, occasionally dozing, in a part of the building known as Lady Grey's sitting room.

Another night without sleep. But it was the sort of discomfort to which he has become accustomed in recent days. The marathon talks did not produce the breakthrough hoped for, but the process survives.

Although Northern Ireland dominated Blair's time this week, his thoughts were frequently focused elsewhere. Two weekends ago, along with President Clinton and other Nato leaders, Blair reluctantly concluded that for the second time in his brief premiership he would have to order British troops into action.

Asking young men to risk their lives for their country is the heaviest of all responsibilities, and in Blair's case, probably one to which he gave little thought as he eyed first the prize of the Labour leadership. and then the Prime Ministership. There is nothing military in his background. His father Leo was a barrister and law lecturer. The harmlessly rebellious young Blair was re-quired during his first two years at Fettes College to be in the combined cades force. But his first decision involving a military matter saw him spurn the world of square-bashing and gun-stripping. Given the choice of carrying on in the CCF or joining an 'outside service" scheme, he opted to help the needy.

Last December's engage-Hussein Aides are was a skirmish compared with the lengthy and nervous about dangerous campaign on which Nato has now suggestions embarked in Belgrade. The burthat Blair is den of prosecuting a war would risking weighty enough on its own. But while burn-out? keeping himself briefed on the campaign in the Balkans, Blair has spent most of his waking hours this week desperately trying to stop the Ulster peace process collapsing, and most of last negotiating a deal on the future financing of the European Union. A weck ago yesterday Blair, after working through the night with his fellow leaders, emerged bleary-eyed at a press conference in Berlin to ennounce that he had secured Britain's £2 billion rebate.

Then he was into his aircraft heading for Llandudno to speak to the Welsh Labour conference and launch the campaign for the Welsh elections. Some advisers told him not to do it because he had too much on his plate. He insisted. Both he and Alastair Campbell, his press secretary, slept through-out the one-hour car journey from the airport to the conference centre. The speech itself was fairly flat. But when it came to the passage on the war. Blair roused himself and his audience. By the afternoon, he was in a BBC studio preparing and recording his nationwide address on the Kosovo crisis. He managed some sleep at the weekend but this past week the pace has been just as relentless. He arrived in Belfast on Monday night. The next morning he breakfasted

The Prime Minister has spent a gruelling fortnight juggling Kosovo and Ulster. Philip Webster reports lain in 1939-40 and Eden dur-

90 minutes at a school answering the Suez crisis. Then as ing questions, met all the minor parties involved in the peace process, saw the hus-band of the murdered lawyer Rosemary Nelson, met the Garvaghy Road residents' association before getting down to hours of negotiations, carrying on past midnight, with the main players. A special nerve with the Orange Order, spent centre to keep Blair in touch with the military action and other world leaders was set up in Hillsborough Castle, Soon he was back into his plane heading for London to report to MPs on the latest from both fronts, Question Time negotiated, he held brief meetings and three hours later he was back on the Tarmac, ready to return

Blair is good at putting subjects into compartments. As soon as he got up in Belfast on Wednesday, he had a 20 minute meeting about Kosovo with Campbell and John Sawers, his foreign affairs private secretary. George Robertson, the Defence Secretary. briefed them, Blair then called a meeting on Northern Ire-land, with Mo Mowlam joining the group. The Prime Minister travels light - on the trips back and forth to Ulster were himself, Sawers, Campbell, two secretaries and two duty clerks. "Everyone is focused. There is no need for pre-ides are nervous about suggestions that Blair is risking burn-out, pointing out that he often works just as hard on other, less public, matters. And the hours, although long, do not compare with the general election when 20-hour days were the norm for weeks. It is far too soon to judge ambles," an insider said.

Blair as a war leader. Only if and when British casualties start to happen bears up to the responsibility is weighing heavily on him. In Berlin he often looked preoccupied. His voice occasionally faltered as he that Alliance planes again flying in anger. He has insisted on personal briefings on the targets in Nato's sights. seeking reassurance over the risks to civilian casualties.

The Prime Minister — often accused of bypassing his ministerial colleagues - has kept them fully involved in all the discussions leading up to the decision to launch air strikes. A senior Cabinet Minister says that, after Northern Ire-land. Kosovo has been the subject most discussed at full Cabinet in the last three months. The attitude to war in the Cabinet has been one of uncomfortable acceptance of its inevitability, the Minister says. "There is unease that we have been forced to this but no

Blair is relaxed when dealing with the military and, according to senior defence sources, they are happy with him. One said: "Once he has been convinced that the course is right, the attitude is OK, we

War leaders are made by their ability to win public confidence and to retain it when doubts begin to stir. Some prime ministers have risen to the occasion to become national leaders - Lloyd George. and Baroness Thatcher. Others have faltered - Asquith. Neville Chamber-

Blair asking the public on Friday to support air strikes

now the key relationship is between the Prime Minister and the Chief of Defence Staff. In these tension-filled days. Blair is leaning heavily on General Sir Charles Guthrie. The mutual respect is said by insiders to be considerable — in convincing himself that war against President Milosevic is in Britain's national interest. He believes the public backs the war because of the scenes as it was between Thatcher of brutality against the flexing ethnic Albaniand Lord Lewin at the time of ans, the horrors of ethnic Once he has been convinced sion. When he rushed in from Ulster on Wednesday, his first meeting was with Sir Charles.

ers. Blair has had no difficulty fronted. All of those sentiments are driving him. But the wider fear of a Balkan war eventually convulsing the Continent and the potential damage to Nato's credibility also

With the enlargement of Nato earlier this month, there is now a border in Hungary between it and Serbia. Blair believes that Nato cannot turn a

According to his close advisan innate British sense, bred through the last war.

that tyranis

must be con-

the Falklands. A senior minister admits that Blair is talking more to Sir Charles than any of the Cabinet.

that the course is right, the attitude is 'OK, we do it'?

He became deeply pressed with Sir Charles with his clearcut presentation of the options during the strategic defence review and when they together worked on plans for military action against Iraq three times last year: it hap-

Lowest

Prices

on the

Find a lower price for the same product and offer,

complete, new, bexed

7 days in a local shop,

WELL MATCHIT.

and in stock, within

Help and Trust Britain's leading electrical store to offer the friendly help and advice you need when choosing a phone.

Mastercare Coverplan Insurance

With late night opening. You can even order direct on 0500 384304.

offers comprehensive cover against their and accidental damage on your mobile.

Ask in-store for details.

Faster, better

phone care

Advice

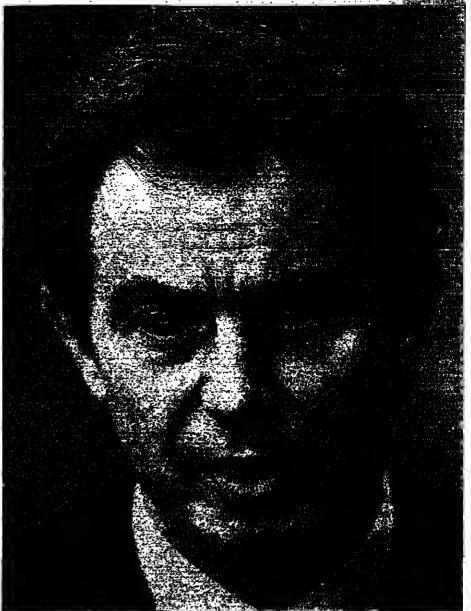

blind eye to a conflict just over its border and that the peace and security of Britain depends on the credibility of

Bombing President Milosevic will have been the most mo-mentous decision of Blair's premiership so far. But once taken there have been no second ccording to close friends, his biggest motivation will have been his strong moral sense. "It was what drove him on with regard to Irao. It is what has driven him on in regard to Northern Ireland. He abhors human suffering and he abhors avoidable human suffering."

The saying attributed to Burke — "It is necessary only for the good man to do nothing for evil to triumph" - is one that is said to sum up Blair's approach to this and the Iraq crisis last year.

According to the senior back-bencher Gerald Kaufman, Blair's Christianity is a powerful force. "He believes the Good Samaritan should not pass by on the other side. He believes that things have got to be done. He simply believes it is his job to do them."

Tony Blair in Belfast on Tuesday. He held meetings from breakfast until past midnight

Britain's Biggest Electrical Stores

I he Choice

MOTOROLA

OX

OD.

O vodatore

0 vodafone

রা শেহত

NEW

CORRESTS PROCE

▲ SIEMENS

Digital Mobile Phone

Lightweight handset

Up to 30 Minutes Talktime. # Up to 80 Hours Standby Time

PRE-PAY PHONES FROM ONLY

> LOWEST OFF-PEAK CALLRATE

Calls from only 5p per minute'

Ideal for frequent off-peak users who want to control what they spend.

MOTOROLA

Digital Mobile Phone ■ 99 Name and Number Memory. ■ Up To 70 Hours Standby Time. ■ Up To 240 Minutes Talktime.

Model MOT3180. Was £99.99. SAVE £30 CURRYS PRICE INCLUDES: 20 CALLS & SERVICE

PANASONIC

Digital Mobile Phone # 99 Name and Number E Up To 80 Hours Standby Time.

Up To 150 Minutes Model PANG450.

SAVE £10 £109.99*

WHICHEYER NETWORK YOU CHOOSE, BUY YOUR CALL VOUCHERS AT CURRYS AND EVERY 13TH VOUCHER IS FREE."
ASK FOR DETAILS

AND THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPER

CONTRACT

TO SIGN

CREDIT

CHECK

CONNECTION

FEE

JUST BUY

VOUCHERS

TO MAKE

CALLS

The Saturday Times

Only 60p

Teachers seek help with violent pupils

Secure hospital is helping to train nursery staff, reports John O'Leary

STAFF from a high-security hospital are training leachers to deal with disruptive children as young as three. The courses designed by Ashworth hospital on Merseyside, which houses some of the most violent criminals, instruct teachers on how to restrain violent pupils and how to defuse their

The training was disclosed at the conference of the Associ-ation of Teachers and Lecturers, where delegates called for training in restraint methods to be offered to all schools.

John Williamson, who works at Kilgarth School on The Wirral, said he used the techniques taught by Ashworth every day because his school catered for teenage boys with behavioural problems. "Other teachers may find themselves in a situation like this only once a term or once in a career, but it can terminate a career. If you don't know how to hold a child, it can be particularly dangerous." he said. Nursery teachers have received the training, and Mr Williamson said that young children were increasingly using violence such as kicking and biting. These were a particular problem to deal with, he said. "Small children can slip to the ground and cause considerable damage to you and themselves. You need to losing face. Tom Capper, of Bridgewater School, Cheshire, described an II-year-old pupil crawling under his desk. ripping up a textbook and eating it. This kind of incident disrupts the education of other children:

"We need special training to deal with it because if you have got 34 other kids in the

be trained in ways of prevent-Teachers may find themselves in a situation like this only once, but it can terminate a career?

ing that, such as bringing yourself down to their level."

The three-day courses include instruction on how to pin down pupils' arms to give time to defuse a violent incident. The advice on "de-escalation" includes avoiding threatening body language and giving potentially violent pupils a way out of a conflict without class you have got a megaproblem if one says he simply isn't going to work." Government guidetines issued last year set down limits on the degree of "reasonable force" that teachers can use to control pupils. But delegates said yesterday that the guidance was useless without training in effective techniques.

policy to integrate more children with entoconal and hehavioural difficulties into mainstream schools meant that teachers were facing increasing violence.

Few schools or colleges offer training in restraint, despite a sharp rise over recent years in the number of pupils excluded because of violence. Andy Speake, of Tavistock College, Devon, said that most schools relied on a senior member of staff to be "on call" to deal with threatening pupils.

Delegates backed a morion that drew parallels between the Government's policy of teaching children with special needs in mainstream classes and the "well-intentioned hut ill-fated Care in the Community" programme for mentally handicapped people.

They called for the "reasonable force" rules to be delayed until schools were adequately funded and teachers properly trained to deal with disruprive

Peter Smith: claims of policy successes are premature

Labour accused of deceit over policy

By Our Education Editor

A UNION leader launched a stinging attack on Labour's stewardship of the education service yesterday, accusing ministers of "designer deceit"

Peter Smith, geoeral secretary of the Association of Teachers and Lecturers, said that the misleading "spin" put on government policies was convincing teachers that ministers were more concerned with winning the next election than implementing change in the classroom. "The Government has got to sell itself to teachers, who want sound policy, not soundbites."

Mr Smith fold delegates to the association's annual conference in Harrogate: "If this Government comes to be seen as one that specialises in château-bottled chicanery and designer deceit, which values pagers above principles, then a fickle electorate will turn away and it will see politicians as part of the problem. not part of the solution."

Ministers' premature claims for the success of their literacy strategy and other national initiatives were the most glaring examples of deceit, Mr Smith said later. The constant reannouncement of expenditure to create an exaggerated impression of investment was another.

Only teachers could deliver the improvements ministers sought. Mr Smith said, but the Government was operating increasingly through dik-tat. In particular, there had to be genuine consultation on performance-related pay, which is dominating the Easter round of teacher union conferences. Mr Smith said that next year's introduction of annual appraisal for teachers should be a pilot that should be used to design a permanent scheme.

Black teenagers spurn university

By HANNAH BETTS

NEARLY 90 per cent of Asians ment for Education and Emare in full-time education at 16. compared with 80 per cent of black children and just under 70 per cent of whites, a study

However, only just over 10 per cent of black pupils intend on to university compared with a quarter of whites and almost 30 per cent of Asians. Almost half of black 18-year-olds planned to pursue general national vocational qualifications, a significantly higher proportion than among white or Asian students.

ployment from a series of surveys conducted across Eng. land and Wales.

Baroness Blackstone, the Education and Employment Min-ister, applauded the commitment of Asian leenagers, but said: "We are determined to bring the attainment of underachieving ethnic-minority pupils to that of the school population as a whole." The Government also an nounced yesterday that 68.5 per cent of teenagers now continue their education beyond

'Champion rider's wife jailed for drug plot

By A CORRESPONDENT

HE wife of the former European showjumping champion Paddy McMahon has been ailed for 12 years over a £2 million cocaine shipment. Patricia McMahon, 50, became involved in the scheme after falling in love with the drug smuggler Tony Lavene, Isleworth Crown Court was told. She was arrested last July after a four-month Customs operation uncovered the plot to import cocaine from Peru in pots of asparagus.

The court was told that Mc-Mahon, from Fringford, near Bicester, Oxfordshire, had a "lonely" marriage and fell in love with the "charming, plausible, manipulative and clever" Lavene, 54, whom she met shortly after his release from a 14-year sentence for a similar offence.

The pair rented a flat in Chelsea, and always paid their rent in cash. Although the flat had a telephone, both Lavene and McMahon were regularly seen using a payphone out-

Philip Katz, for the defence, said: "She was consuming large amounts of cocaine, large amounts of drink and behaving in a bizarre fashion.

"Lavene always had large amounts of cash in his pockets and they were spending it like

The pair plotted to use Mc-Mahon's South American society contacts to arrange a shipment of 16.96kg of cocaine, the court was told. A Peruvian. Rene Black, organised for the consignment to be sent to BritCustoms officers intercepted the drugs in Spain, and fol-lowed them through Heath-row to a caravan in Henleyon-Thames, Oxfordshire. Three men were arrested in a swoop on the caravan on July 19 last year, and McMahon, Lavene and two other suspects were picked up later that day. Nigel Ingram, for the prosecution, said that the cara-van held "all the paraphernalia of weighing, packing and sending the stuff on its way".

Mr McMahon watched from the public gallery as his tearful wife, who had pleaded guilty to conspiracy to smuggle cocaine, was sentenced at the end of an eight-week trial. She wept as Mr Katz said that Lavene "was making her feel very special for the first time" and that she had been "completely suppressing all the com-mon sense and all the standards she had lived by for the rest of her life."

She cannot believe how stupid she was, getting involved in this," he said.

Judge Andrew McDowall told McMahon: "I can accept that you were not the one who started this enterprise. But you were involved in it . . . and you expected substantial financial Lavene, from Crewe, Cheshire, was due to be tried at the same hearing, but escaped from Wormwood Scrubs two weeks before it began. There is a warrant out for his arrest. Ronald Walker, 51, of Marlow, Buckinghamshire, was also convicted of conspiracy.

Easter chicks: Pebbles and Bam Bam, two Cape Eagle owls born recently at Eagle Heights in the Darent Valley in Kent which breeds birds of prey

Dog track pair guilty of cruelty

BY SHIRLEY ENGLISH

TWO men who tied a live rabbit to a mechanical hare at a greyhound track and let a dog chase it were sentenced to 200 hours' community service yesterday after being found guilty of cruelty.

The rabbit was still alive at the end of its 20-second ordeal and was then thrown to the dog, which killed it.

Animal rights campaigners, who secretly filmed the incident last October at Albert Park race track, Hawick, in the Borders, said that the sentence was too lenient.

Frank McFarlane, track manager, and Roy Burns, a dog owner, were facing a maximum £5,000 fine, a six-month sentence and a life ban on keeping animals. The judge at Jedburgh Sheriff Court said the order reflected the fact

By Stephen Farrell and Damian Whitworth

Murdered nanny 'wanted to leave Briton's US home'

THE British engineer charged with murdering his children's nanny, who was his lover, in must prove the murder took the US is thought to have beatplace while another crime was en her to death with a wrench being committed.

en name, last night refused to speak at the home in Chippen-ham, Wiltshire, she shares with her new partner, David Hollins, Mr Hollins said: "We when she told him she wanted the engineering firm Therma-tool Corp, moved to Connectito end their relationship. David Taylor, 43, is being held in custody in Connecticut accused of killing 22-year-old Slovakian-born Milena Pitkocut from Basingstoke, Hamp-shire, in November 1996 after the break-up of his 16-year marriage. Ms Pitkova was hired in Britain and moved va, who was found dead from head injuries at his rented house in the affluent seaside with him. town of Madison on Tuesday His ex-wife, Susan Lemon, morning. His 14-year-old son and 11-year-old daughter. who were in the house, were last night being cared for by US social services as their British mother prepared to fly out and bring them home.

Although Connecticut has the death penalty by lethal injection, it has not been used since 1977 and prosecutors spent all of yesterday contacting the necessary people and making plans. The children Mr Taylor, who worked for are safe and will return home as soon as possible. We have made the arrangements." Mr Taylor is thought to have called police at 12.30am on Tuesday to say he had killed someone. An autopsy showed any one of three blows Ms Pitkova received to the head would have been enough to kill her. An attempt had who has reverted to her maid-been made to strangle her. Friends in Madison yesterday said Ms Pitkova grew tired of working as a nanny, having looked after the Taylor children for three years. She wanted to move out and visit her parents in Slovakia.

"She did want to go on her own," said Holly Magee, owner of the coffee shop where Ms Pitkova worked. "I think she was getting tired of doing that kind of work. She was a very European beauty. She had a tiny build and was always immaculate."

Before moving to the US. Mr Taylor worked for Thermatool Europe in his home town of Basingstoke. The company's managing director, Paul Wallace, said Mr Taylor moved abroad because "he wanted a change" around the time of his marriage break-up.

Religious groups spared wage rule

By JILL SHERMAN CHIEF POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT

STEPHEN BYERS has agreed to amend the rules on the nadonal minimum wage to exempt members of religious communides.

The Trade and Industry Secretary is to alter the Employment Relacions Bill to exempt all such communides after protests that the application of a statutory hourly rate could force them to close. In a parliamentary answer on Wednesday, Mr Byers published the Low Pay Commission's recommendation that religious communities be exempt from the minimum wage, which came into effect yesterday.

This is unlikely to affect monasteries and convents, where salaries are not generally paid, but could save communides where people devote their lives to helping others and volunteer to take subsistence wages.

The Government has now said it will have to amend the Employment Relacions Bill which was carried in the Commons on Wednesday night and now goes to the Lords. The Government accepts the commission's recommendaoon that members of intendonal communities should not be covered by the national minimum wage and proposes to introduce a suitable amendment to the 1998 Act through the Employment Relations Bill," Mr Byers said yesterday.

John Redwood, the Shadow Trade and Industry Secretary, claimed credit for the change, insisting he had made representations to Mr Byers on behalf of the bodies affected. "We have revealed yet another bungle in the minimum wage regu-

SONY 4 HEAD NICAM

STEREO VIDEO Videoplus+™

 Programme Delivery Control 2 SCART sockets Model SLVE730

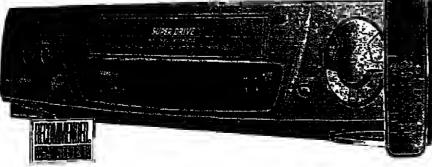

was £249.99 previously £259.99, £279.99 In-store £229.99 SKU: 367680

Panason

SILVER 4 HEAD NICAM STEREO VIDEO ◆ Videoplus+™

 Programme Delivery Control

 2 SCART sockets Model NVHD630S was £259.99 previously £269.99, £279.99 In-store £229.99 sku: 368042

COMET YOU CANEVEN ORDER BY PHONE 0845 60 26638

WE PROMISE THE PRICEINDEX

LOWEST PRICES Cornet Pribe Promper 90

The perfect family car for £7,004.

(Perfect family not included).

Now you may think that finding the perfect family car for a smidgen over £7,000 is about as likely as finding the perfect family (up there with needles in haystacks and hens teeth).

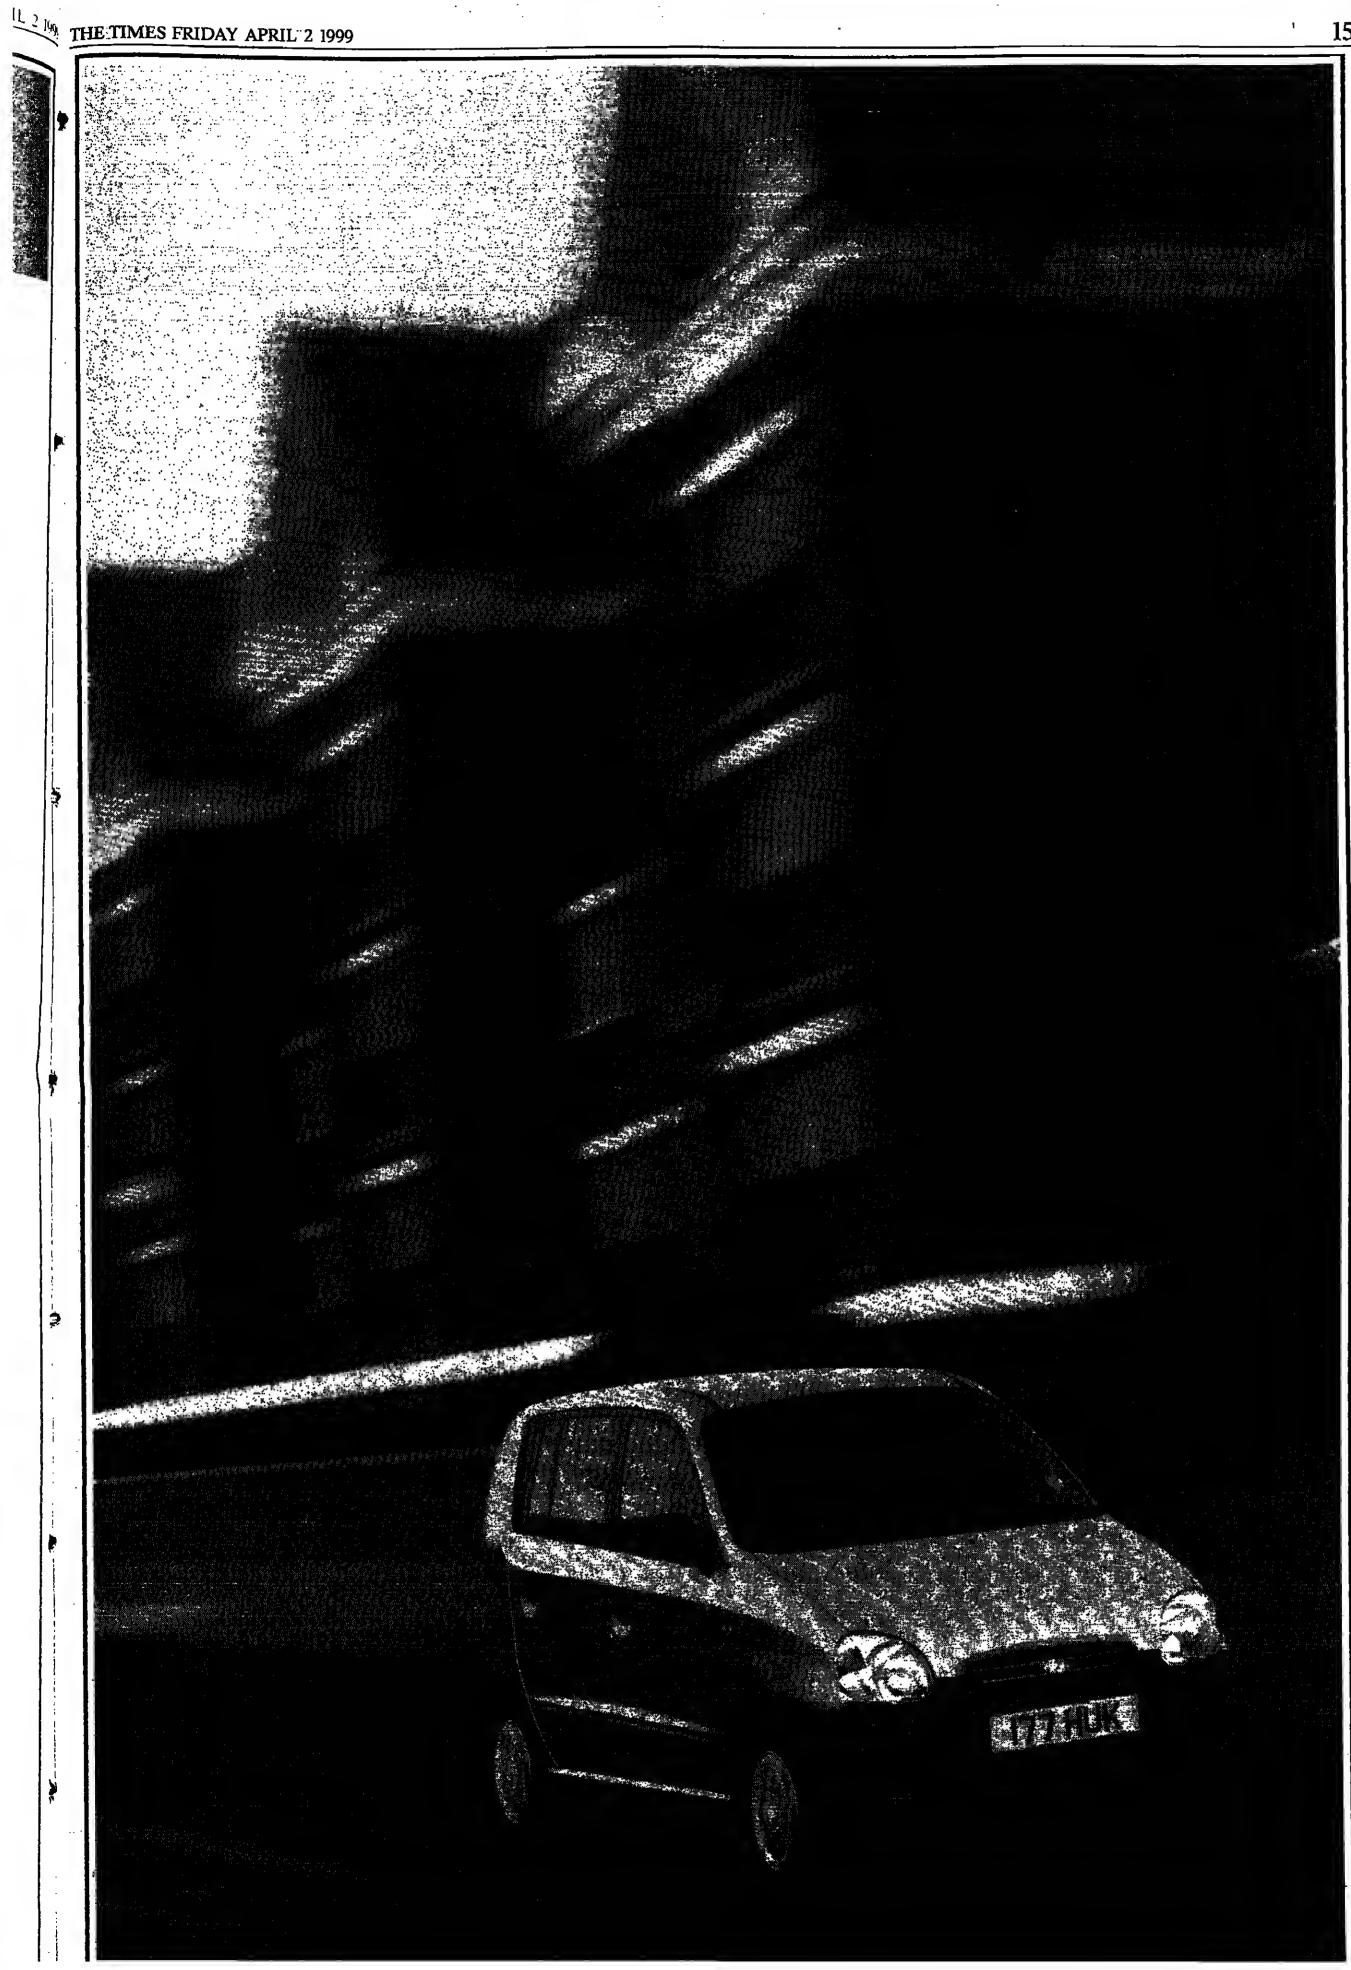

But the combination of ultra-modern design and good, old-fashioned value for money makes the Hyundai Atoz, we feel, pretty near perfect. Even the basic model is hardly what you'd call basic, with a suppy 1.0. Here engine, side impact basis power steering, engine immobiliser, three years unlimited mileage warranty and three years! Hyundai RAC Assistance.

For a further outlay of £1,065 there's the Atox 4. The "plus" refers to a higher epecification which lucludes alloy wheels, air conditioning, electric windows, driver's airbag and central locking.

Mow if this is standing to sound meabor good to be true why but sheek the Argain and for yourself! Seek tree phone is comed to yourself and your and yell your seek to yourself.

Doctors argue over urgent treatment of breast cancer

cer have clashed over whether those with the disease have more chance of survival if they are treated within three months of first finding symptoms. The argument coincided with a government announcement that, as promised before the election, women with a suspected breast cancer would henceforth be seen within two weeks of "urgent" referral from their GP.

Two diametrically opposed papers are published by The Lancet today. One, based on 100,000 case studies world-wide going back 70 years, ar-gues that 500 lives a year could be saved if delays in treatment were cut to less than three months. The other, based on 36,200 cases in Yorkshire since 1970, argues that it makes no difference to survival rates if treatment is delayed for longer than that, and that keeping the Government's promise will divert resources from more urgent services.

The international study was made by collating evidence from 87 research papers. Car-ried out by a team led by Mike

By IAN MURRAY, MEDICAL CORRESPONDENT

Richards, head of the Imperial Cancer Research Fund team at Guy's and St Thomas' Hospital in London, it found that in a third of cases the interval between a woman noticing a symptom and being treated exceeded three months. The long-term survival rate among those treated between three and six months after the symptom was noticed was 5 per cent lower than among those treated more promptly. The longer treatment was delayed, the worse the chances of survival became. "The tu-mours grow and the disease progresses to an advanced stage which is more difficult to treat." Professor Richards said. "Even moderate delays are important' The other study, by Richard Sainsbury, consultant breast surgeon at Huddersfield Roy-al Infirmary, focused on 5,700 patients diagnosed between 1986 and 1990: patients who were treated in fewer than 30 days from the time the symp-tom appeared had significantworse outcomes because they had a more aggressive form of the disease. He argues that treating all patients more quickly would not significantly alter the number of deaths. Cancer takes many years to develop and you are not going to tell me that by the time the tumours become palpable it is going to make any difference if treatment is delayed a month or so," Mr Sainsbury said. GPs to BE ALERTED TO UNCOMMON SYMPTOMS

it is important that anyone with a lump gets it sorted out as soon as possible, but that means a woman needs to be seen by a specialist. There are only about 350 specialists in the country so this new 14-day pledge means that in a lot of trusts patients will have to be seen by untrained junior people who cannot be sure to get the diagnosis right, defeating. the object of the exercise."

The ICRF data "fit in with what the Government is trying to do but those of us who have to deal with patients hands-on are very sceptical about being whipped into line to deliver on an election prom-A commentary in The Lancet on the two papers sides with Mr Sainsbury. "Ade-quate resources for care appropriate to the medical demands of the disease and to the psychological needs of the patient are likely to yield better re-turns than an obsession with speed," writes Alan Coates, of the Australian and New Zealand Breast Cancer Trials

Frank Dobson, the Health Secretary, who turns 60 next year, visits an Edinburgh optician to promote yesterday's introduction of free eye-tests for the over-60s

Although the breast screening programme picks up about 7,000 early cases of cancer a year, three quarters of turnours are diagnosed after doctors suspect that women have developed symptoms of se (lan Murray writes).

In about 70 per cent of cases the symptom is a lump — although only 10 per cent of women with a lump has cancer — but the other symptoms are less well known, even to GPs. The NHS Breast Screening Programme and the Cancer Research Campaign are drawing up a checklist to help

Women who have less-common symptoms are more likely to delay seeing their doctor, and doctors are less likely to refer them quickly to a : specialist than those who have a lump. Older women, those from minority ethnic groups and those with a lower level of education all tended to delay seeking advice from their doctor. . .

The list of cancer symptoms includes: persistent localised lumpiness in the breast of a woman over 30; inversion of one nipple; bloodstained discharge from a nipple; persistent infection in the breast of woman who is not breast feeding; new dimpling of the skin; and eczema around the nipple. Half the women who have breast cancer wait about a month after detecting a symptom before. going to see their GP.

Cervical smear programme 'not cost-effective'

BY OUR MEDICAL CORRESPONDENT

SMEAR tests have led to a 35 per cent fall in the number of cases of cervical cancer and probably saved 800 lives in 1997 alone, according to a study published today.

In spite of the success. however, too much money is being spent on the programme according to re-searchers from the national cancer registration bureau at the Office for National

They write in the British Medical Journal that the service is not cost-effective largely because many women have a test every three years instead of every five years as recommended. This pushes the cost up to £132 million a year. "This is about four times the cost of the breast-screening programme, which aims to reduce annual breast cancer

"Costs of cervical screening could be reduced substantially, with little loss in effectiveness, by screening all women every five years - there is little benefit but enormous increase in costs in opportunistic screening at shorter intervals than those recommended - and by not continuing to screen women over 50 who have had two or three consecutive normal results."

Screening began in the early 1960s but provision was so patchy that it had little effect on the death rate. From 1950 to 1987, mortality from the disease fell by 1.5 per cent each year, with deaths decreasing from 2,500 in 1950 to 1,800 in 1987. Little of the fall in mortality during this time can be ascribed to screening because so few women over 55 who died from the disease had been screened. Since the programme was introduced nationwide, the decline in the death rate has trebled. By 1997, the number of deaths was 1,150. This represents 2 per cent of all cancer per cent of all deaths in

In 1988, when the national programme began, 42 per cent of women took part but this quickly rose to the present 85 per cent, with 4.5 million smears a year.

24x330ml bottles Rolling Rock. Was £26.16. Now £15.99

GUARANTEED TO SHING A

ALSO AVAILABLE AT

BOTTOMS-UP

For the past seven months, International Care and Relief has been a leading aid agency assisting over 40,000 Kosovo refugees. Our Emergency Relief Fund is now braced for unprecedented demaod as Nato begin strikes. ICR is now preparing for the worst, as a mass exodus of refugees takes place. Anthony Loyd's daily reports in The Times have graphically described the terrible suffering that has been endured by the people of Kosovo. ICR has already assisted over 40,000 Kosovo refugees who fled to neighbouring Montenegro, their homes and livelihoods destroyed. We are now appealing to you for donations which are urgently needed to provide emergency relief supplies. Our partner agency's trucks are waiting in Italy so that emergency aid can transported to refugee areas as quickly as possible. Thank you.

KOSOVO APPEAL

Please r	nake your	cheque	ypost:	al ord	er pa	yable	to i
£250	6100	060	1 1.	~~ [\neg	. Г
Or debit	my Mast	erCard,	Visa/	CAF	card:	I IGIL
		T	TT	$\neg \neg$	T		\Box
Expiry [Date	s	ignatu	re		_'_
Name
Address	address in CA	PITALS)					_

Postcode FREEPOST TW 3028, 27 Church Road, Tunbridge Wells, Kent TN1 1BR Registered Charity No 298316

April 1: the day that fools weathermen

Yesterday was one of the hottest, but snow is perplexingly common, reports

SHAKESPEARE wrote of "the uncertain glory of an April day" but All Fool's Day, one of the most capricious in the weather calendar, produced temperatures to rival the hottest on record yesterday. Easter holidaymakers revtures reached 21C (69.8F) in London and the South West, challenging the hottest April 1 of the century. 22.6C (72.9F) recorded at Wryde, Cam-bridgeshire, in 1907 and the runner-up, 22C (71.6F) at Cromer, Norfolk, in 1990.

Adam Sherwin

Although forecasts that the temperature could reach 23C (73.4F) proved optimistic, central and southern England still out many other parts of the world in the shade. A cloudy Rome reached ISC (64.4F), New York and Madrid managed only 16C (60.8F) and Athens languished with thunderstorms and 15C (59F). Paris was a rarity in mainland Europe, enjoying 21C and Predicting the weather for April I has confounded meteorologists. A white Easter is more common that a white Christmas for many Britons:

Scarborough fair: a stroll on the resort's South Bay beach was one way to enjoy British temperatures that exceeded those of Rome, Madrid and Athens yesterday at 21C (69.8F) snow has fallen during the Easter break 12 times in the past 40 years. Last year, Wales and the North West suffered power cuts after heavy snowfalls and the Midlands had some of the most severe floods

The worst Easter weekends in recent memory were 1994. which began with severe storms on Good Friday and continued with widespread lowland snow, and 1964, when temperatures barely reached 6C (42.8F) and raw winds led to the coldest Easter Day for 81

The warmest Easter weekends since the Second World War were in 1960, 1969 and 1984. The Meteorological Office believes that Easter 1949 was the best this century, when temperatures in London rose to 29C (84.2) on Easter Saturday.

Yesterday's sunshine and cloudless skies were due to a band of high pressure sweeping up from the Azores. The front was predicted by Piers Corbyn, whose Weather Action forecast centre uses the April Fool's Day fluctuations Solar Weather Technique. Pinning down All Fool's Day is an annual challenge, he said.

"Our long-range forecast from last September held up well: we said it would be pretty hot. You can get such an extraordinary variation. from sun to snow, sometimes in the same day." An explanation for across the years was offered by Stephen Roberts, managing director of Cunningham Weathernet, which provides weather information to the insurance industry. "In spring, Britain comes under the influence of a high altitude jetstream. A slight shift in can suddenly fall beneath northerly Arctic winds or warm southerly ones," he

Amateur meteorologists have discovered their own weather on April t. Peggy Cole uses country lore based on obaround her Ipswich home. She

TIMES PAST

On this day in 1907 (Adam Sherwin writes), The Times reported: The Prince of Wales came to the aid of an upturned cab carriage in Windsor. He fetched his tools and corrected the damage. Upon learning that the driver had been in the Army, his Royal Highness sent him on his way with half a sovereign. The Home Secretary advised the King to commute a capital punishment sentence passed on Horace George Rayner to life imprisonn Mr Rayner said: "I would prefer to get the whole business over and done with instead of having to endure years of misery behind bars." The Labour Party has emerged as a "new and powerful" group in Parliament. The Times gives warning that the party's "financial and electoral power lies with the trade unions" and notes that "the working classes voted mainly Lahour in the general election but they did not vote for socialism".

is not surprised that the 1907 peak has not been topped. The blackthorn shrub is still one mass of white blossom, so it won't be all that wonderful," she said. "When the leaves fall off and the daffodils start to look tired, then summer will be upon us."

Forecast, page 28

Radio HQ | Early man beseiged after pop hoax

By Russell Jenkins NORTH WEST CORRESPONDENT

ANGRY parents and children gathered outside the Radio City commercia station in Liverpool yesterday to protest at an April Fool's Day prank.

A disc jockey at the statioo said that the chart-topping groop Steps woold be appearing on the steps of St George's Hall in the city centre at midday to say thank yoo to their loyal

Several hundred children, many with parents in tow, went to the famous landmark only to learn that they had been fooled. About 50 then marched to the station's headquarters in Stanley Street, where staff barricaded the door.

The children and parents held an impromptu demonstration while staff attempted to placate them by distributing Easter eggs. Pamela Rotherham, who had taken her eight-year-old nicce as a treat, said: This is a very sick April Fool's Day prank. The kids are so disappointed.

"I brought my niece along as a birthday present because she is nine tomorrow. She was close to tears. She absolutely idolises the band. I don't know how to console her."

Tom Honter, managing director of Radio City, later apologised for the upset. We were onder siege for a few hours. The only thing we could do was throw hundreds of Easter eggs at everybody to try to placate

"Nothing like this has happened before. There were quite a few childreo involved. Some of their parents were also takeo in and they got quite angry."

has years lopped off his age

By NIGEL HAWKES SCIENCE EDITOR

THE human species is half a million years younger than previously believed, according to two British anthropologists.

After taking a new look at fossil remains found in Africa. they suggest that two species previously called Homo ought properly to belong to a pre-human genus, Australopithecus.

If the reclassification suggested by Bernard Wood and Mark Collard is accepted, the first creature to merit the name Homo is the early form of Homo erectus, which appeared on the scene 1.9 million years ago. This was the species that first left Africa and colonised the world.

The scientists say that two earlier species, Homo habilis and Homo rudolfensis, should really be classified as australopithecines - ancestors of man rather than man himself. The earliest traces of habilis date from 2.3 million years ago, and of rudolfensis from 2.4 mil-

The naming and classification of species, especially hu-man and pre-human species, has always been controversial. The competition to find the earliest species that can be classified as man is intense.

Professor Wood, of George Washington University in Washington DC, and Dr Collard, of University College London, write in Science that there are many reasons to exclude habilis from the genus Homo. Body mass and proportions, the shape of the skeleton, the size of the teeth and jaws, and evidence that the spe-cies had an extended period of growth and development all had to be taken into account. Early Homo erectus gave rise to a later form that was the first inhabitant of Britain. Boxgrove Man. He lived in what is now Sussex 500,000

Restraints tested to reduce injuries

By STEWART TENDLER, CRIME CORRESPONDENT

POLICE are to test leg restraints to see if they can reduce injuries from violent prisoners who kick and headbutt officers after arrests, the Associarion of Chief Police Officers confirmed yesterday.

Sussex Police will test one system that uses Velcro straps and another known as the Viper - Violent Persons Restraint System - which uses webbing to hold the arms and ankles. Northamptonshire Police, said that many officers were injured by prisoners who lashed out as they got in or out of police vans. The restraints could also prevent headbutting because prisoners would not be able to keep their balance to launch such an attack. All three types of restraint had been passed by a medical expert in accident trauma.

"We are trying to do our best to make people safer not only ourselves but also the mers " Mr Boatman said.

IT'S THE PRICE AT COUNTS. DISCOU

PRICE BEATER PROMISE

Were so confident our prices are cheaper, that if you find an equivalent product available tocally for less-even if it's a sale or special after price - we'll not just match that price, but we'll beat if by a further 10%. All we ask is that the lower price is generally available to any potential customer and that you call back within 14 days with your B&Q till receipt.

Vari can do it when voll B&O it

Cleaning reveals early Poussin worth millions picts a Greek mythological scene with Bacchus reaching up to a vine to grasp a bunch of grapes. Nearby a satura clines beside a nymph with cornflowers in her hair, and the goddess Ceres. Xanthe Brooke, the Walker's curator of European art, was happy to rename the painting Landscape with Bacchus and Ceres.

terday for the first time since its authentication. It is regarded as an important discovery

It went on public display yes-

Restorers found a masterpiece hidden behind the grime of centuries, reports

Russell Jenkins AN OIL painting once dis-missed by Sir Anthony Blunt as being almost worthless has been authenticated as an early masterpiece of the 17th-century French artist Nicolas Poussin, worth millions of

The landscape was ban-ished to the vaults of the Walker Art Gallery in Liverpool un-til careful restoration revealed the tell-tale signs of the young master at work.

Experts became suspicious when they began cleaning the grimy painting known traditionally as Landscape with Arcadian Shepherds, Paintwork thought to be a shepherd's crook was exposed as a trick of light, and there were no shep-

The painting actually de-

Before restoration, left, Landscape with Bacchus and Ceres was thought to be by one of Poussin's followers and depict shepherds. Cleaning revealed an erotic mythological scene because it sheds light on a previously little-known era in Poussin's life.

He arrived in Rome from Normandy in the spring of 1624 aged 30 as a little-known artist struggling to find pa-trons. Little is known about his career until 1627, when he began to produce commis-sioned work. Scholars at the Louvre and the National Gallery were able to authenticate the painting when the X-ray hard-up young artist had used the carryas at least three times. Pigment analysis confirmed the findings. Ms Brooke said: "We discovered at least two other attempts at compositions on this canvas. Our findings matched similar cleaning and research being carried out elsewhere, including the National Gallery. They show close similarities."

The painting is part of the Walker's core collection, be-

1870s by its forerunner, The Liverpool Royal Institution. But nothing is known about the first two centuries of its life, and how it came to end up in Liverpool is a mystery. It was once famously dismissed by Sir Anthony Blunt. Surveyor of the Queen's Pictures, as too crude to be a true Poussin and catalogued as painted by a follower of the art-ist. Cleaning has exposed some of the painting's flaws. pictures revealed that "the queathed to the gallery in the In one spot ghostly heads of three women can be seen emerging from a hillside. A fault line in the canvas shows that it had originally been stretched on a frame and extended only later when the artist decided on a bigger canvas.

Ms Brooke said: "This is going to be of great interest because gradually more and more information is coming to light about Poussin's early

Such Bacchic landscapes peopled with nymphs and sa-tyrs were popular subjects, not least for their erotic charge. It is thought that Poussin might have been trying to attract the interest of the collector Cassiano del Pozzo, who later became his patron. "He was trying to create paintings that would sell and he produced a lot of these landscapes with nude male and female figures," Ms Brooke said, "By the 1630s he was painting the paintings he is best known for."

Short life of world's longest painting By Paul Wilkinson North East CORRESPONDENT INEST

A CHINESE artist in the fishing port of Grimsby has landed the record for the world's longest painting with a scroll depicting 5,339 carp.

The 201.5-metre (661ft) watercolour Culture 5000 has been validated by The Guinness Book of Records. It took Hai Shuet Yeung, 62, eight months to complete in his garage and first went on show at the fish market, the only building big enough in the North East Lincolnshire town.

But the painting, in which each carp represents a year of Chinese civilisation, will not be the world's longest for much longer. Mr Yeung intends to cut the 1.5-metre wide. E6,000 roll of artpaper into 100 sections for display in museums around the world.

"Before it is cut up I will have it put on CD-Rom," he said. "I hope the first piece will go to a museum in Beijing and the last to the Millennium Dome in London, symbolising the cultural bridge between the two countries. The scroll combines water, the universal symbol of life, with the east Asian icon of good fortune." Mr Yeung taught chemistry in Canton but moved to Hong Kong in 1958 because he feared arrest for caricaturing corrupt officials. He came to Britain in 1969 and runs a gallery above his wife's restaurant.

The world's largest painting. 6.730 sq metres (72.437 sq ft). was made by Australian stu-

Yeung: will cut up image for display around world

Vienna's waltz king stuck to the gentleman's excuse me

Strauss: work embodies Vienna's effervescence

By Dalya Alberge ARTS CORRESPONDENT

THE Waltz King could not dance. Johann Strauss II. who wrote the Blue Danube, was far from being the debonair showman of popular belief. according to a new hingraphy.

"He was as nutty as a fruitcake, an enormous fruitcake," said Robert Dachs, the Viennese author of What Concern of Mine am I?, to he published in Britain later this year. Studying hundreds of previously unknown letters. Dachs concluded that the composer of the vivacious music that caught the gaiety of 19th-century Vienna was not, after

"dancing prince". Dachs said: "He didn't have the slightest humour and he could have been an invention of Kafka's, I don't think he was all there. In his letters, he says, 'I hate the sunshine.' I don't know why. He was also a terrible coward. When he was travelling in a train, he drew the curtains and hid under the bench. He was afraid of the dark, couldn't stand being alone and would go downstairs backwards as he couldn't stand the view."

Johann Strauss'the Younger (1825-1899) — eldest son of the composer Johann Strauss I — is probably the most celebrated of. . the 19th century's light-music composers. His works include the operetta Die Fledermaus. In 1893, he was proclaimed one of the three most famous people in the world, along with Queen Victoria, one of his most ardent

But there was madness in the family, and concern about his mental state recurs in his letters. In 1883, he wrote to a friend: "It is a sad consequence of my work that after each rehearsal I did nothing but torment my wife and myself to the extreme. Can it he different when your brains are no longer working properly?"

That Strauss could not dance, Dachs added, is remarkable. In never danced "in my life". There are, Dachs said, passages in other letters where he discusses being asked "by nice women to dance". Dachs said that "he always had to say 'sorry. I can't."

Dachs's work has concentrated on the Viennese music, theatre and literature that the Nazis attempted to destroy because they regarded it as "Jewish" or otherwise "degenerate". Strauss was Jewish, Dachs said, although the Nazis tried to conceal that inconvenient fact. "Many people in Vienna knew he had Jewish roots, but anti-Semites did not want to hear about this." iments in the letters overturn Austrian Cultural Institute in London, said that Dachs's findings about Strauss are totally different from the normal image one has of him". But, he added, in a way he was typical of figures in Viennese culture. There is an ambivalence, very often, between the outside and the inside character." Dachs will be lending material to an exhibition commemorating the centenary of Strauss's death at The European Academy for the Arts & Accademia Italiana, in the assumption that Strauss did not regard himself as e Jew.

Grosvenor Place, Central

London, from May 11 to June 6.

Emil Brix, director of the

FOR A FREE DIY HOME ENERGY CHECK, CALL 0345 277 200

This is the simplest bit of DIY ever. You just fill in our free questionnaire and send it to us. In return, wa'll send you e list of weys to make your home more energy efficient. And what does the great Albert think of this? He gives us a big tick and a pet on the beck. Stop it, Alb, you're making us blush, For your questionnaire, call now.

An Energy Saving Trust initiative backed by the Government. http://www.est.org.uk

Adams facing 'impossible' task over arms

TO SIGN up to the two Prime Ministers' declaration on April 13. Gerry Adams will have to do what he and his Sinn Fein colleagues have from the outset insisted they cannot do: persuade the IRA to

It will be an extraordinarily tough task. The IRA does not consider itself to have been defeated and sees disarmament as tantamount to surrender. In Ireland's long history of armed struggle, there is a tradition of arms being put away to rust, but never of their being

The declaration is also likely to be seen as a rewriting of the Good Friday accord as a result of Unionist intransigence. Sinn Fein argued, with some justification, that the accord set no barriers to Sinn Fein's admission to government. However, it does aim to create the best possible environment for Mr Adams to set about the

It guarantees Sinn Fein its two ministerial posts in Northern ireland's government, provided disarmament takes place. (Republicans had hitherto suspected that any act of decommissioning would merely lead to a new demand from

Declaration likely to be seen as rewriting of Good Friday

accord, says Martin Fletcher

Unionists whose real agenda was to keep them out of the executive.) It also does its best to remove any connotations of surrender, or of the IRA having to comply with a Unionist pre-condition that was not in the Good Friday accord.

The document describes decommissioning as an "obliga-tion", not a "pre-condition". It talks of weapons being put "be-yond use", not surrendered or handed over, and of that being done "on a voluntary basis". Decommissioning would be part of an "act of reconciliation" that would involve further moves towards the reduction of the British military presence in Northern Ireland. and could see loyalist paramilitaries giving up arms as well. In other words, the IRA would not be required to act unilaterally in a way that might sug-gest it alone was responsible for the past 30 years of "trou-

The 12-day hiatus while the parties consider the document gets the republican movement past Easter, a hallowed period in its calendar because of the 1916 Easter rising. There would be no barder period for the 1914 to give up against the IRA to give up arms.
It also leaves General John de Chestelain, head of the disarmament body, to determine the manner of decommissioning, not Unionists.

"I don't think we can be confident, but we can be hopeful of moving forward." Mr Adams said The risk for Mr Adams is that he will split the IRA. Some hardliners left in the au-tumn of 1997 because they op-posed the peace process, and the so-called Real IRA was winning fresh recruits from the IRA before last August's Omagh bombing.

Other hardliners, notably in the republican stronghold of South Armagh, have grown disenchanted and may consider the giving up or arms, under whatever guise, to be a step too far.

Sinn Fein leaders Gerry Adams and Martin McGuinness taking a break in negotiations

Fudge allows Trimble to endorse the declaration

By Martin Fletcher, Chief Ireland Correspondent

THE declaration by Tony Blair and Bertie Ahern gives David Trimble just about enough "wriggle room" to endorse it without reneging on his repeated pledges to fellow Unionists never to admit Sinn Fein to Northern Ireland's new executive without a prior act of IRA disarmament

It envisages sbaring out ministerial posts before any decommissioning has taken place: but, at that stage, no devolu-tion from London of actual power to what would effectively be an executive-in-waiting. Mr Trimble can argue that this does not constitute the formation of an executive, or even a shadow executive, and there would be no obvious obligation on him to convene any

The Prime Minister's document blatantly ducks the question of whether devolution of power should take place before or after decommissioning. It merely says that devolution will take place "around the time" of the "act of reconcil-

The document states that decommissioning is an "obligation" under the Good Friday accord and should be completed within two years. Mr Trimble will be able to present that as an unequivocal endorsement by the British and Irish Governments of his interpretation of the accord, as opposed to Sinn Fein's. It also gives Mr Trimble what one official called a "communication cord" if the IRA fails to disarm. It commits all parties to the proposition that if decommissioning does not occur the Assembly will not confirm the nominations to the executive.

"I believe that the declaration has the potential to resolve satisfactorily the problems we have encountered with regard to proceeding with implementing the Good Friday accord," Mr Trimble

However, the First Minister must do a powerful selling job in the next 12 days and may well have to stave off a direct attempt by anti-accord Union-ists to have the declaration re-

Unionists in the Assembly are divided 29-29 between those in favour of the accord and those opposed. If Mr Trimble loses any of those in fa-vour, he will lose his majority. Constitutionally he needs only 40 per cent of the Unionist vote to approve key decisions, but in practice the loss of his majority would mean the loss of his authority.

Technically I could continue if I lost one or more members, but morally I would be defeated and could not carry on much longer," he acknowledged recently.

Anti-accord members of his Ulster Unionist Party need only 60 signatures to convene an emergency meeting of the party's ruling council, where they could force a vote on the declaration.

Mr Trimble. It is doubtful if the dissenters could succeed in calling a meeting before April 13 or that they would win the vote if they did.

'IT WOULD BE A TRAGEDY IF THIS DIFFERENCE OF VIEW ABOUT TIMING . . . PREVENTED THE AGREEMENT FROM ADVANCING'

THE declaration delivered by the Commission has been fegislated opens by emphasising the historic opportunity for a new beginning offered by last year's Good Friday agreement. It then details what has been achieved. Changes to both the Trish Constitution and to British constitutional legislation, based on the principle of consent, had been approved. The Northern Ireland Assembly was elected last June. The international agreement signed in Dublin on March 8 provided for the establishment of the north south implementation bodies.

The Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission had been established and its members appointed, and the new Equality for Comparable steps by Dublin were under way.

The needs of victims of violence and their families were being addressed in both countries. Commitments in the agreement over economic, social and cultural issues were being carried forward.

Steps had been taken towards normalisation of security arrangements and practices, while the Commission on Policing for Northern Ireland and the review of criminal justice were both well advanced in their

There is agreement among all parties that decommissioning is not a precondition but is an obligation deriving from their mitment in the agreement.

and that it should take place within the time-scale envisaged in the agreement, and through the efforts of the Independent International Commission on Decommissioning.

"Sion Fein have acknowledged these obligations but are unable to indicate the timescale on which decommissioning will begin. They do not regard the agreement as imposing any requirement to make a start before the establishment of the new institutions. The UUP do not wish to move to the establishment of the new institutions without some evident progress with

"It would be a tragedy if this difference of view about timing and the sequence of events prevented the implementation of the agreement from advancing.

We believe that decomi will only happen against a implementation is activelymoving forward. Continued progress in establishing the new institutions will in itself create confidence. On the other hand, it is understandable that those who take the next steps in .. implementation should seek to be assured that these steps are... not irrevocable if, in the event, no progress is made with decommissioning "We therefore propose the following way forward.

"On (date to be set) minations will be made under the d'Houdt procedure of those. to take up office as ministers when powers are devolved. At a date to be proposed by the Independent International Commission on reconciliation, powers will be Decommissioning but not later alrevolved and the British-Irish agreement will enter into force nomination dately collective act of reconciliation will take place. This will see sometarms put beyond use on a voluntary basis in a manner which will be verified by the independent the North South Implementation Bodies, the British-Irish Council and the British-Irish Intergover unental Conference.

By (one month after nomination date), the Independent International Councils and the British-Irish Intergover unental Conference.

By (one month after nomination date), the Independent International Councils and the British-Irish Council and the British-Irish Intergover unental Conference.

By (one month after nomination date), the Independent International Councils and the British-Irish Intergover unental Conference.

By (one month after nomination date), the Independent International Councils and the British-Irish Intergover unental Conference.

By (one month after nomination date), the Independent International Councils and the British-Irish Intergover unental Conference.

By (one month after nomination date), the Independ remembrance of all victims of ____ agreement will be achieved if of all parties and the two governments, and all churches,

"Around the time of the act of these steps are taken within the proposed timescales; if they are not taken, the nominations mentioned above will fall to be -confirmed by the assembly."

Add Swiftcall to your BT phone and save on your international calls

BT SWIFICALL SAVING
19p	9p	53%
49p	16p	67%
89p	50p	44%
35p	16p	54%
6lp	36p	41%
	19p 49p 89p 35p	19p 9p 49p 16p 89p 50p 35p 16p

Open a Swiftcall account today and make immediate savings on calls to anywhere in the world.

No need to change your existing number or phone line.

No hidden charges. Quality Customer Service and clear lines. Open an account for as little as £25.

BT* SWIFTCALL SAVING

TO OPEN YOUR SWIFTCALL ACCOUNT:

CALL FREE 08007690022 TODAY

If there's a cost to be squashed, Albart's your man. Take Cavity Wall Insulation. You can now get a £200 Government-sponsored grant towards it. It can save you up to £150 a year on your fuel bills, trained installers can do the job with minimum fuss, and it comes with a 25 year CIGA guarantea.

Sample Property type	Belore £200 grant	After 5200 grant
Mid terrace house	For around £450	For around £250
2-3 Bedroom Sami-detached house	For around £550	For around £350
4 Bedroom Semi-detached house	For around $600	For around $400
3 Bedroom detached house	For around £950	For around $450

Five died after L-driver took bend at 90mph

BY HELEN JOHNSTONE

A PREGNANT learner driver died with her three children and partner after the sports car she was driving crashed as she attempted to overtake at about 90mph on a blind bend.

Maria Allen, 26, who was almost six months' pregnant with twin boys, lost control of the BMW convertible and it collided with a coach on the shire. Ms Allen held only a provisional licence and her partner, Stephen O'Malley. 43, a stonemason, was also unqualified to drive.

The accident happened last August as the couple returned to their home near Louth, Lincolnshire, with Ms Allen's children Laura, eight, Reece, five, and Shannon, one, after visiting relatives in Rotherham, South Yorkshire.

An inquest at Louth was told that Ms Allen had been following friends, John Krol car. Mr Krol told the inquest that Ms Alien had chosen to drive the £31,000 BMW car, which belonged to Mr Snee, because she was more familiar driving an automatic.

Witnesses said Ms Allen had been overtaking a number of cars before the accident and had been unable to pull in before striking an on-coming coach carrying 37 pas-sengers back from a day trip to Skegness. The car spun off the road and into a ditch. where it burst into flames. All five died instantly from head and multiple injuries.

Mr Krol said that Ms Allen a part-time cleaner, passed him before overtaking several other vehicles just before the blind corner, "She must have been travelling at about 90mph. I saw her try to get back on to her side of the road but she lost control and collided with the bus." Mr Krol told the inquest he drove past the scene after panicking at the devastation he saw.

Frederick Rollason, of Dudley, West Midlands, the coach driver, said the car was going too fast for him to avoid the accident: "It was going like a bat out of hell." Neil Sharpley, the coroner, recorded verdicts of unlawful killing against Ms Al-len's three children and Mr O'Malley and of accidental death against Ms Allen.

The Queen presenting Maundy money in Bristol yesterday. She joined prayers at the cathedral for those involved in the Balkans conflict

Mint wants to keep euro out of Maundy

By MARK HENDERSON

THE Royal Mint is seeking ways to keep the Queen's Maundy money in sterling should Britain join the euro.

As the Queen distributed the specially minted coins to 146 pensioners in Bristol yesterday, Mint officials said they planned to protect the custom of paying the money in lp, 2p. 3p and 4p pieces should the pound be abolished.

"The Crown would try to maintain sterling," a Mint spokesman said. We would not want to pay it in euros."

A Mint committee has already noted the potential impact of the euro on the future of the ancient alms. The Treasury Solicitor is to be consulted with a view to writing special protection for the Maundy coins into the legislation to change the currency.

Difficulties could arise as Maundy money has always been the legal tender — it went decimal along with other coinage in 1971. Buckingham Palace declined to comment yesterday on the future of the pay-

During yesterday's Maundy ceremony, which was held at Bristol Cathedral, the Queen joined prayers for those suffering in the Balkans con-flict. Canon Peter Johnson said: "Let us bring before our heavenly Father the present conflict and suffering in the Balkans, and pray for the countless numbers of people made homeless and refugees now being undertaken." The Queen handed out two purses to each of the 73 male and 73 female pensioners chosen for their work for Christian charities: the number of recipients and the amount given depend on the monarch's age. Each white purse contained 73 pence in silver coins, and the red one contained £5.50 in ordinary money, a traditional allowance for food and clothing originally paid in

.kind.

An additional alms dish was used for the first time this year because of the large number of recipients. The fourth gold and silver plate, which dates from the reign of Charles II but has a Queen Anne in Kosovo, and for all the work crowned rose in the centre, has of humanitarian aid that is a wide border within a flower and leaf motif with images of a horse, bull, boar and stag. The ceremony dates back almost 800 years to the reign of one of the Queen's less illustrious predecessors. King John is the first monarch to have been recorded dispensing alms to the worthy poor on Maundy Thursday, at Knaresborough in Yorkshire in 1210, the same > of the poor before handing out alms - originally food and clothing — was adopted by his successors, but became an anmual event attended in person by the Sovereign only under the present Queen.

Edward III instituted in year he was forced to sign

Magna Carta. The ceremony, in which the monarch once washed the feet 1363 the practice of marking the monarch's age in the cere-mony, and Elizabeth I was the first to pay money rather than goods in kind.

Coins are minted in values of Ip. 2p, 3p and 4p, making a 10p set, and recipients get one such set for each decade in the Sovereign's age. The value is then topped up to equal the age with extra Ip coins. Maundy money is also handed out to choirboys and officials who take part in the service.

The coins are the only silver coins still issued in Britain. They feature the youthful likeness of the monarch for the en-

Woman who sought new life is killed in crash

A woman who left South Yorkshire early this year to find a new life in Tenerife with her childhood sweetheart has been killed in an accident on the island. Laura Barratt (right) and John Anderson had known each other since primary school days. Last week Miss Barratt, 19, was killed while riding pillion on a friend's sports motorcycle that went out out of control on a minor road. Yesterday Mr Anderson, 21, said:

We were making all sorts of plans and just before Laura died we were walking by the sea and she found a beautiful pebble. She gave it to me and told me to keep it for ever. I found another pebble that looked exactly the same and I gave it to her to keep for ever." An inquest will open later this month in Chesterfield.

stubbed out

A burglar who was identified from DNA in saliva found on cigarette butts he left at the scene of his crimes was jailed for two years yesterday. David Newell, 32, broke into two homes at night and stole antiques and personal belongings. Foreusic experts. in a fingertip search of the properties, found the butts with flecks of saliva, and carried out DNA tests. The national DNA database matched them with samples collected from Newell after a previous conviction, and he was traced and arrested. Newell, of Melksham, Wiltshire, who had admitted two charges of burglary, was sentenced at Swindon

Life of crime Car is hit by hurled trolley

A car carrying two people was struck by a shopping trolley thrown from a footbridge, police said. The trolley was deliberately hurled from a footbridge over Crewe Road North in Edinburgh, Lothian and Borders Police said. Keith Adam, 23, the car's driver, and girlfriend, Karlyn Moughan, 21, of Edinburgh, were unhurt by the incident. yesterday morning.

A police spokesman said: "Luckity the occupants escaped without injury, but were shaken by the experience. This was an utterly reckless act that could have resulted in serious injuries and anyone with information about the incident should contact us. He asked for help from anyone who saw anything suspicious.

Asda flouts EU ruling

Asda has defied European regulations by importing designer sunglasses from outside the EU. The low-priced imports have enabled about 200 Asda stores to sell brands such as Ray Ban. Calvin Klein, Versace, Armani and Gucci for as little as 40 per cent of manufacturers' recommended prices. In a crackdown on such discounting last year, the EU ruled that companies could buy goods from sources other than the prodocer only if they were within the EU. An Asda spokeswoman said that the sunglasses were obtained from both within and outside Europe.

CORRECTIONS

A report yesterday wrongly quoted Robert Slack, a university lecturer who won a claim for unfair dismissal and £13,000 compensation, as saying to his department head: "You are going to die, sunshine." In fact, the words used by Mr Slack were: "You are finished, sunshine," intended as a reference to his colleague's career. We apologise for the error.

D Numbers t60-162 Queen Victoria Street, London, are being developed as offices by QVS Developments Ltd, and not, as wrongly reported on March 20, by Skidmore Owings and Merrill as flats.

queditions, set at your local offices. With Enganed, disconsted or Send interest pales, the species delined on the Enganeers of the proceeding on the Enganeers of the Send of Send interest pales, the species delined on the Enganeers of the Send of Send interest pales are represented from the period at many change year, a represent time of the period of the species data have represented from the Enganeers of the species data have represented that have represented from the Enganeers of the Send of S

YOUR HOME IS AT RISK IF YOU DO NOT KEEP UP REPAYMENTS ON A MORTGAGE OR OTHER LOAN SECURED ON IT. Halifax pic represents only the Halifax Financial Services Marketing Group which is regulated by the Personal Investment Authority for life assurance, pensions and unit trusts.

Your mind's racing ahead, picking carpets and curtains.

Wouldn't you like to know if you can afford the house first?

While you're dreaming about it, someone else is probably buying it. So find out in a few minutes exactly how much you can spend and how much it will cost you each month to repay. (Relatively little probably, considering our mortgage rates are extremely attractive.)

2 YEAR DISCOUNTED VARIABLE $\pounds 190^\circ$ per month 4.1% apr BASED ON 160 000 LOAN, NO ARRANGEMENT FEE.

CALL 0800 20 30 49

Lines open 8am-8pm 7 days a week or drop into your local branch.

flights to leave in the evening. This ensures that your working day, or your weekend leisure time, won't be disrupted. (With 99.5% of flights leaving and arriving on time you won't be delayed either. It also means that when you arrive in Japan it will be tate afternoon, allowing you time to relax overnight.

At Japan Airlines we deliberately schedule our

So when you arrive for your meeting you'll be as prepared and composed as possible. Being on time, however, is down to you.

For flight bookings or more information call JAL on 0345 747 700 or contact your travel agent.

A BETTER APPROACH TO BUSINESS

Midnight fireworks in Iqaluit mark the birth of the territory of Nunavut yesterday

Mounties to say sorry as new territory is born

CANADA'S newest and large est territory came into being yesterday with a midnight firework display in sub-zero weather, a feast of raw seal meat, and the promise of an apology from the Royal Canadian Mounted Police for their past sins against native Inuits. Nunavut, meaning "our land", boasts 750,000 caribou but only one human per 39 square miles. In the first redrawing of the North American map in half a century, it became a separate territory at a shivering dignitaries. The vast new entity, bigger than France, Germany, Italy and Spain combined, was hailed by its new leaders as an unprecedented experiment in self-government for native Canadians. Jane Stewart, the Indian Affairs Minister, called it proof we are committed to rec-ceremony attended by 1.000

onciling aboriginal rights".

Promises of self-determination and lavish federal funding brought an astonishing 99 per cent of voters to the polls in the region's remotest districts. far north of the Arctic Circle. when its first election was held last month to return 19 delegates to a new assembly in the territorial capital of loaluit, on southern Baffin Island.

Hopes were high yesterday that Nunavut could reverse the dire social problems plaguing its Inuits, who comprise 85

LINKS

bittle://www.smmbour.st.cn/about. html://www.smmbour.st.cn/about. html://www.smmbour.st.cn/abo lands in the 1950s, older natives languish on welfare and 3,000 of Iqaluit's 4,500 population receive federal support. TV talk per cent of the population but suffer from rampant drug and alcohol abuse and a suicide rate six times the national average. Nothing reflected the challenge more than its new lead-ers: Paul Okalik, the territory's first Premier, and James

Arvaluk, the Education Minister, have both served jail terms

Haunted by the trauma of forced relocations by police to the region's northernmost is-for alcohol-related offences.

WORLD IN BRIEF

More deaths on Spice Islands

The Spice islands have been hit by a fresh outbreak of Christian-Muslim violence that has claimed several lives, including those of a priest and his son (David Watts writes). By last ing those of a priest and his son (David Watts writes). By last night clashes on Ambon island involving machetes, arrows and shotguns had killed seven and injured many more, prompting people to flee. The latest unrest, sparked by anti-Muslim graffiti and a property dispute, centres on the town of Tual. 330 miles southeast of the provincial capital Ambon, which has seen some 200 people die in sectarian violence since languary.

Quake aid 'too slow'

Gwai, India: Reports of inadequate relief efforts dominated national newspapers as another tremor toppled buildings in the Himalayan mountains of northern India yesterday, killing one person. Authorities feared more deaths in aftershocks from Monday's quake, in which at least 100 people died. The head of government of the stricken Indian state said he lacked the money to cope with the disaster. (AP)

Anwar trial ends

Kuala Lumpur: The marathon trial on four corruption charges of Anwar Ibrahim. the ousted Malaysian Deputy Prime Minister, has ended after 77 days with the judge saying he needed extra time to give his verdict. Judge Augustine Paul postponed giving a verdict from April 6 to April 14, saying that the length of the submissions from both sides meant that shows in dock for murder

By DAMIAN WHITWORTH IN WASHINGTON

TRASH television talk shows are about to be exposed in a trial after a murder that involved a male participant who was confronted by an admirer who turned out to be a man. Jonathan Schmitz says that when he went on a chat show to discover which of his friends had a secret crush on him he expected to be confronted with a woman. Instead he was introduced to his friend, Scott Amedure, who went on to outline his fantasy involving the two of them, lashings of whipped cream, strawberries and champagne. Three days later Mr Schmitz bought a shotgun, went to Mr Ame-dure's home and killed him. The Jenny Jones Show, which engineered the encounter, is charged with complicity in the death. Geoffrey Fleger. the prosecution lawyer, will

AND MONITOR UPGRADE NOW ON

17" MONITOR UPGRADE OFFER EXTENDED FOR A LIMITED PERIOD ONLY

SPECIAL OFFER

PRICES EXCLUDE DELIVERY

CC DADY DONICHIDGE DONO SALFORDS REDIBILE SURREY RH1 5YB, FAX 01293 822 514. WWW.tiny.com

VISIT YOUR LOCAL TINY SHOWROOM OR CALL FREEPHONE FOR MORE INFORMATION

731 9372 think big about your PC...think TINY

TINY OnLine REE internet access on all Tiny systems

NOTHING to pay UNTIL APRIL

2000 On All Systems

MOST OPEN 9AM TO 8PM MON-SAT Sunday opening hours apply to most showrooms

OR BANK HOLIDAY MONDAY. Call for details.

BEDFORD & AYLESBURY

NOW OPEN. LINCOLN* LONDON W1 YLESBURY LONDON EC2* LUTON BEXLEYHEATH LONDONDERR MAIDSTONE MANCHESTER MEADOWHALL SHEFFIELD" MIDDLESEROUG PRACKNELL MILTON KEYNES NEWCASTLE* NEWPORT NORTHAMPTON BROMLEY NORWICH

NOTTINGHAM OXFORD CHELMSFORD PETERBOR CHELTENHAM PLYMOUTH CHESTER" PORTSMOUTH COLCHESTER READING" CRAWLEY ROMFORD* CROYDON SHREWSBURY DONCASTE

DURHAM

EALING

EAST KILBRIDE

EDINBURCH

ENFIELD

GLASGOW

GLOUCESTER*

GUILDFORD

GRIMSBY

HOUNSLOW

HUDDERSFIELD

SLOUGH* SOUHULL SOUTHAMPTON SOUTHEND STEVENAGE STOKE-ON-TREN SUNDERLAND SUTTON" SWANSEA SWINDON' TAUNTON

WALTHAMSTON WATFORD

It's hip to have a square

SIX OF THE BEST

Noteworthy

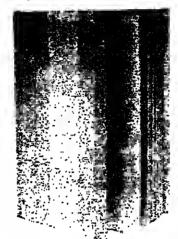

notebooks

EMBROIDERED, £37 Expensive but the fuchsia silk grasshopperembroidered book cover is removable, extending the life of this Vietnamese embroidered trinket. Minh Mang, 182 Battersea Park Road SW11 (0171-498 3233) 10/10

GREY FELT, £59 Thick and made from felt, this has handles - doubling as a cool bag seen on the laps of fashion editors at showtime. Nicole Farhi Home, 17 Clifford Street W1 (0171-494 9051)

BORN TO SHOP, £25 Made in leather, etched in gold and filled with the trademark lined blue paper. this is for the serious shopaholic who needs to catalogue excessive purchasing and future desires. Smythson, 40 New Bond Street W1 (0171-629 8558)

PINK PLASTIC, £4.50 Available in a huge array of colours and sizes with a hand-made paper with plastic cover and metal tag holder for correct labelling. Plain white paper inside. Paperchase, 3-4 Percy Street W1 (0171-580 8496)

CHECK, £7.25 Checked silk fabric in pastel Purple suede book of shades of lilac, mint and pink. Beautiful chunky note-book with paper in alternate not", "joy" and "adventure" sheets of purple and green. Paperchase, 3-4 Percy Street W1 (0171-580 8496) embossed on the front. Conran Shop, 81 Fulham Road SW3 (0171-589 7401)

SUEDE, £29.95

COMPILED BY DEBORAH BRETT.

HOT TIP

Eyebrows may shape the face but blondes have a tendency to end up looking like The answer is Ruby & Millie's eyebrow-shaper pallette in Zero: half is colour; half a clear balm to keep brows in shape. £8 from Ruby & Millie at large Boots stores nationwide (0171-636 7911).

t is hard to see how the innocent headscarf got itself such a bad reputation. But there it is. The very word summons up visions of redoubtable females of a certain age, their heads wrapped in a firmly knotted length of material with which they are keeping in place their lower jaw (if posh) or their curlers (if not). Still, the caprices of fashion work in unexpected ways, and after the unlikely rehabilitation of such terminally uncool articles as the Dr Scholl sandal, the desert boot and the Liberty flower print, it is now the headscarf's turn for a moment of fashion glory.

My mother, when I was growing up, always used to have at least two headscarves on the go - one knotted under her chin in the manner favoured by the Queen when she is out riding, and another attached to the handle of her bag. What the point of the second one was is anybody's guess. Bandage? Emergency dog lead? Fallback handkerchief? Blindfold for leading panicking horses out of a blazing stable? Whatever its theoretical purpose. I never saw the handbag scarf in action - although quite often they would stealthily unde themselves and get lost, which resulted in a good deal of lamentation and a private resolution on my part never to bother with anything so pointless. But recantation is second nature to fashion victims. So I am only slightly surprised to find myself the doting owner of two glossy silk squares from which, this time last year, I would have recoiled with contempt. The process of conver-sion began with Hermes. For a long time I have admired the exquisite workmanship and intricate beauty of that company's classic silk without ever really wanding to own one - too grand, I felt, for my somewhat haphazard look (Jane Birkin on a good day. the White Queen on a bad one). But this season, alongside its distinctive classics, Hermès has produced a clutch of fresh, breezy designs: small silk squares to de at the nape of the neck, peasant-style liuxe peasant, admittedly) and, for the beach or a summer picnic cotton squares that claim to be machine-washable. The designs, too, are less hieratic, brighter, with a strong element of fantastical narraove. Each scarf is described in the Hermes promotional bookles with a sort of little prose poem. "Each earthly day dying in blazing agony, so that each dawn can be reborn in the quartz of alarm clocks . . . " runs the baffling text that accompanies Cosmos, a very pretty sky-blue design with Apollo in his chariot and a scattering of jacquard stars.

This kind of thing may enrage you or amuse you, depending on your tolerance for the French habit of intellectualising everything. even scarves. It should not deter you from invesogating the collection, contains some dazzlingly pretty ideas, includ-JANE SHILLING

ing Charmes des Plages Normandes a seaside scene in vivid colours. Azulejos, a delicate pale-blue design based on 18th-century Portuguese oles, and Amours, a giant daisy surrounded by cupids, mistle-toe, bees and other symbols of love.

Large scarves are around £160, smaller ones £52. Conton scarves, including a 1930s-inspired pattern with aircraft and famous pilots, are £110, and there are even children's silk scarves, packaged in little "book" boxes, printed with a complete story — choose from The Fick-le Budgerigar, Clovis the Crocodile or Loula's Summer, E63.

If these prices make you reel, Laura Ashley is putting up a brave show as a poor girl's Hermes, with some inspired Italian silk prints for around £30. Cream silk squares with delicate 19th-century bicyclists in pale blue and navy, or a garden design of bay trees, classical urns. flowerpots and artists' palettes are £30, or for £25 there is a small silk chiffon square with a French harbour scene of narrow houses and lit-

Liberty takes up the horticultural theme with small squares printed with sweet peas, nasturtiums and daisies, E49. Larger versions of the same design are E75. Stylised sun-flowers on silk chiffon are E95.

These Liberty prints reflect per-fectly the spirit of the Libertyinspired sundresses and floaty skirts now to be had in every store from Jigsaw to Joseph. But if you feel like getting creative over East-er. Liberty's fabric department has bolts of material in matching prints. By Easter Monday you could have run up a little frock. Add a straw basket and a pair of espadrilles, and there you are, transformed at the flick of a headscarf into an Eric Roehmer heroine.

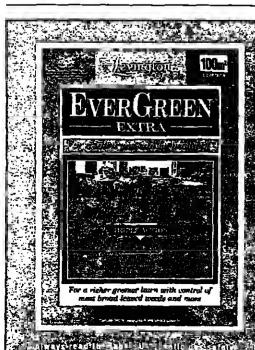

Aluminium tins come in various shapes and sizes. Stylish way to store anything from teabags to spagnetti. From £12-£30 at Debenhams (0171-408 4444)

■ Eau de nilcoloured bubble bath is made from blue algae, spirulina and sea kelp. In a delightful frosted glass bottle with a gushy message written on it, Message in a Bottle is almost too beautiful to use. £20 by Philosophy, from Space NK (0870 169 9999) Pass the care

My en en et

A BETTER LAWN BY DIAC BY COMMENCE

Just one application of EverGreen Extra will give you a n in just seven days. What's more it helps ds and moss. And when your lawn looks good

EVERGREEN

ibwe you ever used EverGreen betom? case Sci um ber if you do

ا حكدا سالامل

My mother, the football fan

At the age of 74, the mother of Mark Palmer has become a keen supporter of Reading love to watch a football match at the new Read-ing stadium," my 74-year-old mother said without warning one day over Sunday lunch. I thought little of it at the time. She had seemed to mention it in passing in the way that people say they would love to have lunch, but the diary never gets opened.

My mother's Saturday afternoon passions have rarely straved beyond turning over the compost heap in her country garden, visiting friends or supporting local charioes in her role as a Deputy Lieutenant of Berkshire.

So I took my son to the next home game and afterwards we called in for tea and chocolate biscuits and she said: "You are lucky. He never takes me." I was on the telephone to the Reading box office on Monday morning before you could shout "Come on you Rs." Best seats in the house, please. Next to the directors' box. My mother and me.

It was to be Reading versus Wycombe Wanderers. Not exactly a top of the table clash. but a local derby on a spring afternoon in a spanking new £35 million all-seater stadium just off the M4 at Exit 11.

She had nearly two weeks to prepare. So did I. She had never been to a football matchunless you count standing on a muddy touchline watching me play for the under-tens in the Sixties. I always assumed that she hated the game. Unlike my father. We used to go to watch Reading together - in fact it was one of the last things we did before he died. But, come to think of it, my mother did show an unexpected degree of interest in the World Cup. I remember her ringing me in France when England got knocked out and sounded genuinely steamed up about the man she called "David Beckenham". The pre-match build-up was intense. My mother has been ill and cannot walk far, so I telephoned the stadium and they kindly provided a parking space next to the main entrance. Then my mother got butterflies about getting stuck in traffic. She wanted to leave home at noon, which would mean getting there almost three hours before kick-off. "Just to be on the safe side."

I called the stadium again

t was her idea. "I would and booked us in for the threecourse, £24.99 lunch in the Royal Restaurant and hoped that each course would take an hour. Then there was the quesoon of what she should wear. "You'll be in a tie, won't you?" she asked. I said I would not and that we were going to a football match, not to the members' enclosure at Newbury

> Madejski Stadium (my mother in her Husky jacket, silk scarf and handbag not dissimilar to the one the Queen carries when on duty), she made a dash for the Megastore where you can practically furnish your house and dress from head to toe in Reading FC mer-said, before stopping at the sweatshirt section and persuading me to buy an old-style Reading shirt with a number 9 on the back in memory of our most famous player, Robin Friday, who died of booze and as possible and were in our seats by 2.45pm, only to learn that the kick-off had been delayed 15 minutes. No matter. She was enjoying the chants and rose to her feet when our lot began singing: "If you hate Wycombe stand large man with a long ponytail was sitting in front of us and his language was colourful, but it didn't faze my mother. Then she turned against the referee for giving the "red team", as she called them, an unnecessary number of free kicks. Her blood boiled when one of our defenders got a thump in the head.

Reading scored, but then Wycombe were awarded a penalty and we had a man sent off in the process. They missed the penalty, but by that stage my mother was confused. She shirts and realised Reading had only ten men. It took until half-time to explain that we would be playing with ten meo for the rest of the match.

"What lovely slippers," she

We stretched lunch as long

She went walkahout near the pie stand during the break. When I found her she was engaged in conversation with an elderly couple. The man had been coming to watch Reading since 1943, but this was the first time he had

Pass me another

A game of two halves: Mark Palmer and his mother at the £35 million Madejski Stadium. They got there three hours before kick-off, just to be on the safe side brought his wife. The two football virgins got on famously and my mother was surprised that the second half started without her.

Reading scored a second. She said: "This is wonderful." Then Wycombe pulled one back and she got nervous. With five minutes to go I suggested it might be wise to leave so as to miss the queues.

"We can't go now," she said, "it's far too exciting." Reading held on and at the final whistle pitch and smiled broadly. She was 74 going on 14.

It took us nearly an hour to get out of the car park. Then she said: "Can we come next

I think we'll be on the coach to Wigan before the season's up, my mother wearing the polyester away strip with a number 9 on the back, waving a can of lager above her head.

The UK's Biggest PC Retailer

EASTER

Save over £400

on many models see in-store for details

Discover the magic of digital photography with this complete package that includes top spec FamilyPC, digital camera, printer, scanner and much more

Buy the EXEC model now & pay nothing until March 2000 with our No Deposit, Interest Free Option!

400-3D PhotoStudio PC

AMD 400MHz K6-2 3D processor * 3D Now! Technology for the best 3D performance • 64Mb SDRAM . 4.3Gb Hard disk . 32x CD-ROM Drive 8Mb ATI 3D AGPx2 Graphics • 3D

Soundblaster 64PCI Wavetable sound • 14" digital colour screen • 512K cache

 56K PCI voice/fax/data modern All standard features including 1.44Mb floppy drive, Windows 98, Kayboard, Mouse, Video trainer, Recovery disk. AntiVirus & all software backup CDs

EXEC Model: Include 5 top games, joystick. gameped, microphone, and 13 extra CD fitles for just $39 plus VAT=$116.33 Extra. toduct codes: Photo 400-3D 14" 381, Exec 14" 360

PLUS Digital Camera

Superb digital camera that use no ilim and comes complete with a/c adapter RRP £239. Simply take snaps and load them in to your PC.

pellets on the off chance of discovering a novel snack. Did these Vietnamese pi Epson Stytus 300, 720 dpi oneers experiment with colour inliget printer allows you to print out your pictures (RRP £119).

Choice of printer

Advanced A4

colour scanner

also works as a photocopier and

tex machine (RRP £119)

6 Extra Items

IBM Speech software • 7 Lotus business packs

Two Special Finance Options

1. Pay Nothing Until March 2000

12 Months Interest Free Option on Exec models only

• 7 home titles • 7 Educational Titles

· Family + Pack · Modern Internet Pack

cables at extra cost.

Haven't these people

Can you imagine how demoralising this must be for young civets trying to make their name in the paramilitary movement? (Civet Commander: "How did the dirty protest go, young tire-brand?" Civet Firebrand: "I think they ate it". Commander: "Ha ha, that'll make them choke, and teach them not to mess with civets." Firebrand: "Actually, they loved it. They've gone looking for more." Commandor "Yuk! They're nothing but animals.")

Our promise

take the time to understand your needs for clear explanations in plain English not jargon to cut out the middleman and cut the cost of computers to visit us we probably have a Time store with easy parking, within 15 minutes drive of your home

the right PC, call into your local we're on your side

that's the UK's largest PC retailer NOW OPEN IN BLUEWATER & BYFLEET

oday I have something important to ask those of you who (a) count your-

(b) also have medical cover which does not specifically exclude treatment for illnesses re-

Tell me honestly: did you find that your sulting from the ingestion of animal poop.

selves true coffee connoisseurs, and not leaving his shop until he provides you with coffee beans which were once civel faeces - just like the prized Vietnamese coffee you just read about in The Wall Street Journal. For those of you who think nobody would actually drink a liquid made from the stools of a foxlike animal, the Journal reports that there's nothing tastier than coffee brewed UNDERNEATH from civet poop - at least to a thirsty Vietnamense. "With its long, sensitive snout," the Journal report-"this finicky eater is legening out the best ripe robusta coffee beans and eating them from the low branches of the coffee bush. The hardiest beans survive the digestive process intact and, according to aficionados, are improved by it." Samantha Marshall, who reported this scoop, says the flavour's best if you don't wash the beans.

cup of civet poop selves have become a delicacy at Vietnamense dinner tables, thereby reducing the number of civet colons working on coffee production" (though, obviously, if you eat the right civet you can save time by consuming your dinner and your coffee in one go).

The other thing you try to imagine is: how did the first Vietnamese forest-stroller come to stare at civet doodoo and think, "I'll bet that makes a tasty beverage"? I've eaten plen ty of food that tasted like dung, but it would never occur to me to chew a pile of animal > many different strains of animal faeces over the dec ades before hitting the jackpot with civet dung? heard of instant coffee? Wait - what if instant coffee is made from rare civet poop? That would certainly explain why the man in those Gold Blend commercials dithered for two years before finally summoning up the courage to kiss Sharon Maugham.

The worrying thing for zoologists may be that strewing its ordure all over the forest could just be the civet's way of protesting at man's encroachment of its forest habitat the civet's equivalent of those IRA dirty protests: and we're lapping it upl

Og APR No deposit in 12 months after pay cash price of $1800 APR 0% or 36 months at $16.65 Total price $1700.00 APR 28.6%.

2 Time Low APR Purchase Plan OD SAN MODE 14.9 APR Cash price CUCIL Re deposed on 48 reventies at 127.33. Total price CTS11.84 APR 14.5%.

A timely reminder for all tyrants

Michael Pinto-Duschinsky

examines the Sawoniuk verdict

The conviction of Anthony Sawoniuk has a significance far beyond ensuring justice for the Jews he killed in Belarus in 1942. It vindicates the courage of a small band of politicians. including Lord Janner. Lord Merlyn-Rees. Lord Hurd of Westwell and Lord Patten. who, as MPs, fought fierce prejudice in the Lords to enact the War Crimes legislation under which the trial was brought. It also provides a warning to loday's tyrants, not least in the Balkans.

Doubtless, there will be the usual cries on behalf of the guilty men of the Nazi era. Why now? Is it not ome to forgive and forget the horrors of Nazism for the sake of the new Europe? Will not "revenge" lead to renewed ano-Semitism? Already, these arguments are being assiduously deployed by the Deutsche Bank. Volkswagen and other enterprises which are lobbymg to avoid their own obligadons to the past, to compensate former slave labourers.

"Why now?" is simple. Throughout the Cold War, Western governments were unwilling to deal with Germany's Nazi past. The fall of the Berlin Wall not only toppled the Soviet empire, it removed the justifications that had been used for half a century to deny jusoce.

It became the pol-icy of the Allies in the late 1940s to Nazis were let off the turn a "blind eye to murder". Even while the Nuremberg trials were taking place there were pressures to focus on the Sovier Union as the enemy and to bring the war crimes prosecutions against Nazis to an end. In the early 1950s, Bonn exacted a heavy price for supporting the West against Stalin. It secured the release from prison and the rehabilitation of business leaders such as Friedrich Flick and Alfried Krupp, as well as kid-glove treatment for those who had been convicted as leaders of the "Special Killing Squads" on the Eastern Front. The CIA and MI6 saw no point in bringing Nazi murdercrs to trial: it was better to use them for operations against the Soviet occupation of Eastern Europe. Whether the recruitment of Nazis for Cold War duties was justified as "realpoliók" remains a matter of argument. But the fact that "de-Nazification" was abandoned so quickly had a devastating effect on the moral recovery of West Germany and the consequences are still with us. Not only did many murderers walk free, pro-Nazi historians retained their university chairs and tainted civil servants and bankers were restored to power. Opponents of the Hitler regime had to struggle for meagre compensation. In contrast, the widow of Reinhard Heydrich, the Nazi leader who organised the Wansee conference which planned the Final Soludon, received a large pension and lump sum. Even Lord Shawcross, who as Sir Hariley Shawcross had been Britain's main prosecutor at Nuremberg, seemed affected by the Cold War mood. After the poliocal deci-his will) to curtail the war crimes trials, he became a friend — as he admits in his memoirs — of the notorious Hermann Abs. Convicted for war crimes in Yugoslavia. Abs had escaped prosecution by the Allies for his wartime activioes at the helm of the Deutsche Bank. According to American official investigators. Deutsche Bank "per-formed the functions of a 'house bank' to i. G. Farben". which had a factory at Auschwitz. Lord Shawcross was later a strong opponent in the Lords of the War Crimes Bill. The fact that Sawoniuk has been brought to trial - a careful act of justice, not revenge - will bring relief to many victims of the Nazis. In small measure, it compensates for the failures of the Cold War era. Sawoniuk will be one of the last perpetrators of the Holocaust to face a court of law. But there are other ways in which the unfinished issues from that terrible ome can now be tackled. Politicians in Germany have long called for statutes of limitations drawing a final line under the Holocaust. But it is not possible by decree to end the nightmares of survivors and the distress passed on to their children.

So many hook in the Cold

There are three anodotes to the poisonous legacy of the Nazi regime: first, education and truth about the Holocaust. Second, the legal obstacles, de-nials and excuses which continue to pour from the Gerauthorides man and its major corporations must end. The unsatisfactory

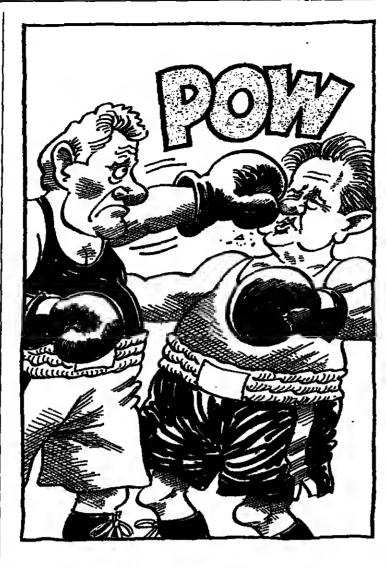

War compensation given under Germany's patchy restitution laws must be replaced by a willingness to meet the financial claims of surviving slave labourers and their families. Third, survivors of the Holocaust are especially concerned to prevent limit and punish the genocides of today. The ease with which leading Nazis were allowed to retain their freedom and money clearly indicated that crime does pay, provided it is on a sufficiently large scale. That must never happen again. The proposed permanent international war crimes court must be backed.

¬ he unfolding tragedy in the Balkans only lends urgency to the need for justice which transcends borders. It may be facile to regard President Milosevic as a latterday Hitler. There is a tendency to ignore the mischief of the countries which poured arms into Croatia in the early 1990s. The support given for anti-Slav movements by Germany is in line with its tradicional geopolities. But the provocations against Yugoslavia in no way excuse Serb brutalities. The atrocities of anti-Serb forces are equally inexcusable, though they have been on a smaller scale.

Those responsible for current mass murders must be brought to trial without regard to which side they are on. f this happens, human rights in Europe may come to be respected at last and the survivors of the Holocaust will have a measure of reassurance and hope.

sion had been taken (against comment@the-times.co.uk

For evil to triumph...

en years is a long time, double the duration of the Second World War. In the past ten years, the peace of southern Europe has been shat-tered, proud old cides pulverised, mosques and churches, villages and farmsteads emptied and burnt, millions made homeless, hundreds of thousands murdered, tortured or maimed and communities whose extensive inter-marriage declared their religious and cultural tolerance ripped apart.

Vukovar, Srebrenica, Mostar, whose dynamited Turkish bridge symbolised an assault on history Itself. Sarajevo, which gloried in its crowded juxtaposition of Roman Catholic and Orthodox churches, mosques and synagogues. These are the terrible markers on the long road to Pristina and Pec — and from there, perhaps, to Skopje and beyond? These places of devastation should be as important to us as those cides, trapped behind the Iron Curtain, that Churchill counted "from Stettin in the Baltic, to Trieste on the Adriatic". They too represent an open wound cut through the heart of Europe, a gash that continues bloodily to be carved.

The touch-paper of the Balkan conflagration was lit in Kosovo, by the inflammatory rhetoric of one man, Slobodan Milosevic. Exactly ten years ago, Mr Milosevic imposed a state of emergency in Kosovo, arrested local politicians for "counter-revolutionary activides" and threw ethnic Albanians out of its schools and universities. Mr Milosevic, then a Communist apparatchik, saw in nationalist irredentism his road to political power. To stay in power, he still manipulates the politics of hatred. the war-drum that drowns out opposition to a regime that has been almost as disastrous for the Serbs as il has for the dozen other nationalities of the Yugoslavia that has violently been torn apart.

it must end in Kosovo; and Britain has both a duty and a vital interest in playing its part. Otherwise the blaze will spread south and east with hundreds of thousands more victims of war fleeing north and west. And this inescapably requires military force. Diplomatic containment has been tried, ome and ome again, and it has failed. Literally dozens of peace conferences, itinerant mediators and coercive diplomacy have, in this decade, succeeded at best in conjuring a provisional, tattered peace out of the

Nato's intervention in Kosovo is a necessary sacrifice for our nation's security, says Rosemary Righter

Nato must to rattle

sabres

only to sheath

them

graveyard. Lords Carrington and Owen, Cyrus Vance, the formidable Richard Holbrooke and a whole parade of Russians have been given Mr Milosevic's word, on Croatia, then on Bosnia, now on Kosovo, only to see him tear up his pledges the moment the threat of coercion was lifted or its credibility in doubt.

Rosovo, where he promised last October to withdraw his troops to barracks, halt the massacres of civilians and negotiate a settlement that protected the rights of all, is only the latest victim of his familiar tactic of using talks to stay the West's hand while his forces create. through bloodshed.

"facts on the ground".

Nothing could be more bleakly clear than that this cycle can be ended only by force majeur, and only by Nato. Fire must be fought with fire. The first words that politicians summon to explain why a country's troops are to be sent into action tend to set the tone of debate. Tony Blair chose to give "one simple reason", that was "... to prevent Milosevic from continuing to perpetuate his vile repression against innocent Albanian civilians". While it is fair to say that he has since tried hard to set out the strategic reasons why it was in Britain's national interest to be so heavily engaged, it was a mistake to open the case in quite this manner. The onslaught was under way, and Mr Milosevic could be guaranteed to intensify it in the hope that appalled Western publics would decide that Nato was making bad worse, and call a halt.

Bill Clinton was wiser to insist that Nato had to act "to defuse a powder-keg at the heart of Europe"; but he would have been wiser still to state that this would be a massive, long-term and dangerous venture. undertaken because the alternative, an uncontrollable regional war, was both too appalling and damaging to Nato to contemplate.

The subsequent political to-andfro about whether this is a "humanitarian intervention", or a war to restore stability and the rule of law to the European continent, risks confusion. It is both. It is only by enforcing respect for international law, which has been systematically violated in Kosovo, that future humanitarian disasters can be averted and Europe made a safer place.

Mr Milosevic's political survival depends on proving that Nato is powerless to enforce the peace. He would be driving Albanians out of Kosovo with or without Nato airstrikes; if he has intensified the terror, it is for three reasons.

The first is a ruthless gamble on the wholly proper squeamishness of Western Dublic opinion.

The criminal ferocity of Serb forces has stilled any doubts about the legitimacy of Nato's acnot be seen tion; but it has also, as he intends, intensified scepticism about the efficacy of airstrikes against highly mobile ground forces. That risk, for Nato, is at its greatest now.

The second reason is that, unlike many Western civilians, Mr Milosevic does not underestimate Nato. But he does calculate that he can destroy the Kosovan Albanian majority irreversibly, before his military machine is pulverised. The Yugoslav Army, alarmed at its vulnerability in the face of potential attack from Croatia. could then press him to negotiate. But it would be a Carthaginian peace.

The third impulse which drives

Mr Milosevic's escalation is the aim of maximising the force of the shock waves, so as to produce civil conflict in Yugoslavia's neighbours. He would then have demonstrated that Nato had failed in its strategic objective of prevending a wider war. In this, refugees are a weapon.

His is a calculated megalomania. Nato must reckon with the possibility that he would not shrink from taking what is left of Yugoslavia over the precipice, so long as he took Nato too; but he expects the democracies to hesitate in horror, well before he confronts that choice Western leaders must respond both by increasing and adjusting the focus of the military campaign, as they are now doing, and by wresting back the political initiative. The political task has two dimensions. They must ensure that their own publics understand why, in addition to the humanitarian and moral imperatives, the dangers to European peace reach to their own front doors. They are so grave that Nato has no choice but to act in defence of their collective security.

urope includes the Balkans. They divide the EU and border Nato. Another Balkan war would endanger the alliance's southern flank, a world of ethnic melting pots and disputed frontiers. The strains on Macedonia, which Greece recog-nised only reluctantly, are already apparent. Were it to implode, or if Mr Milosevic were to order troops to go to the defence of "fellow Serbs" there, other countries, including Bulgaria, Greece and possibly Turkey, could be drawn in.

The rest of Europe is watching this test of Nato's ability to project stability. Had Nato not acted, its credibility would now be in shreds. Should it fail to hold its course, not only would other dictators draw comfort: Nato could kiss goodbye to its vital role in ending Europe's divisions through effective crisis management. Russia's relations with Nato may have been truculent, but it has considered a tentative accommodation with the alliance to be necessary. A Nato retreat would make it think again. Were Nato to show that it rattles sabres only to sheath them, its Partnerships for Peace would lose much of their power to reassure the countries of the old Cold War no man's land.

Further afield, in Turkey as well as the Middle East, a perceived failure to stand by persecuted Muslims would stoke anti-Western feeling and bolster extremists. The West's second political task is to offer the Balkan states, including Yugoslavia, a political Marshall Plan. This means not just, not even primarily, financial aid, but the prospect that if peace is followed by regional co-operation, they will be welcome in the European community. Mr Milosevic has plunged Nato into what may be a long and difficult campaign; equal resolution will be needed to build the peace. The foundations must be laid now.

rosemary.righter@the-times.co.uk

Lost leader

THE widow of John Smith has joined other Labour grandees such as Lord Hattersley in boycotting a piece of virtual history. If John Smith Had Lived, being made for Channel 4 by that serial TV renegade, Roger Bolton, will try to fathom what Britain would now be like under Smith's leadership (Clause 4 intact, Margaret Beckett as Deputy PM and other scary scenarios). Baroness Smith of Gil-morehill has been kept informed but says "I don't want to discuss it".

Roy is more frank, saying that after he agreed to take part Channel 4 moved the goalposts, "I thought I was being asked to present a tribute to John Smith, as did producers. But Channel 4 decided it should be a 'what if? programme which would have been inappropriate. I am happy to criticise the Government, but not in the name of John Smith."

Channel 4 gives one of those spacey TV explanations: "Hatter-sley was involved at an early stage but these projects evolve."

THE self-propelling Lauren Booth, the PM's talented young sister-in-law, has a weakness for the mature man - in particular. Michael Parkinson (both below). "When he turned his crinkly smile on me I was reduced to a giggling wreck," she gushes. "I whimpered My God, you really are Parky. It's that heady mix of Geoff Boycott and Richard Burton.

1.7 1 1 1

PIERCE BROSNAN can blame his unsteady feet in the Alps to an inability to ski well. But Chris, his stepson, can have no excuse.

The 25-year-old was outside the Met Bar last week demanding entrance. Brosnan Jr. who was banned from the nightclub Browns last October, was said to be "in gregarious mood". "He demanded to be let in," I am told. "There was a fracas and the doorman ended up with a bloody nose," I am told. Luckily for Chris, who did time for a drink-driving offence, the doorman did not go for the final solution. Chris confirms there was a row, but denies listiculfs.

ALASTAIR CAMPBELL has had personally to reassure a Labour MP that he is not after his seat. Peter Pike. MP for Burnley. heard through the Westminster rumour-mill that he would be nalmed off with a peerage" to allow Campbell to run in the next general election (the wild claims started after a perceived increase in Campbell's polideal behaviour: talking to the Fabians, lunching in Shepherd's - that sort of thing).

"He told me not to worry," says Pike. "I think it is because he is a Burnley fan, but then so am 1."

DAME Judi Dench is a hotter ticket on Broadway than Nicole Kidman. Advance sales for Amy's View, the English actress's show in New York, are outselling Mrs Cruise's The Blue Room, Dench's Oscar success is helping to attract record-breaking audiences.

CONFIRMATION of Geoffrey Boycott's Yorkshire-esque stewardship of his wallet is provided in a new biography. Boycs: The True Story, out next year. "When he was touring the Far East with an Internacional XI there was a debate about what to do if someone won a man of the match prize," says author Leo McKinstry, who wrote the Labour study. Fit to Govern.

"All the players wanted to share the money except for a certain someone. Don Shepherd, the offspinner, was so mad that he grabbed him by the scruff, pinned him to the wall, said you're wrong. Boyes', and threatened to do him permanent damage if he didn't agree." Geoffrey quickly agreed.

JASPER GERARD

'If our democracy is to prove itself as sophisticated as our weaponry, public support will be best served by honest dialogue'

ou can't say civilisation don't advance, for in every war they kill you a new way," the American humor-ist Will Rogers observed. He would be hard put to understand the way in which Nato poliocians are explaining the latest conflict in Europe. Instead of sticking to today's facts — that Serbian brutaliões in Kosovo threaten the Continent's stability

 Nato is running through its favourite wartime tunes. Not all the bloc's sceptical electorates are convinced of the need for military action: the politicians' response has been hyperbolic comparisons with pasi wars. They are presenting President Milosevic not just as the perpetrator of aggression now, but as all the villains of recent history rolled into one. By suggesting he is a blend of Hitler and Pol Pot their rhetoric implies that the Allies must fight not just today's conflict but, again, the wars of the past. The case for intervencion is not helped by exaggeration. Truth may be the first casualty of war. but a sense of proportion should not be next for the bodybag. Hyperbole is sometimes understandable. The horror of the events unfolding in the Balkans is such that it can be genuinely hard for observers to find adequate words. Many of the 100,000 refugees who have fled osovo were stripped of papers by the Serbians marching them out, Jamie Shea, the Nato spokesman, called this "idendty eliminaoon". The comparison he made was from literature, seeing in it the same malign control over body and mind, present and past, life and death, exercised by the state in 1984, George Orwell's fictional protest against totalilarianism. He called it "an Orwellian scenario of attempting to Vanora Bennett deprive a people and a culture of the sense of the past . . . on which it is based."

Reports of civilians being forcibly marched to the Albanian border on Tuesday drew another emotional comparison from Mr Shea, this time with the forced evacuation of Phnom Penh by Pol Pot's Khmer Rouge. The implications are breathtaking the Cambodian evacuation led to more than a million deaths over the following four years. But the comparison, while bound to raise the emotional temperature. was an honest acempt to communicate the enormity of an event that our day-to-day experience cannot encompass. The despair of a UN worker, comparing the numbers flooding out of Kosovo to the much bigger refugee crisis in Africa — "Nothing like this has ever happened in Europe. It is a nightmare, a total nightmare" — may be exaggerated, but it also comes from the same struggle for comprehension.

ore disingenuous perhaps are explicit comparisons between what is happening in Kosovo and Hiller's Final Solution. Germany's Defence Minister, Rudolf Scharping, said on Wednesday that there was "serious evidence of concentration camps being erected" in the province. The evidence came from refugees and intercepted military communicaoons, he said. Such camps may indeed exist, but Herr Scharp ing's comment, as Nato extended airstrikes on Yugoslavia, seemed timed mainly to stiffen domestic resolve. What German could reject the overwhelming moral imperaove to save ethnic Albanians from meeting, at Mr Milose-vic's hands, the same fate that the Nazis once imposed on Jews? Perhaps more alarming is the ready use of the word "genocide". Losers in ethnic conflicts routine-ly cry genocide; third parties rarely do. In Rwanda, it was fully justified. But until the airstrikes began, genocide had been applied only with the greatest caution to anything but Hitler's policy of exterminating Europe's Jews. Yet those hearing the word being bandied about by Robin Cook and George Robertson could be forgiven for think-ing the clock had turned back.

Genocide is not just another word for throwing people out of their homes or even murdering them. It means the deliberate "annihiladon of a race". What little we know of Serbian actions in Kosovo suggests that Bel-grade's determination to control the land is prompong Serbians to get rid of the ethnic Albanian majority by expelling or, in some cases, killing them. But, while the people of Kosovo are undoubtedly being terrorised, evidence has yet to emerge that Mr Milosevic is threatening Albanians with annihilation as a race.

The less sure Nato leaders are of their aims, and of the extent of public support, the more extreme their language. This might be intended to give an air of certainty to Nato's confused policy, but its effect can be only cloud the issues. Today's conflict is serious enough to be dealt with on its own terms. If our democracy is to prove itself as sophisticated as our weaponry, public support for a necessary military mtervenoon will be best secured through sober, honest dialogue.

vanora.bennett@the-times.co.uk

A HOLDING AGREEMENT

Blair and Ahern outline the basis for an Ulster settlement

If peace could be delivered by presentation alone then Tony Blair and Bertie Ahern could provide Northern Ireland with decades of milk and honey. The two Prime Ministers conspired through manner to snatch a victory from what could otherwise be interpreted as at least a partial failure. Their declaration issued at Hillsborough Castle yesterday leaves numerous crucial questions still unanwered. It also relies on some extraordinary twists of language so that decommissioning is "not a precondition but is an obligation" wrapped within a "collective act of reconciliation". Their document is, though, more than a nimble attempt to disguise a deadlock. It could represent the first draft of a deal that will revive the Good Friday agreement.

The strength of the document is that it starkly acknowledges the inter-relationship between the IRA unloading its arsenal and the British Government initiating a procedure that should end with an Ulster executive exercising devolved powers. For most of the past 12 months Sinn Fein have sought to deny that there is any linkage between these two issues. Mr Blair and Mr Ahern have made it very clear that without decommissioned arms there will be no ministerial authority. The device they have chosen to achieve this allows for all sides to make preparations for an executive that will not exist in proper form until after the Independent International Commission on Decommissioning reports that the IRA have taken certain weapons out of service. This statement is not only right in principle but the only realistic option in practice. Neither David Trimble nor peace itself could survive a lesser settlement. The carefully constructed compromise outlined in the Anglo-Irish compact offers much to the nationalist community. If Sinn Fein are seriously interested in the administration of Northern Ireland then they will now press their terrorist associates to accept this formula. Mr Blair has provided the republican movement with a breathing space in which to reach a fateful decision.

Service Contract Cont

Gerry Adams should make the most of it. If the IRA does indeed engage in a "collective act of reconciliation" then Ulster Unionists should swallow their reservations and allow Mr Trimble to start forming his executive. The First Minister, who has been obliged to concede so much, has drawn the right line in the sand and deserves the full support of his colleagues. The Prime Minister has, in effect, returned to the promises made to Protestant voters during last year's referendum. Mr Ahern has made his firmest public statement so far in favour of imminent decommissioning. The detail of this declaration will make it difficult for Sinn Fein to claim at a later stage that there is no need for the IRA to disarm completely. These are all important developments that reflect well on Mr Trimble's determination. Unionists would be wise to recognise their significance.

The Prime Ministers have bought some time and are evidently confident that they can reach a successful conclusion. They have cited, with enthusiasm, the enhanced spirit of co-operation that apparently pervaded this particular set of negotia-tions. It will take more than a benign atmosphere and skilful public relations. however, to ensure that the IRA, or the loyalist terror organisations, actually fulfil their responsibilities. The Good Friday agreement was the triumph of sheer hope soothed by strategic ambiguity. The next ten days will provide the real evidence as to whether all parties to that text are really willing to work exclusively within it.

GOOD FRIDAY

'Making peace by the blood of his Cross . . .' (Colossians 1.20)

A Good Friday in a week of bombings, massacres and ethnic cleansing is a stark reminder that the Christian Gospel is no philosophical theory or mere symbolic story. It is a gospel of salvation that has at of a particular man in a particular place at time. W remember on Good Friday is all of a piece with Kosovo today - and with the judicial murders and tortures of every century of human history. Golgotha, the place of the skull, where nails smashed through the wrists and feet of Jesus, the teacher from Nazareth in Galilee, can stand for the skulls of every genocide. Betrayal by friends, self-preserving denial, making. sport with prisoners, the mockery of crowds, spectators drawn to the spectacle, the soldiers doing their duty and dicing for his clothes, a mother in agony and a knot of women helplessly looking on - it all happens time, and time, and time again. Jesus was put to death in an occupied nation. His Crucifixion was the direct consequence of his challenge to the religious authorities of his day. It was no less a convenient way for a jittery Roman governor, nervous of trouble at Passover time. to get rid of a potential threat. The context of the Crucifixion of Jesus was a cocktail of religion and politics. Yet although this anchors it in history, we are compelled to look deeper to see why the Cross is the mark of Christian identity and the disclosure of what God is like.

The Gospels mark the ministry of Jesus with predictions of his passion. Sacrifice and suffering are at the very heart of who he is. As Dostoevsky affirmed, "Loving humility is a terrible force: it is the strongest of all things and there is nothing like it" Jesus proclaimed the coming of the kingdom, or rule, of God, a kingdom that was neither pursued nor established by the ways of violence and power. His kingdom, as He tells Pontius Pilate in St John's Gospel, is "not of this world". Only if it were would his servants fight.

And yet there is a fight, a fight of a cosmic order of which He is at the heart.

The ministry of Jesus is seen as a wrestling with the powers of evil. and engagement with that engulfing darkness named as sin and death. When Judas goes out to betray Jesus, St John notes that it was night, and its heart the execution by barbaric torture at the Crucifixion, the culmination of this struggle, the Gospels record that there was

Jesus comes to do his Father's will, showing that will to be a love going to the uttermost, reaching out into the very darkness of hell, plumbing the depths of human sin, betrayal, abandonment and rejection. In a costly work of reconciliation he defeats the powers of darkness and establishes peace. That peace is the reconciliation of a sinful, fallen humanity. caught in a web of the worship of false gods, and driven by selfish desires, with the God who made men and women in the image of His love that they might reflect His likeness. It is called simple 'atonement', making one again. So peace is made "by the blood of His Cross".

Good Friday is "good" only because of Easter. The Passion story without the Resurrection would be vastly different. It is the hope kindled by the Easter encounters with the Risen Jesus that makes all things new. In the light of Easter we see that love's redeeming work was indeed done through the Cross, not apart from the Cross. There the fight was fought and the battle won. The resurrection is no "descent from the Cross postponed for thirty-six hours for reason of effect", it is the declaration of a victory won on the Cross, and in the darkness and silence of death, and even in the hell of utter apartness from God. From there Christ rose again in triumph.

And the Easter good news of the Cross and Resurrection has been found to bring hope and life in the most appalling situations, in refugee camps, on battlefields, and in the most abject human misery. On Good Friday and at Easter we know that even if we go down to hell God is there also, for Christ's blood does indeed "stream in the firmament", and in that blood, love going to the uttermost, we do indeed find our peace.

LOOSE DELIVERY

Wisden's editor has not proved his case on racism in cricket

The Wisden Cricketers' Almanack has long been regarded, rightly, as the bible of English cricket. Matthew Engel the current, extremely talented, editor of this august tome has developed a flair for mixing controversial sermons with the conventional statistics. It would, of course, be an appalling outrage to suggest that this esteemed national institution could be deliberately seeking publicity. Let it instead be said that Mr Engel might have acquired an attention maximisation strategy.

Most of Mr Engel's bouncers hit the right target. In the Notes by the Editor published yesterday he attacks the International Cricket Council for the miserable manner in which it has acted, or more accurately failed to act, on the match-fixing scandal involving the Australian players Shane Warne and Mark Waugh. This and another is entirely legitimate. In his

Mr Engel relies more on anecdotes than solid information. In substantive terms the examples of what he describes as "informal segregation" in Essex and Yorkshire appear to consist of a sociology essay from the University of East London and the failure of the Yorkshire Post to report results fully from Pakistani-dominated local league matches. His observation that village teams fail to "welcome outsiders into the club's clannish atmosphere" is doubtless true but does not prove racism.

Sport cannot exist separately from a wider society. If there is prejudice in the public house then some of it will also occur in the pavilion. But on the whole British sport has been an enormously positive force for social integration. The comradeship borne of competition and the collective desire for victory are powerful forces for multi-racial harmony. Brian Lara has been arcally admired this week for his

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

1 Pennington Street, London El 9XN Telephone 0171-782 5000

Serb history of stout resistance

From Mr Gordon Burrett

Sir. There is no prospect of stopping ethnic cleansing in Kosovo by negotiation alone. The Serbs will continue their cruel acts until they decide it is in their interests to stop.

The use of force is much more difficult, may well go wrong and is cer-tain to be denounced by those who have no better alternative to offer. Force, when realistic negotiation has demonstrably failed, may not suc-ceed, but it has a reasonable hope of doing so. The choice between force and everlasting negotiation depends on how much you really want to stop the atrocities in Kosovo.

We should be thankful that the Americans are prepared to act with determination in this crisis. We should be thankful, too, for Nato unity. Finally, we should congratulate our own Government on having taken the right decision and sticking to it.

Yours faithfully, GORDON BURRETT, 14 Church Road. Claygate, Surrey KT10 OJP. . April 1.

From Mr George Tintor

Sir. You contend that "Macedonia has done much to integrate its Albanian minority" (leading article, March 31). Yet the Albanians in Macedonia have fewer rights than those offered by Serbia to its Albanian minority.

The Albanians in Kosovo have had the same rights as every other ethnic group in Serbia, including the large Hungarian community in Vojvodina. Since 1989, however, when certain elements of Tito's 1974 Yugoslav Constitution were revoked, the Albanians themselves chose not to exercise their rights, preferring instead to wail about "Serb repression".

The tragic situation in Kosovo today is a consequence of the Albanians' absolute refusal to live in anything but an ethnically pure Greater Albania. The term "ethnic cleansing" was first used in Kosovo during the 1970s to describe the expulsion of Serbs from their homes by Albanians.

Ethnic Albanian extremists in Kosovo are responsible for the ongoing conflict. During the past year, the KLA has probably kidnapped and murdered more civilians than the Serbs. Only when Albanian extremism is defeated will Kosovo's inhabitants - Albanians, Serbs and others be able to live in peace in a multi-ethnic country.

Yours faithfully, GEORGE TINTOR. 122 Leadenhall Street, EC3V 4OH.

From Mr Jeremy Burnham

Sir. Ms Rosalie Huzzard (letter. March 31) suggests that we should have negotiated with Milosevic through the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE).

Elsewhere in the same issue, your correspondent Janine di Giovanni reports allegations that Kosovans formerly working for the OSCE are being rounded up and shot by Serbian militias.

So much for jaw-jaw.

Yours faithfully, JEREMY BURNHAM. 30a Woodland Rise, NIO 3UJ. March 31.

From Mr Michael Crow

Sir. Some make much of the Serbian suffering at the hands of the Nazis (letters, March 25 and 29); others say that the Serbs have a history of strong resistance to aggression. These issues are then used as some sort of argument against Nato airstrikes. This seems to me to be rather selective.

Exactly how much suffering does one have to endure before receiving this waiver from the requirement to behave in a civilised manner? Do the . Serbs have carte blanche to murder and torture their neighbours just because a different set of neighbours mistreated their parents and more distant ancestors?

Those who hope for sympathy for the Serbs for their history are deluding themselves. Any such sympathy has been forfeited by the events of the past few years.

I remain, Sir, your obedient servant, MICHAEL CROW. 13 Sleepy Hollow Drive. Hamilton Parish. CR02 Bermuda. mikecrow@northrock.bin April 1.

From James Tulloch

Sweet dreams.

Sir, The problems in Kosovo date back to the battle of that name in 1389 (report, "Myths lie at the root of Serbia's psyche", March 25).

The area has since been the thorn in the side of Europe, its conflict triggering the Great War in 1914. Whether they are called the Black Hand or the KLA, ethnic Albanians want only autonomy. We want to return the Kosovo Albanians to Kosovo to live in peace there with the Serbs with whom they have been fighting for over half a millennium.

.There remains the issue of where the new homes are to be built and there are still doubts about the extent to which this large (if now reduced) accretion to the housing stock is really that it wishes the larger part of these new dwellings to be built in brownfield rather than in greenfield sites and has issued a Planning Policy Guidance Note (report, March 23), on which there is a consultation period. This is intended to help by setting new priorities for local authorities. There is, however, one aspect of the matter which has not been sufficiently covered: that is the large proportion of the existing housing stock which is

The English House Condition Survey for 1996, which is the latest to be published, shows that something like 3 million out of the 20 million dwellings in England are in a state of serious disrepair — and no doubt the situation is similar in Scotland and Wales. A determined effort to bring these dwellings up to standard would surely reduce the need for such a large Furthermore, there are nearly a million unoccupied dwellings. Bring-ing the bulk of these back into use

Need for new homes questioned would also diminish the need for new

Yours faithfully.

DEREK EZRA

House of Lords.

March 31.

(President, National Home Improvement Council),

From Mr Jim Lancaster

to greenfield development.

Sir, The Planning Minister, Mr Richard Caborn, has announced that the Government will be strengthening the national Planning Policy Guidelines (PPGs) to encourage local author-ities to favour brownfield as opposed

This is a noble sentiment, but the PPGs are only guidelines. The Gov-ernment appears to make no attempt to see that they are being followed, let alone enforced. Moreover, local authorities know very well that the Secretary of State for the Environment will only review an application under exceptional circumstances. In my experience local authorities can ignore both their own development

Mr Caborn's speech to the House on March II, as reported in Hansard.

was a robust argument for the Government's planning policies. But in his closing remarks he could only say that "I hope that planning authorities take account of what I have said this evening". A triumph of hope over experience?

plans and the national guidelines.

From Lord Ezra

Sir, The recent announcement by Mr John Prescott (report, March 30; leading article, "Repent and revise", March 31) that the estimated need for new homes was now reduced to 3.8 million by 2021 is a step in the right direction. The previous target of 4.4 million by 2016 was a matter of major controversy (leading article, "Without foundation", March 27).

necessary. The Government has made it clear below standard.

quantity of newly-built homes.

Yours faithfully, JIM LANCASTER, Courtyard House, Fairbank, Kirkby Lonsdale, Cumbria LA6 2BD. jimlyd@dnet.co.uk March 30.

Computer chaos

From Professor Harold Thimbleby

Sir, According to Jack Straw, the Home Office's most important management task is to fix the failed computer project, costing £77 million and 14 months behind schedule, set up to speed immigration and asylum decisions (report, "Thousands caught in travel paper chaos", March 24).

This isn't the first time "chaos" has been caused by such computer failure. The London Ambulance Service's computerised call-out system was an obvious example (reports, October and November 1992; letters, November 2, 1992).

Less obvious are the myriad of products that are difficult to use. That Britain throws away millions of tons of computers per year proves that they are failing to live up to their promised expectations. The millennium bug is another damning sign of this wide-spread mess; indeed, you report that the Home Office system is not year-2000 compliant

In my view, the main reason why these fiascos arise is that salesmen agree to sell and managers agree to with dreadful inevitability. One should ask where in these processes are the qualified engineers? Almost none of those involved are buy a miracle product at a miracle price. The salesmen go back with re-quirements to build an impossible system, and delays and failures follow members of professional organisations. Virtually nobody involved is qualified to do what they promise, or even to promise something sensible in the first place. In nine months we shall all have the hindsight to wonder why we never equired minimum qualifications for, for example, programmers. Let us hope that awareness of the need for professional qualifications will very rapidly become common sense.

When - and only when - that happens will it really be news to read about millions of pounds wasted on computers.

Yours faithfully, HAROLD THIMBLEBY. School of Computing Science, Middlesex University, Bounds Green Road, NII 2NO. harold@mdx.ac.uk March 25.

The school run

From Dr Mary Sissons Joshi

Sir. May I comment on your article, ace yourself on the school run. Taking children to school by car is making them fat and even mentally ill" (Weekend, March 20)?

The use of the car has grown in many areas, including the journey to work, oul-of-town shopping, general leisure trips and the school run. However, it is the school run which seems continually to attract criticism as if it were the least necessary car journey.

.It is also often argued that constantly chaperoning children is creating a generation of children who are excessively fearful of strangers.

Research conducted by Morag MacLean, Wakefield Carter and my-self with 93 seven to twelve-year-olds (published on March 29 in The British Journal of Developmental Psychology) suggests that children who are driven to school or accompanied on foot are no more worried about stranger danger than are unaccompanied children. Furthermore, children as a group are considerably less anxious about stranger danger than are their parents.

While it is easy to make assertions, it is much harder to establish the facts about causal relationships in this area. Those who wish to encourage children to walk to school are right to emphasise the gains for them leg. more exercise) and for the rest of us (eg. less traffic congestion), but they should not link their case to psychological effects for which I have seen no sound evidence.

Yours faithfully, MARY SISSONS JOSHI, Psychology Department, Oxford Brookes University. Gipsy Lane Campus, Headington, Oxford OX3 0BP. msissons-joshi@brookes.ac.uk March 22.

Thatcher and Pinochet

From Mr Javier Couso

Sir, Baroness Thatcher's support of former dictator Augusto Pinochet (report, March 27) is appalling. To express admiration for someone whose rule included torture, political assassination and exile because Britain benefited from Chile's support in 1982 surely reduces moral principles to sheer self-interest.

In a world in which military actions are often justified on humanitarian grounds, it seems contradictory to justify crimes against humanity when they are performed by governments that in the past chose to help you in a war against a third nation.

Baroness Thatcher's assertion that Pinochet is a democrat is unacceptable. The fact that Chile's democratic tradition made it impossible for Pinochet to manipulate a plebiscite in which he was defeated does not make him a democrat.

Yours faithfully JAVIER COUSO (Constitutional Adviser to Chilean Finance Minister, 1990-94). 3020 Smyth Road, Apartment 10-G, Berkeley. Ca 94720. couso@uclink4.berkeley.edu

Science in Russia

From Professor Sir Graham Hills

Sir, Centainly, as Sir Arnold Wolfendale points out (letter, March 30). most of Russia's research institutes are in dire straits. The same is true for much of Eastern Europe.

Most of these research institutes were of an unmanageable size. Many employed several thousand scientists at the doctoral level, the justification of which was hard to fathom. All research is a loss leader, but the conspicuous expenditure on research in the Soviet Union, only possible in a command economy, could hardly be justified on a rational basis.

Russia has never been short of science and scientists but, like Britain, it is desperately short of technology and technologists. These are the only source of the wealth required to be ploughed back into industry if the country is ever to recover.

Regrettably, governments and government-funded institutes are good at growing scientists but hopeless at growing technologists. Until we all follow the examples of the US, Germany and others, which systematically cultivate technology and technologists, we, and particularly Russia, will

Rethink on nature of God and Satan

From Father Aidan Baker

Sir, The recent attribution of femininity to God (letters, January 16 and 23) may lead us to consider whether there ought to be a similar attribution to another spirit — Satan.

For centuries the Devil has been unambiguously identified as male ... the Father of Lies, the Prince of Darkness, His Satanic Majesty, etc. Should we see in this unfair discrimination over countless years? Is it only males that can tempt, do evil, work deeds of darkness? As Easter approaches — the rriumph of Christ over Satan — perhaps we should consider another aspect of the many-sided spirit of darkness, or would this be unchivalrous male

Yours sincerely. AIDAN BAKER, St Joseph's Retreat, Highgale Hill, NI9 5NE. April I.

Good Friday's meaning

From Mrs Peter Thistlethwayte

Sir, "Oh Mum! Hot Cross Bun Day!" I heard the young girl say as she rugged at her mother's sleeve whilst passing the bakery display. At least she was better informed than the girl who was said to have asked the jeweller for a silver cross with a little man on it, but neither understood the meaning of Good Friday.

Now that these delicious spiced buns seem to be sold all the year perhaps, to mark the significance, they could be decorated with a cross for Good Friday only.

Yours faithfully, SARAH THISTLETHWAYTE, East Donyland Hall, Rowhedge, Nr Colchester, Essex CO5 7JE.

Women priests

From Mr Andrew Waude

Sir. Is it not about time that people on both sides of the ordination of women debate (letters, March 4, 9, 12, 13, 22 and 29) stopped their bickering? Some of us "on the ground" are trying to get on with the job of showing the Gospel of the Risen Christ to the people of our parishes. I believe the prolonged arguments only under-mine the Gospel and the work we are trying to do. Regardless of our views on women priests in the Church of England, we are committed to the care of the people of God in this country - this should be uppermost in our minds. If we are not careful internal politics will swamp our pastoral and evangelical duties.

Yours faithfully. ANDREW WAUDE (Pastoral Assistant, Parish of the Resurrection, Leicester: Member, General Synod), Saint Matthew's House. Kamloops Crescent, Leicester LEI 2HX

From Mr Frank Brean

Sir, Could I please plead that any possible movement towards rescission of the Act of Synod not be considered until after July 3, when my daughter with six of her colleagues will be or-dained in Portsmouth Cathedral after three years' intensive studies.

Yours sincerely, FRANK BREAN, 105 Bushey Hill Road, SE5 8QQ. March 29.

Free for all

From the Director of the National Portrait Gallery

Sir, I was interested to read treport, March 30) that the Narional Portrait Gallery was going to be free for children. It has been free for everyone, adults and children alike, for nearly all of its history apart from a brief period in the 1870s when it cost 6d on three days a week, and again in 1974 when admission charges led to a disastrous drop in visitor numbers.

My Trustees remain convinced that free entry is the best way to ensure democratic access to the collection. subject to an appropriate level of public funding.

Yours faithfully, CHARLES SAUMAREZ SMITH. Director, National Portrait Gallery, St Martin's Place, WC2H 0HE. March 30.

Wedding gifts

From Mr Neil Kennedy

Sir. At my only experience of an Irish wedding, I gave the happy couple a rather expensive set of glassware from Thos. Goode (letters, March 18, 24 and 30).

The wedding started half an hour late. The bridegroom did not appear in any of the wedding photographs, as he was in the bar (with me); and the recention lasted three days, covering three different towns.

Six months later I received a letter thanking me for the charming coffee

COURT CIRCULAR

BUCKINGHAM PALACE April 1: The Queen and The Duke of Edinburgh this morn-ing arrived at Bristol Temple ceived by Her Majesty's Lord-Lieutenant of the City of Bristol

(Mr Jay Tidmarsh).

Her Majesty and His Royal Highness drove to Bristol Cathedral and were received by the Bishop of Bristol (the Right Reverend Barry Rogerson) and the Dean of Bristol (the Very Reverend Robert Grimley).

The Queen and The Duke of Edinburgh attended the Maundy Service at which Her Majes-ty distributed the Royal Maun-

The Right Reverend Nigel McCulloch (Lord High Almon-er) and the Reverend William Booth (Sub Almoner) were present.

The Queen's Body Guard of the Yeoman of the Guard were on duty.
Her Majesty and His Royal Highness afterwards attended a Reception with members of the Cathedral and Diocesan Staff at the Chapter House. The Queen and The Duke of Edinburgh then presented the Building a Better Bristol" Award to the Chairman of the Harbourside Project (Mr Nicho-las Hood) before attending a Luncheon given by the Lord Mayor and the President of the Bristol Chamber of Commerce

(Mr Douglas Claisse) at the Mansion House. The Queen this afternoon visited the Royal West of England Academy and was re-ceived by the President (Mr Peter Thursby). Her Majesty met artists and members of the Academy as well as Children from a local primary school.

The Queen later joined The Duke of Edinburgh at Cameron Balloons and was received by the Managing Director (Mr Don Cameron). His Royal Highness toured the factory and both Her Majesty and His Royal Highness met Mr Brian Jones and M Bertrand Piccard who circumnavigated the world in the balloon, Breitling Orbiter

ST JAMES'S PALACE April 1: The Duke of York this morning visited the East Riding of Yorkshire and was received by Her Majesty's Lord-Lieutenant (Mr Richard Marriott).
His Royal Highness later attended a church service at Holy Trinity Church, Kingston upon Hull Afterwards, The Duke of York visited Orchard Park and Hull North Enterprises.

This afternoon His Royal Highness visited the Anlaby Community Care Centre.
The Duke of York later visited West Yorkshire and was received by Her Majesty's Lord-Lieutenant (Mr John

His Royal Highness after-wards presented eight Duke of York Charter Awards.

Later, The Duke of York watched a demonstration of Futebol de Salao.

Today's royal engagement

The Duke of Kent, president, the Royal Choral Society, will attend a performance of Handel's Messiah, Albert Hall, London.

Birthdays today

Good Friday Admiral Sir Michael Boyce, 56: Sir Jack Brabham, former racing driver, 73; Sir Graham Bright, former MP, 57; Mr Linford Christie, athlete, 39; Air Marshal Sir Geoffrey Dhenin, 81; Captain Sir Richard Dobbs, former Lord-Lieutenant of County Antrim, 80; Sir Christopher France, civil servant, 65: Miss Catherine Gaskin, author, 70: Mr Raymond Gubbay, concert promoter, 53: Sir Alec Guinness. CH, actor, 85: Viscount Hambleden, 69; Mr Barry Hills, racehorse trainer, 62: Sir Ian Hunter, impresario. 80; Miss Penelope Keith, actress, 59: Sir Peter Middleton, deputy chairman, Barclays Bank, 65; the Marquess of Northampton. 53; Major-General C.J. Popham, 72; Mr A.C. Puddephatt, former general secre-tary. Liberty. 49; Mr M.G. Rizzello, sculptor and coin designer, 73; Sir Denis Rooke, OM, FRS. former chairman. British Gas. 75: Mr Teddy Sheringham, footballer, 32: Lord Skelmersdale, 54; Miss Sue Townsend, writer, 53: Mr Denis Tuohy, broadcaster, 62;

FRS. 71. Appointment

Stephen Nash to be Ambassador to Latvia in July in succession to Mr Nicholas Jarrold who is moving to a new Diplomatic Service appoint

Professor Felix Weinberg,

Premium Bonds

The El million prize in the Premium Bond draw for April was won with bond number 82SS 142886. The winner lives in Cheshire and has a bond holding of £5,000.

Anniversaries

BIRTHS: Charlemagne, King of the Franks and Holy Ro-man Emperor 801-14, Aix-la-Chapelle, 747; Giovanni Casanova. advenurer, Venice, 1725; Catharine Macaulay, historian, Wye, Kent, 1731; Hans Christian Andersen, storyteller. Odense, Denmark, 1805; William Holman Hunt, painter, member of the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood, London, 1827; Emile Zola, novelist and critic, Paris, 1840; Sergei Rachmaninov, composer and pianist, Oneg. Russia. 1873; Max Ernst, Surrealist painter and sculptor, Bruhl, Germany, 1891; Marvin Gaye, singer

Washington DC, 1939. DEATHS: Honoré Mirabeau politician and orator, Paris, 1791: Richard Cobden, "The Apostle of Free Trade". London, 1865; Samuel Morse, painter and inventor of the telegraphic code bearing his name. New York, 1872; C.S. Forester, novelist, Fullerton, California, 1966; Georges Pompidou, President of France

1969-74, Paris, 1974. The US mint was established in Philadelphia, 1792. The first Italian parliament met in Turin, 1860. The Spanish Civil War officially ended, 1939.

Argentina invaded the Falkland Islands, 1982.

Legal retirement Judge Clive Tayler, QC, has retired from the Midland and Oxford Circuit Bench.

Some spectacular examples of the house plant Hippeastrum, or amaryllis, which are on show at the Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew, this week. A Hippeastrum Celebration is being held until the end of April. The Hippeastrum a native of South America, produces flowers up to 10in diameter

Your chance to get dug in this year

By Norman Hammond Archaeology correspondent

UNPRECEDENTED opportunities to delve into Britain's past are being offered this summer. Although the number of research digs acclined, more field schools and training excavations than ever are being run for the young and energetic of all ages. Most of them are organised by universities, and directed by academic professional archaeologists, but anyhody over the age of 16 can apply: the Council for British Archaeology publishes a Briefing listing the projects seeking people, and the council's Young Archaeologists' Club also organises activities for those under 16.

Among nearly 20 training digs on offer between the end of May and the end of September are the Roman Villa at Bignor in West Sussex, the Roman palace at Fishhourne only a few miles away, and the Roman city of Calleva at Silchester near Reading.

Smaller settlements in the Romano-British countryside include Piddington near Northampton, and three sites in Wales. Castell Henlivs in Pembrokeshire, New Pieces in Powys and Arddleen near Welshpool.

Prehistoric sites are rare this year, but Billtown on the Isle of Man includes Neolithic and Bronze Age remains, and in Upper Wharfedale in North Yorkshire a multi-period upland landscape is being studied. The Saxons will be dug up - literally, since a burial ground is included at Sedgeford in Norfolk, and "King" Edward Balliot's castle (or palace) will be investigated at Botel Bailey in Kircudbright. Medieval and later structures under excavation will include the mysterious earthen mound of Clay Hill in East Sussex, thought to have been an early Norman castle or archiepiscopal hunting lodge, the manor house at Heckfield in Hampshire, and medieval to 17th-century buildings in Bagshot, Surrey. Deserted villages in Scotland include Easter Raitts at Kingussie and the spectacular Mar Lodge Estate at Brae-

One of the more unusual opportunities is the final season of the long-running study of the terraced gardens of Dartington Hall in Devon. where the emerging subdisci-pline of garden archaeology is being fine-tuned.

Fees for most of the training programmes are modest, with most accommodation consisting of tents at the site itself. the varied opportunities to sample local food and drink, as well as the often stunning scenery around the digs, more than make up for a week or two of primitive living: and all aspects of the experience bring us closer to our ances-

Contact: Council for British Archaeology, 111 Walmgate, York YO 19WA; archaeology@ commuserve.com.

http://www.britarch.ac.uk; http://www.compulink.co. uk/archaeology/digs.btm. European digs: http://archeonet.cilea.it/ar-http://www.hritarch.ac.uk/ iorum/camps.html: http://www.britarch.ac.uk/ archabroad (also at arch. abroad@ucl.ac.uk).

RAF College Cranwell

Air Chief Marshal Sir John Allison, Air Officer Commanding in Chief Strike Command and Commander Allied Air Forces Northwestern Europe. was the reviewing officer at the Graduation yesterday of 94 officers of No 176 Initial Officer Training Course and 16 officers of No 266 Specialist Entrant and Re-entrant course from RAF College Cranwell. Princevinners of No 176 Initial Officer Training Course

The Sword of Merit Awarded to the RAF cadet who, during Initial Officer Training, has demonstrated outstanding abiity, leadership and other officer qualities and potential for further development: Officer Cadet J R

The Hennessy Trophy and Philip Sassoon Memorial Prize Awarded to the RAF cadet who during Initial Officer Training. has proved to be the best all-round cadet order than the Sword of Merit winner: Officer Cader L T Madden

The British Aircraft Corporation Trophy Awarded to the RAF or Foreign and Commonwealth cadet who has attained the highest marks for professional studies on the course:

The Group Captain Williams Memorial Trophy Awarded to the RAF cadet who. during Initial Officer Training. has shown the greatest improve-ment: Student Officer E C Greenwood BSc

Student Officer B C R Russell

The Longcroft Troohy Awarded to the cader who has contributed most to sport during initial Officer Training: Officer Cadet A Pluckrose

Prizewinner of No 266 Specialist Entrant and Re-Entrant Course The Daedalus Trophy

Awarded to the student who, during training on the Specialist Entrant and Re-Entrant Course. has proved to be the best all-round cadet: Officer Cadet P K Richard-SOIL

Graduating Officers of No 176 Initial Officer Training Course General Duties Branch - Pilot Flying Officers D J Clarke BSc, S

G Davies MEng BA, A M Garbutt BSc, D J Laisney BSc, A J Rogers BSc. P C Turner, A J Wilkinson MEng. M J Wright BEng: Pilot Officers R Aboboto BSc. G J Burdett BA, D M Canon BSc, K N Clark BA, S R Dachtler BSc, N J De Candole BA, J Fowler BA, S B Hulme BSc. T Kernp M Eng BA, B Laidlaw BSc. P J Lee BEng, P D Mclarnon BSc. O M Padbury BSc. R A Man BEng, C G Talbot BSc, K Whyman BA, P A Winnis-per BSc (Front) Action Pilot Office BSc (Front) Action Pilot Office ter BSc (Econ): Acting Pilot Offic-ers J R Butcher, J L Dodsworth, A

Footiti; P A Roberts. General Duties Branch

Navigator Flying Officers G E Cooper BSc, D J Rowler BSc, L T Madden, C Morton, B C R Russell BEng; Pilot Officers H J Dawson BSc; J Eayrs BSc. J M Howard BEng. S A Lee BA. I McCabe MEng. S A Mills BA: N C Whitehead MEng. Acting Pilot Officers A J Luker, T G A McAuley.

General Duties Branch Air Loadmaster Flying Officer M A Vickery.

Operations Support Branch - Air raffic Control Flying Officers E C Greenwood BSc, S M Harvey; Pilos Officers E Coupar BA; M A Johnson BA, S M Ryan-Goldstraw BA

Operations Support Branch Flying Officers S D England, K L Hargreaves BEng, J R Howard, G A Posnett: Pilot Officer CJ Kerneny BSC.

Operations Support Branch Intelligence Flying Officer J H Joison LLB. Operations Support Branch -

Flying Officer M K L Mankowski BSc. Pilot Officers M K Carter BEd. R D Glendinning BA, T A Weeden BA: Acting Pilot Officer P

Dawson Engineer Branch

Flight Lieutenants J Dixon BEng. M Harding Beng, P Pearce Beng AMILE, R D Ponting Beng: Flying Officers N A Bevan, J E Cox, G D Dark, S W Edmondson BA, M C Lowe MEng BA, R K Plumley BEng, J R Rushton, M S Tillyard BEng, A N Wood BEng. Pilot Officers I D Andrews BEng. R D J Gates BEng, N E S Price MERR E R Taylor BERR

Supply Branch
Flying Officer S M Moore BSc: Pilot Officer V C J Hall LLB Administrative Branch -

Riministrative Branch Secretarial
Flying Officers J M Brocklebank
BSc. N Clark, M D Leeming, S
Scon BA: Pilot Officer V J K Short
BA PGCE; Acting Pilot Officers D
Munslow, L A Wells, Administrative Branch - Training

Flight Lieutenant N M Craig BEct: Flying Officer E P Setters BA; Pilot Officers 0 H Crossby BSc PGCE, A Sinclair. Administrative Branch - Physical Education Flying Officer A Pluckrose. Medical Secretarial Branch Flying Officer S A Ford.

Graduating Officers of No 266 Specialist Entrant and Re-entrant General Duties Branch - Pilot Flying Officers M A Daffey, B J Reilly BSc, P K Richardson, C M Smith, P A Willson.

Operations Support Branch -Fighter Control Flight Lieutenant S J Kodarchuk Operations Support Branch -

Flight Lieutenant A J M MacIntyre. Administrative Branch -Secretarial

Flight Lieutenant M A Finneran. Supply Branch Flight Lieutenam T E Alford. Princess Mary's Royal Air Force Nursing Service

Flight Lieutenants A Lewis, D C McCann EN(G) RN, P A Quick RGN RSCN RMN DipHE, I Rider RN DipHE: Flying Officers M J Harris BA DipAH RN, L M Ryder RN DipHE. Medical Technical Branch

Flight Lieutenant I J Start BEM

Legal appointments

Mr Guy Nicholas Otten has been appointed part-time Chairman of the Mental Health Review Tribunal for the Trent and Northern and Yorkshire region and Mr John Wright has been appointed to the West Midlands and North West region, both from May I.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Forthcoming marriages

Mr M.R. Allen and Miss H.R. Wallis and Miss ri-R. Wains
The engagement is announced between Mark younger son of Mr and Mrs Michael Allen, of Langley, Berkshire, and Helen, daughter of Mr and Mrs Frederick Wallis, of Greenford, Middlesex.

Mr A.J. Bertolotti and Miss S.E. Duly The engagement is announced between Alexander, youngest son of the late Mr R. Bertolotti and of of the late Mr. K. Derionou and on Mrs Bertolotti, of Hatch End, Middlesex, and Sarah, daughter of Mr. K. Duly, of Bethlehem, Connecticut, and Mrs M. Duly, of Halton, Buckinghamshire Mr R.J. Bowden and Miss S.M.B. Morris

The engagement is announced between Richard, elder son of Mr John Bowden, of Walton-on-Thames, and Mrs Lynn Ranscombe of Ascot, and Sian, daughter of Mr and Mrs Roben Morris, of

Mr M.G. Bristow and Miss L.M. Burke

The engagement is announced between Mark, son of Mr Geoff Bristow and Mrs Mary Berger, or Oxford, and Laura, daughter of Mr and Mrs Peter Burke, of Bishopstone, Salisbury, Wiltshire. Mr P. Fidoe and Miss J.E. Christie The engagement is announced between Peter, second son of Mr and Mrs A. Fidoe, of Worcester, and Joanne, first daughter of Mr and Mrs G. Christie, of Milton Keynes, Buckinghamshire.

Mr R.L. Hardie and Miss B.J. Swaab

The engagement is announced between Ross, son of Mrs Caroline Hanbury-Bateman, of Leap, Co Cork, and the late Mr Michael Hardie, and Beth, daughter of Mr and Mrs Roger Swaab, of Condover, Shropshire,

Captain R.C. Sergeant and Miss S.J. Chapman
The engagement is announced between Robin Charles Sergeant.
Coldstream Guards, eldest son of Mr and Mrs Martin Sergeant, o Kennington, Oxfordshire, and Sarah Jane, eldest daughter of the late Dr

Hugh Chapman and of Mrs David Lindsay, of Pimlico, London.

Mr H.D.E. Varney
and Miss C.G. Gemin
The engagement is announced between Hugo, second son of Mr Andrew Varney, of Port Eynon, Gower, and Mrs Imogen Varney, of Phoeniii Gower, and Credio of Rhossili, Gower, and Coelia, daughter of Mr Yves Gemin and Mrs Monette Maquiaba, of Ste Rose, Guadeloupe, French West

Mr CJ.N. Williams and Miss L. A. Kell

The engagement is announced between Christopher, son of the late Mr and Mrs John Williams, of Alrewas, and Lizette, younger daughter of Mr Charles Kell, of Horion, Northamptonshire, and Mrs Mary Kell, of Carlton, Warwickshire,

Church news Retirements and resignations

The Rev Charles Jefferson, Vicar, Elworth and Warmingham (Chester) to retire July 31. The Rev Tom Kenny, Vicar, Stockton Heath (Chester) retired Janu-

Canon David Pitcher, Rector, Woodbridge St Mary, and Honorary Canon of St Edmundsbury Cathedral (Si Edmundsbury & Ipswich) to retire June 30. Canon Richard Price, Rector, Nantwich (Chester) to retire May 31. The Rev Barry Trotter, Vicar, Henbury (Bristol) to retire June 30.

Corrections The Rev Malcolm Foy, Director of Education [Bradford]: has been appointed Assistant Curate (temporary). Otley (same diocese). The Rev Barbara Way has been Local Ministry Adviser (Canter-bury for more than a year and the the Rev Bill Hopkinson is still the Director of the Board of Ministry and Training (Canterbury) and has been since 1994.

RRP.R

TRADE; 0171 481 1982 FAX: 0171 481 9313

CHILDREN ON DIALYSIS

need our love and practical support, not just today but very day. Sadly, money cannot buy healthy kidneys but it can make life worth having Donations urgently needed by the British Kidney Patient Association

Borden, Hants, GU35 9JZ.

Reg. Charity No. 278288

BMDS: 0171 680 6880 PRIVATE: 0171 481 4000

PERSONAL COLUMN

He was agreeted and sentenced and led off to die, and no one cared about his fate. He was put to death for the sins of our people. He was placed in a grave with the wicked, he was forsed with the rich, even though he had never committed a crime or ever told a lie. Isaiai 53.8-9 (GNB).

BIRTHS

DUFF - On March 29th at The Portland Hospital, Vicki (Aston-Duff) and Michael, a son, Jacob HEWLETT - On 31st March 1999, to Corinne (nee Donion) and Steven, a besotiful daughter, Lauren Rose.

HOLLSNG - Mr and Mrs Hollings of Hampshire wish to announce the birth of their grandson, Dylan, who was born on lat April 1999 at St Lukes Roosevelt Hospital, New York, to proud perents, Andy and Ayane Hollings. The Hollings family wish to express to them their very best wishes on this wonderful news.

HORIKOSHI - On March 30th at The Portland Hespital, to Junko and Yasuo, a son, Tetsuro, a brother for MANMAN - To Rozina and Zahid a beautiful beby son, Zohaib, on March 30th 1999 at Overlook Hospital,

New Jersey. Long awaited brother of Zars. PARISH - On March 31st. lo Arabella (née Rivière) and Dominic, a daughter, PhoebeBIRTHS SAUNDERSON - On 23rd March, to Floor infe Philips) and David, a son, Samuel Timothy, a brother

WARD - On March 25th at The Portland Hospital, to Michele Laybourn and Phil Ward, a precious son, Nathan, perfect in every CRESWELL - To Mary (née Green) and Alexander, a son, Theodore William Michael, on 29th March 1990. YEATS-BROWN - On Wednesday March 31st, to Joanna (née Edmonds) and Edward, a son, Xavier Henry Lysander, a brother for Jennifer, Jemima and Raiph.

ADOPTIONS

SARRY - Christopher and Melinda (nde Sharp) are delighted to amounce to arrival of Rachel Ravich Born 14th April 1998 in Thailand, adopted 8th Murch 1999. A sixter for Christopher and Angus.

DEATHS

SERD - Dr Chris, Visiting Fellow in Remote Sensing & GIS, Bilsoe Campus, Cranfield University, died poscefully at home on Friday 26th March 1999 from cancer. Former colleagues and students will be welcome to join his wife Philipps, family, friends and colleagues at the Funeral and Thanksgiving Service to be hald on Tuesday 13th April 1999 at 2 pm at the Church of the Ascension.
Beaufort Road, London
Wh. Further tetails from
E. C. Mills Limited on 0181

DEATHS

CADOGAN - On 31st March 1999 Downger Countees Cecilis Margaret Bunny née Han Wedderburn peacefolly at bome aged 83 years. Wife of the late Earl Cadegan. Funeral at 51 Mary's, Birnam at 11.30 am, Friday 9th April. Family flowers only.

HECKSON - Suddenly on March 30th, Jane, died peacefully. Funeral Tuesday April 6th at 2 pm Christ Church, Marton-cum-Grafton. No flowers. Donations to Botton Village and Christ Church will be received at the service of posted to J.G. Savage, Branton Green, Greet Ouesburn, York YO26 SRT.

YO26 9KT.

HORTON - (náe Wombwell).

Elizabeth Anne of Shipeton-ou-Stour died pescefully on Tuesday 30th March 1999. Dearly leved wife of Michael, deveted mother of Jamie and Peter, leving grandmother to Hugo and imagen. Married for 33 years, her motto was "Joie do vivre". She will be asdly missed. Family only cremation. Funeral Service, Si Edmund's
Church, Shipeton-omStour, 1 pan Thureday 8th April. No flowers.
dotastions to Macmillan Cancer Relief, Anchor House. 15/19 Britten

, 15/19 Britten London SW3 3TZ. To place death notices, or notices please call 0171 680 6880

YNE - Reggie died ITME - Raggle died suddenly and pescefully on March 29th 1999 aged 50. Potter in Walberswick Suffolk and Architect in Windsor Berkzhire. Beloved husband of Heather, adored granded and father of Jeremy and Jenny. Funeral a! St Andrew's Church, Walberswick, ipm April 6th. Family flowers only but church collection for The Sulfolk Deaf Association.

CERRICK - Elizabeth Dorothy Magdalen (nee Loveday), Peacefully on March 28th at Wardington House Nursing House, aged 90. Moch loved mother of Martin and Phillp, and of the late Judith, Jonathan and Sichard; widow of William, Private cremation followed by a service and a celebration of her life at the Unitarian New Moeting, Ryland Street.
Five Waya, Edgbaston, Birmingham at 11.45 am on April 13th. No flowers please. Donatlona, if you wish, to a charity of your choice.

OMANS - Dick died en 28th March after a long illness. Beloved husband of Marianne, father of Sarah and Henry and grandfather of Sebastien, Film and Venu Statien, and Henry and grandisther of Sebastien, Elise and Hannah, Private funeral and family flowers only. Details of a Memorial Service will be announced later. Donations may be made in his name to The Cancer Research Campaign, Fund Raising Dept., 10 Cambridge Terrace, London NW1 4/L. WARD - Denis Edward of Toma Hill, Aldbury, Hertfordshire, Much loved husband of Bents, Father and Grandlather, Suddenly on March 29th 1999 aged 85. Funeral at the church of Saint John the Baptist, Aldbury, April 8th at 3 pm. Family flowers only. Donations please to Aldbury Church. VARREN - Dr C B M Warren

WARREN - Dr. C B M Warren, widower of the late Dorothy, died poscafully at Bings Hall Recidential Home on 30th March 1999, aged 52 years. Els funeral will be held at The Parish Church, Feisteed, Essex oo Friday 16th April at 12.00 noon. Enquiries regarding flowers or donations please contact Daniel Robinson & Sons Ltd, Haslers Lane, Great Dumnow, Essex C466 1XS, Tel 01371 874518.

GOITSN - Remembering my dearly beloved Karl on this first anniversary. Ever close to me. Your loving Vers. BIRTHDAYS

IN MEMORIAM -PRIVATE

WANTED

TICKETS FOR SALE ACCESS TYCKETS World Wide Sporting Brenzs, Top West End Shows & Pop Concerts 0172 521 6616 All Aveil Qui, R.M. Springerous, Jumiro-quei, R.E.M. All Pop. Theatre, Engby & Sport. 0 171 536 0781 Chicago, Saigna, All pop & sp We deliver, 0171 930 5634

CORPORATE HOSPITALITY
ALL TICKETS
5 NATIONS
WORLD CUP
CHELTERNAM
GRAND PROX
FOOTBALL ASCOT
CRICKET, ETC
TEL 01875 443845 FOR SALE

HE THIGES - 1791 - 1999 other of tice available, Ready for present tation - also Sundays', Remons ber When, 0181 768 6363 o Call Pres 0500 520000 FLATSHARE

01920 484007 etworld 01273 277 877 would not prof. male or country purson. £1,000 pen all hed 0171 245 6566/0171 589 2708

NANNIES &

DOMESTIC

FLIGHTS

DIRECTORY

AARTHED Couple required, Ex-enced Sactor & Formshoppe quired for large Leadon lo-loid. The successful compris-hate the successful compris-hate previous parada successful and previous parada successful tion. & conditions. An ages plants. Son No.5729

FLIGHT SEARCHERS

FLIGHTS

01476 592095

SERVILE Comple, despurate for a child seek the sesistance of a female under 36 years of see proposed to draw her orga. If the seek of the landom Farrilley Contracts 0171 224 2756 & quyen esterance number 12266.

DIRECTORY OSTCUTTURS on thights & hole to Paropa, USA & most destina-tions. Diplomen Throws Servicus. Let: 0171 730 2201. ABTA 25703 LATA ATOL 1355 LIGHTSEEKERS

0171 663 4425

FARESAVERS

ANNOUNCEMENTS

LEGAL, PUBLIC, COMPANY & PARLIAMENTARY NOTICES TO PLACE NOTICES FOR THESE SECTIONS PLEASE: Telephone 0171 680 6878 Fex 0171 782 7930 Or Email tru.features@newsint.co.uk Notices are subject to confirmation and should be reck 2.30pm two days prior to insertion.

THE EASTER PERIOD. Classified Birth, Marriage & Death Notices Por serios appearing on Saturday 3 April - Friday 2 April 1. Spins
Por notices appearing on Monday 5 April - Samuday 3 April 1. Spins
For notices appearing on Theatry 6 April - Manday 5 April 1.1 Spins
For notices appearing on Theatry 6 April - Manday 5 April 1.1 Spins Opening Times
Friday 2 April 9.30m 11 30m
Saturday 3 April 9.30m 11.30m
Monday 5 April 9.30m 11.30m

WACLEGO Cities Sutherized Cities, married mans Etile. Pieces Will he or anyone with information planes on the respond to her summer $7.50. SHARE-A-PLAY Ltd. For a test, convenient, problemiconal flat sing-ing service (0171) 464 4133 0171 360 1111 TELEPHONE 0171 680 6880 مكذآ نت الاصل

Carry Colo

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL C. L. BOYLE

Lieutenant-Colonel C. L. Boyle, OBE, Secretary of the Fauna Preservation Society. 1950-63, died on March 21 aged 100. He was born on March 9, 1899.

fter a thirty year career as a Gunner in the Army, Leofric Boyle, as he was known to family and friends. devoted himself to wildlife conservation - a passion that had its origins in his Army career. Long voyages in troopships in the days before soldiers were lifted from place to place by air were ideal for watching ocean birds. Service in India, with its rich fauna, stimulated a natural interest in animals of all sorts.

in the 1950s and 1960s Boyle was active in many campaigns to preserve wildlife. In the late 1950s he played a major role in Operation Noah, set up to try to save the thousands of animals endangered by the flooding caused by the construction of the Kariba Dam in Southern Rhodesia (now

Another notable campaign was the preservation of the rare Arabian oryx. In the early 1960s reports reached Boyle at the offices of the Fauna Preservation Society in London that the population of the species in the wild was teetering on the brink of extinction from the depredations of motorised raiding parties. He co-ordinated a rescue scheme. Operation Oryx, which was led in the field by the chief game warden of Kenya. lan Grimwood. After a great deal of difficulty four oryx were captured and taken to the 200 at Phoenix, Arizona, where a breeding herd was established. The Arabian oryx has since been successfully reintroduced into its former haunts from stocks bred in captivity. Charles Leofric Boyle was Boyle showing Churchill over the so-called "Boche-Buster" in the summer of 1940.

and the Arabian cryx (left), for which he campaigned in the 1960s education was at King's School, Canterbury.

In 1917 he passed into the Royal Military Academy at Woolwich and was commissioned into the Royal Artillery.

Jamaica, India and Ireland. In the early part of the Second World War he commanded No 11 Super Heavy Battery, a special artillery unit formed at the express command of Winston Churchill, who was determined that Britain should be able to dominate the Channel with heavy guns in the aftermath of Dunkirk. Since it was impossible to produce guns of the large calibre he envisaged at short notice, the battery was formed with five 18-inch guns which had been built during the First World War. These He subsequently served in could throw a 2,500fb shell 14 miles. The guns were also to be used to pound the Kent beaches in the event of a German landing. Churchill took a keen personal interest in the project and Boyle was requested to show him over one of the guns, called the "Boche-Buster", which was mounted on a railway line at Bishopsbourne near Canterbury. He also worked for a time in the Army's legal department at Woolwich on courts marshal, work which appealed to him very much.

After the war he was an officer commanding troops on board ships repatriating soldiers. During these voyages he was able to indulge one of his lifelong interests - watching seabirds at sea.

He was a keen bird photographer in the days before colour photography, and his photographs of the birds of Kashmir, taken during his service in India, were exhibited in Britain and India in the 1930s and 1940s.

After reoring from the Army in 1949, he started a second career in wildlife conservation, as Secretary of the Fauna Preservation Society (now Fauna and Flora International) in 1950. This involved bringing the former Society for the Preservation of the Fauna of the Empire out of the doldrums into which it had sunk during the war years and renaming its somewhat stuffy-looking journal Orac. He attended international conferences and travelled to many parts of the world. He was responsible for introducing a Bill into Parliament for the Control of the Importation of Endangered Species. He was appointed OBE in 1963 for services to wildlife conservarion and in 1973 received the Order of the Golden Ark from Prince Bernhard of The Netherlands, one of the first group of people to receive it.

After retiring as Secretary of the Fauna Society in 1963, he served on the Wild Animals Committee of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and edited the RSPCA Book of British Mammals. He was a frequent proselytiser for wildlife causes in articles in The Times in the 1950s and 1960s.

He is survived by his four daughters of his first marriage, and by his second wife Valerie, to whom he was married for 48 years.

PROFESSOR GORDON STEWART

Professor Gordon Stewart, microbiologist, died of a brain tumour on February 27 aged 47. He was born on October 2, 1951.

GORDON STEWART made one of the most important discoveries in microbiology of the 1990s: that bacterial cells can talk to each other using a chemical "language".

This phenomenon, which became known as "quorum sensing", allows bacteria to control their behaviour in a population-dependent manner, and hints at a key stage in the evolution of multicellular organisms such as ourselves. The decoding of this bacterial language has enormous commercial and therapeutic implications, especially for the development of new drugs for the treatment and prevention of infections due to muld-antibiotic resistant strains. Stewart's career was based on the application of fundamental molecular genetic techniques to problems of relevance to the food and pharmaceuocal industries, such as engineering bacteria to emit

After graduating from St Andrews with a degree in Biochemistry in 1974, Gordon Sidney Anderson Birnie Stewart moved to Glaxo Research at Greenford in Essex. He then took a doctorate at Cambridge, and went on to do postdoctoral work on bacterial spores under the guidance of Dr David Ellar, punctuated by another short sojourn at Greenford.

In 1982 Fisons Pharmaceuticals of Loughborough seconded Stewart to the laboratory of Dr Jon Kuhn at the Technion in Haifa, Israel, where his love affair with bacterial bioluminescence began. On returning to Britain in 1985, Stewart joined the department of food microbiology at Nottingham University, where he focused on the application of genetic engineering techniques to microbiological problems of industrial importance. His success as a teacher and researcher quickly led to promotion, and he was awarded a chair in applied molecular biology (funded by Amersham International). Under his leadership, the department achieved the top rating of 5* in the government assessments of 1996. Stewart's research into quorum sensing emerged from a close collaboration with Professors Barrie Bycroft, Paul Williams and George Salmond. and as it became more pharmaceutically orientated, he moved, in 1997, to the Nottingham school of pharmaceuocal

During his terribly brief but outstanding career, he supervised more than 30 doctoral students, published more than 100 scientific papers and 10 patents, served on the editorial boards and committees of a number of journals and learned societies, and was in great demand as a speaker the world over. He found time to establish a company to develop his work on novel rapid methods for detecting and enumerating bacteria that cause disease and spoil food, and this research was recognised by the Society for General Microbiology, which awarded him the Colworth Prize in 1997.

Stewart's enthusiasm for science was inexhaustible, and he never tackled any problem half-heartedly: mountains were for climbing, not circumventing. He always made time to help his students, and guided many a young scienost embarking on the uncertainties of a research career. His laboratories were always full of visitors, from home and abroad, keen to be initiated into the dark secrets of bacterial bioluminescence.

Stewart is survived by his wife. Lesley, and his three

MARJORIE HESSELL TILTMAN

Marjorie Hessell Tiltman. writer and journalist, died oo February 26 aged 98. She was born on June 16, 1900.

A PROLIFIC writer and lournalist, Marjorie Hessell Tiltman will be most widely remembered for her 1939 bestseller. Quality Chase, a novel set in the Midlands and based on the early life of her father, Sydney Hand.

Majorie Hand was the eld-est of five children, and was born when her father, Sydney, began to achieve real success as a fine-arts dealer in Stourbridee. Despite being her father's favourite, she endured a turbulent childhood, largely because of his mercurial temperament and legendary rages. When she was six years old, he sold every item of stock and all the family furniture in order to finance a move with attendant servants and a nanny for Marjorie and her siblings — to premises in New Street, Birmingham.

Not content with this move Hand believed the only path to real wealth lay in London, and once again he sold everything, this time including the linen. and moved into Grafton Street. The family followed. and settled in Gates House,

Hampstead. On the outbreak of the First World War, Marjorie entered Tremarth Girls School, where she spent four happy years. She subsequently went to the Triangle college of journalism, and spent some time working with her father, who was not the easiest mentor. In 1918 she joined The Pictorial magazine as a junior, but also did freelance work. Around that time she met Hugh Hessell Tiltman, a writer and keen liberal journalist, who wrote a series of successful adventure books, and then, in such works as An Authentic Life (1929) and The Terror in Europe (1930), espoused minority causes with great enthusiasm. They married in 1925 and were to travel extensively. The couple spent a number weeks touring in Russia, where they were made welcome by the Soviet authorities. Her husband's subsequent vivid reports led to his being castigated as a fellow-traveller by the British press and a traitor to the Revolution by the

Together the couple bought a cottage in Coldwaltham in West Sussex, where she did most of her writing on country concerns for periodicals such as Country Life and Good Housekeeping. In 1937 her husband was assigned to Shanghai by The Manchester Guardian. She went out to China to join him. staying with her sister Kathleen and her husband Victor Farmer in Tianjin. There she bought large quantities of jade porcelain, and in particular amassed a fine collection of oriental snuff bottles.

born in Trivandrum, South

India, where his father was

Professor of English at the Maharajah's College. His father died when he was three years old, and the family moved to South Brent in Devon. Later he lived in Winchester with his grandmother and, as a very small boy, attended the Winchester

School for Girls. His later

But she returned home after a few months to her cottage, where she continued her writing career. Her first novel, Quality Chase, was published in 1939, to wide acclaim. It was the Evening Standard's book of the year and was later dramatised on BBC radio. The success of this book prompted her to write a further 13 fiction and non-fiction titles, including the much-praised Cottage Pie (1940), A Little Place in the Country (1944) and Goodbye to Lilley House (1948).

Most of her journalism concerned rural matters, and she spent much time cultivating her garden at her cottage, where she lived happily during the war while her husband was in Washington. When he was posted to Tokyo in 1951, she joined him. He stayed on as Japan correspondent of The Guardian until 1963, but the destruction and poverty upset his wife, and she remained only a few months. Thereafter they lived separate lives. Upon returning to England, she moved to Pulborough, where she lived until her death.

Her husband died in 1976. They had no children. She left £100,000 to PEN to establish a literary prize fund.

CANON BILL VANSTONE

Canon Bill Vanstone, priest and theologian, died on March 4 aged 75. He was born on May 9, 1923.

BILL VANSTONE was a great Church of England priest who devoted his gifts to pastoral care. In his efforts to serve his parishes he abandoned holidays, smoked the rankest of Capstan cigarettes, concealed his extraordinary intellectual gifts from his parishioners and frustrated the efforts of Oxbridge colleges, bishops and friends to obtain his services and to care for his health. He never locked his vicarage door.

He gave 20 years to his first parish at Kirkhoft, a new housing estate outside Rochdale, where he built up the church community and designed a new church building. Afterwards he was briefly at another Lancashire housing estate at Hattersley, which had a grim link to the Moors murders. However, by 1978 his health dictated that he became a Canon Residentiary at Chester, where he was able to write and reflect for the last 12 years of his active ministry. William Hubert Vanstone was born at Mossley Vicarage. Lancashire. He joined the RAF, learnt to fly Mosquitoes in Canada and was lucky to survive a crasb. At Balliol after the war he gained a double first; at Westcott House, Cambridge, he took a starred first in the second part of the Tripos, and he then added further distinctions at the Union Theological Seminary under Paul Tillich in

He was ordained in Man-chester in 1950 by Bishop William Greer, a perceptive recruiter of curates for the North. His first published essay The Ministry in the New Testament appeared in The Historic Episcopate, a volume of essays edited by K. M. Carey. The other con-tributors were all friends of Vanstone's: John Robinson, Kenneth Woollcombe, Barry Till, Alan Webster and Hugh Montefiore.

Vanstone argued against those who would have unchurched the Church of South India. He insisted that in thinking about church structures, meaning, not validity or utility, was crucial. "It does not follow that the Church separated from the episcopate ceases to be the Church ... its life is still the life of the Spirit" In all Vanstone's work, there were flashes of the radical within a scholarly Church of England outlook.

In Lancashire, Vanstone devoted himself to his parishioners, young or old, churchgoing or not. He inspired affection on the housing estate. Everyone knew they could turn to him. He never married. His parish was his family. His summer camps for boys were famous. He created a new parish organisacion called Sigma to replace the Scout move ment. His sermons always arose out of local events, many of which are described in his later writings. Vanstone's pastoral experience led him to be deeply committed to the belief that we worship a suffering God. In 1977 his Love's Endeavour, Love's Expense, which won the Collins Religious Book Prize, set out his convictions on the need for unlimited self-giving in all activities. As he wrote in the 1981 Doctrine Commission Report, 'The Good God may be 'the sharer' rather than 'the cause' of suffering." He urged that neither pride nor indifference should prevent us from accepting each other.

Vanstone was a man of complete integrity, but as the task in housing estates became more intractable and his own health more uncertain, he could respond negatively to fresh approaches to worship and Christian life. On the Manchester Diocesan Liturgical Committee he urged constant adherence to the 1662

Vanstone in the shadow of Chester Cathedral

Prayer Book, Vanstone concentrated his care and thought on the actual sufferings of those who lived around him and the meaning of life in the light of the Gospel. At Chester under the leadership of the thoughtful and courageous Dean Ingram Cleasby, Vanstone had time to conduct retreats, write his Stature of Waiting and continue his ministry as a befriender with an ever-open house. He chose to live in a cottage rather than a spacious canon's residence. There were endless conversations in his little front garden with those passing by on their way to the

He had time to do much for the Church of England Doctrine Commission. His highly original essay on Doctrine Diffused did rare justice to those who, while not attending church, still consider the parish church to be their church. He was a Six Preacher at Canterbury and in 1968 was awarded a Lambeth DD.

In retirement at Tetbury, he wrote his happiest book, Fare Well in Christ. The earlier tense struggles in parishes, which had led him occasionally to romanticise parish life. were over. He appealed to believers to relax in their faith and to trust in a loving as well as a suffering God. This reflected his own discoveries. His meditations on the Sign of the Cross in Russian prisoner of-war camps, his plea that availability is a major human virtue and his final verses on Joseph of Arimathea's Easter are memorable religious writing at a deep level. The whole corpus of his work had reached a conclusion.

Years before, when be was writing The Stature of Waiting, he had described the passive Christ as a figure of extraordinary meaning and dignity. He now lived this out himself. He will be remembered for his hymns, especially Morning Glory. Starlit Sky. and for his small but profound devotonal works.

ABOL-HASSAN EBTEHAJ assistant chief inspector, but Abol-Hassan Ebtehaj. Iranian banker and statesman, died on February 24 aged 99. He was born on November 29, 1899.

FOR nearly six decades Abol-Hassan Ebtehaj served his country, as a commercial and central banker, ambassador and economic planner. Twice he declined the Shah's offer in 1944 and 1950 - to become Prime Minister, knowing that he was not sufficiently pliable to endure the irrationalities and the strain of Iranian Though never anti-foreign. Ebtehaj was a true nationalist. dedicated to reducing foreign intervention in the domestic affairs of Iran. He believed that Iran should rely not on bilateral aid, which was frequently a source of unwelcome political influence, but should seek multilateral aid from such international agencies as the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund.

Abol-Hassan Ebtehaj was seven years old in 1906 when the Iranian Revolution gave the country a modern constitution, and his education in Paris and Beirut exposed him to Western thought as well as making him fluent in French and English. Late in 1920, after the murder of his father by the

the bank's policy precluded Iranians from managerial posts, so he left to join the Government in 1936.

After rising through Bank Melli Iran and the State Mortgage Bank, he became the governor of Bank Melli in 1942. The country was then occupied by Allied forces and experiencing severe political and economic upheaval. Ebtehaj made it clear that he would run the bank as an autonomous institution, and in his eight years there he reformed it thoroughly. He created a cadre of professional officers, restored people's confidence in the currency and the bank, ably represented Iran at Bretton Woods, and successfully negotiated with Sir Stafford Cripps to secure the release of Iran's gold reserve.

Along the way, owing to his intemperate and uncompromising attitude and abrasive style, he made political enemies who ultimately forced him out of office.

Shortly after leaving the bank in 1950, he reluctantly agreed to become Ambassador to France, with accreditation to Spain and Portugal, but he was replaced in 1952. Then he acted as an adviser at the IMF, and director of its Middle Eastern department unol 1954. Fhiehai had been advocat-disrupted the flow of oil revenues. Within a few days of his return to Tehran in 1954. Ebtehaj was received by the Shah, who offered him a choice of heading the National Iranian Oil Company or the Plan Organisation. Ebtehaj elected to serve as the managing director of the Plan Organisation, but made it clear that he would not brook interference from anyone, including the Prime Minister or the

He prepared a new Seven Year Plan and enlisted the help of the World Bank first to provide $75 million credit for development A few days before he resigned in 1959, he received an American mission, headed by Admiral Radford, the Joint Chief of Staff, to appraise Iran's ability to ab-

ed. Ebtehaj roared at the top of his voice: "Iran does not need military hardware: Iran needs economic development." With those words he spurned the last vestige of the Shah's support A few days later, authority for the Plan Organisation was transferred to the office of the Prime Minister.

Ebrehaj then set out to establish the Iranian Bank, which thrived from January 1960 until it was nationalised by the Revolutionary Government in 1979. In an interview with Ed

Murrow in 1961, Ebtehaj spoke critically of economic policy and planning in Iran. He openly attacked Washington for giving economic and military support to developing countries such as fran, and he advocated a programme of international assistance with rules applying equally to all nations. When he returned to Tehran he was arrested and jailed on trumped-up charges relating to the construction of the Dez Dam. However, after seven months, international protests led the public prosecutor to offer his release on bail of $140 million. Ebtehaj refused to accept, and remained dropped. After the Revolution, he left Iran for Cannes, where he lived with Mrs Azar Ebtehaj for a few years before they rame to London, where he

in jail until the bail was

From our special correspondent BEFORE SEBASTOPOL Mar. 19.

THE SIEGE OF

SEBASTOPOL

I HAVE made up my mind never to praise the Crimean weather again till it has settled firmly for three weeks at the least. All our Spring has changed to November - roaring winds, cold gloomy days, and gray leaden skies have driven away our Favonian breezes. our warm bright noons, and mellow sunshine. The weather without being severe is unpleasant just now; ere I finish my despatch n may be worthy of the best season in the best part of Italy or Madeira.

It is easy to give an abstract of our proceedings since the date of our last mail. The Russians have armed their new battery, which the French failed to take some nights ago, and they have erected a strong work. which will soon be armed, on the "Mamelon," formerly known as Gordon's Hill. For three days the enemy have shut up their batteries, and have preserved the profoundest silence. They have closed up about 40 of their embrasures for some unknown purpose. Of concealed these embrasures, no one pretends to say. A force of 15,000 men is reported to have entered the city. Another force of equa strength is stated to have crossed the Tchernaya from the Army of the Belbek, and to have gone away towards Baidar. The French have gained in several attacks to take some rifle pits occupied by the enemy in front of Malakhoff and the Mamelon.

ON THIS DAY

April 2, 1855

Our Special Correspondent was the mparable William Howard Russell. The Prince Consort dismissed him as "a miserable scribbler". Thackeray thought differently: "What can any novelist write so interestine?"

Our siege works are in a state of completion. Those of the French are almost as batteries. The defences of Balaklava are strengthened day after day, guns of large calibre are placed in position along the heights and the disadvantages of a plunging fire are obviated as far a possible.

The French have thrown up a new work, containing six guns, right above our 32-pounder battery, on the road to Kadikoi, General Simpson, Sir J. McNeill and Colonel McMurdo are deeply engaged in the business of their respective departments. Admiral Boxer has devoted himself with much energy to the improvement of the harbour, and has effected very considerable amelioration in the condi-tion of the moorings and of the approaches to the harbour itself, as well as in the roads for the transport of munitions of war which are

A very useful form has been prepared and sent round to the various regiments, I presume by the direction of General Simpson. It consists of a series of questions, to which the answers must be given and sent in twice a month. The commanding officer is regifired to state. "Whether there has been any deficiency of rations?" "How often fresh meat has been issued?" "Whether the men have received vegetables?" "Whether the men are in huts?" If they are not in buts, what is the reason?" "Have the huts been brought up by the regimental horses or by the Commis

Preview: The last in the Hornblow

er series (ITV. Sprn) Review, 1 bet Wenger doesn't have to cope with this nonsense, says Paul Hoggan of Playing the Field Pages 54. 56

A holding agreement

Mr Blair has provided the republican movement with a breathing space in which to reach a fateful decision. Gerry Adams should make

It is the hope kindled by the Easter encounters with the Risen Jesus that makes all things new, in the light of Easter we see that love's redeeming work was indeed done through the Cross, not apart from the most of it

Good Friday

Loose delivery

the Cross....

THE TIMES TODAY

NEWS US outrage at PoW show trial

Three bruised and battered American soldiers, snatched by Yugoslav troops across the border from Kosovo, are to appear at a show trial in Belgrade today.

The sight of the three men on Yugoslav state television looking shocked and haggard caused outrage across the United States and President Clinton said that President Milosevic would be held personally responsible for their safety. He said: "There was absolutely no basis for them to be taken and there is no basis for them to be held"..... ... Pages 1, 4-11

British lorries smuggle refugees

British lorry drivers are being used by gangs to smuggle Kosovan refugees across the Channel every night. Many drivers are the unwitting victims of an operation that involves slipping asylum-seekers into their lorries at Channel ports.......Page 8

Cancer dispute

No fooling

Specialists in breast cancer specialists have clashed openly over whether those with the disease have more chance of survival if they are treated within three months of finding the first symp-

Shakespeare wrote of "the uncertain glory of an April day" but All

Fool's Day, one of the most capricious in the weather calendar, produced temperatures to rival the hottest on record Page 17

An oil paining in the Walker Art

Gallery, Liverpool, once dismissed by Sir Anthony Blunt as being almost worthless has been authenricated as a Poussin, worth

To sign up to the two Prime Minister's declaracion on April 13 Gerry

Adams will have to do what he and his Sinn Fein colleagues have from the outset insisted they cannot do - persuade the IRA to dis-

Canada's newest and largest terri-

Hidden treasure millions of pounds.....

Inuit territory

Ulster peace deal

..... Page 16

..... Page 18

...Page 19

Easter sunshine

Sun-worshippers fleeing the cities for Easter encountered massive traffic congesoon, with the consolation that they are likely to enjoy near-record temperatures. Page 1

War criminal jailed

Anthony Sawoniuk was given two life sentences at the Old Bailey after becoming the only person to be convicted in a British court of war crimes Pages 1-3

Disruptive children

Staff from a high-security hospital are training teachers to deal with disrupove children as young

Education 'deceit'

A union leader launched a songing attack on Labour's stewardship of the education service yesterday, accusing ministers of "designer deceit".... ...Page 12

Cocaine sentence

The wife of former European showjumping champion Paddy McMahon was starting a 12-year iail sentence after being convicted of involvement in a £2 million cocaine-smuggling racket... Page 13

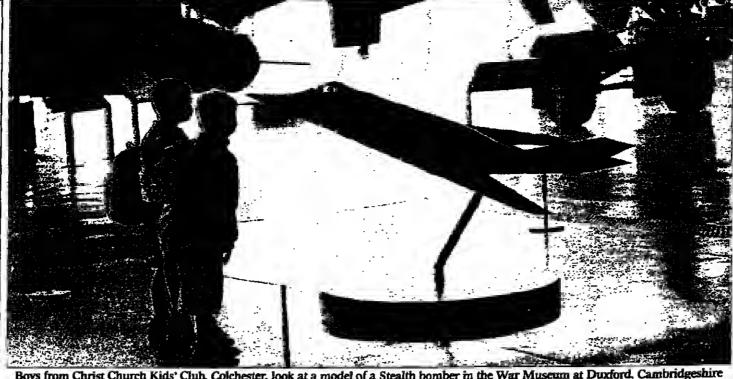

Murder charge

The Briton charged with murdering his children's nanny and lover in the US is alleged to have tory came into being with a freezing fireworks display, a feast of raw seal meat and the promise of beaten her to death with a wrench an apology from the Royal Canawhen she told him she wanted to dian Mounted Police for its past end their relationship..... Page 13 sins to native Inuits....... Page 21

Sterling value of Maundy money

■ The Royal Mint is seeking ways to keep the Queen's Maundy money in sterling should Britain join the euro. As the Queen distributed the specially-minted coins to 146 pensioners in Bristol, Mint officials said they planned to protect the custom of paying the money in 1p. 2p. 3p and 4p pieces should the pound be

Boys from Christ Church Kids' Club, Colchester, look at a model of a Stealth bomber in the War Museum at Duxford, Cambridgeshire

Tomorrow in

The Saturday Times

Ay Carumba!

meg@ voted the best

British Newspaper Awards

Supplement of the Year

Ashcroft returns: Michael Ashcroft, the Conservative Party benefactor, returned to the centre stage in the City with a £282 million takeover bid.

ENSINESE.

.. Page 29 Under fire: Gordon Brown's tax cutting credentials came under fresh attack after the Treasury Select Committee claimed that the overall tax burden "will increase during the coming year" Page 29 BP bonanza: BP Amoco's $26.8 billion takeover of Atlanoc Richfield will trigger million dollar payoffs for execeutives but the loss of more than 2,000 oil jobs... Page 29 Markets: The FTSE 100 rose 34.7 to 6330.0. The pound fell .88 cents to $1.6050 and fell .48p to 67.37p against the euro. The pound index

Tennis: The Great Britain team of Tim Henman and Greg Rusedski begin their great adventure as they set off to defeat the United States in the centenary Davis Cup... Page 56 Cricket: Andrew Flintoff looked an inspired choice for the World Cup after he smashed 112 from 67 balls. Unfortunately, he struck the runs against his own bowlers.... Page 56 Football: Kevin Keegan moved to soothe fears that England's bleak prospects of qualifying automatically for the European Championships might force him to abandon his part-time coach role.... Page 56 Rowing: Oxford still look favourites for tomorrow's University Boat Race, even though Cambridge had a cleaner and more controlled look

Congret it will more unsettled then yes-but it will still be fairly warm. Weles, much of England and Northern Ireland will have a lew sharp showers, but in between there will be some warm sunstine. Eastern Scot-and and northeast England will be cool with mist and low cloud feeding in off the North Sea. Meanwhile, northern and west-orn Scottand will have a warm day with some good sunny spells, although showers may break out in the southwest.

Tonight, a band of showers will move across eastern England and Scotland. Esewhere, it will be dry for a white with clear periods but some more showers will spread into southwest England, Weles and Northern Ireland before morning.

em treand before morring.

I London, SE England, E Anglia, Central S England, Midlands: warm, surny spells, some sharp showers. Wind light, SE to SW. Max 17C (63F).

If England, Central N & ME England: mist and log lowards the coast. Brighter inland with a mix of sunny spells and the odd shower. Wind moderate, SE Max 16C (61F).

I Characteristic Editions SW Exchange Coast.

U Channel Islands, SW England, South Wales: the odd shows this morning but spells of warm sunshine developing. Wind light, SW. Max. 16C (61F).

N Wales, NW England, Lake District,

SPORT

AND S Food of love: "What can music do. what has it ever done, to cure a farnine, curb a tyrant, or reverse a terrible wrong?" Richard Morrison puts forward an answer Page 37 Pop 1: David Sinclair reviews Orbital. Dawn of the Replicants and the rest of the week's new albums; phus jazz albums, and singer Sheila Chandra, South London-born "world citizen" Page 38 Pop 2: Caitlin Moran ponders the curious case of the ever-present pop miracle: plus the reformed bad boys of Electronic, and a band called Brian... Page 39

Gingerbread kids: Welsh National Opera's gruesome version of Humperdinck's Hansel and Gretel travels to Sadler's Wells and terri-op. Wind light, SE to SW. Mex 16C (61F).

D Borders, Edinburgh & Dundee, Aberdeen, Moray Firth, NE Scotlend, Orkney, Shetland: mist and log along the coastal tringes. Warm surmy soeks develop-ing inland. Wind moderate, SE. Max 15C (59F) but cooler on the coast.

(SF) but cooler on the coast.

LI SW Scotland, Glasgow, Central High-hands: mild with a few sunny spells, but a few showers breeking out. Wind moderate, SE. Max 15C (SSP).

LI Argyti, NW Scotland: warm and mainly dry with decent sunny spells. Wind moder-ale, SE. Max 14C (57F).

N Ireland: early showers gradually dy-ing out to leave warm sunny spells by this af-ternoon. Wind moderate, S to SE. Max 15C.

I Republic of Ireland: scattered shower-saerly at first, then surny intervals, clouding over later. Wind S to SE, makely moderate. Max temp 15C (59P).
I Outlook: Saturday will be warm, but rather unsettled with surny spalls and showers. Easter Sunday may start a little cloudy but the east will become warm and surny. The west will also be warm but will stay more cloudy with ratin expected in western Scolland and Northern trained.

0 02

0.01

0 01

0.01

025

land and Northern Ireland.

Jane Shilling: "It is hard to see how the headscarf got itself such a bad reputation. The word summons up visions of redoubtable females. their heads wrapped in a knotted length of material" Page 22 Late winner: The woman who has become a keen supporter of a second division football club. at the 調節機 Sun-spot: Any resemblance to The Sun is deliberate. Swart Higgins. the tabloid's former editor, explains how he helped to launch a new Turkish morning paper.....Page 42 Radlo rebels: Liberalisation of radio licences was meant to increase listener choice. So why are rebel radio stations flourishing ?... Page 44

ENGAIRE ... Ott-course: For students with weak A-level results, it has never been easier to get into university. But higher education can harm job

The map of Canada changed when the territory of Nunavut became part of the federation. We are happy that Canada has recognised Inuit can govern themselves, as they did before. Now is the time for Inuit groups in other parts of Canada to move forward on the same path

- Montreal Gazette

Mr Engel may come to regret that he did not let rain stop his own play on this particular wicket.... Page 25 A STATE OF THE STA STATE OF THE STATE

ROSEMARY RIGHTER Mr Milosevic has plunged Nam into what may be a long and difficult campaign; resolution will be needed to build the peace. The four-

> M. Pinto-Duschinsky Those responsible for current mass murders must be brought to trial without regard to which side they are on. If this happens human rights in Europe may come to be respecied..... Page 24

dations must be laid now . Page 24

VANORA BENNETT

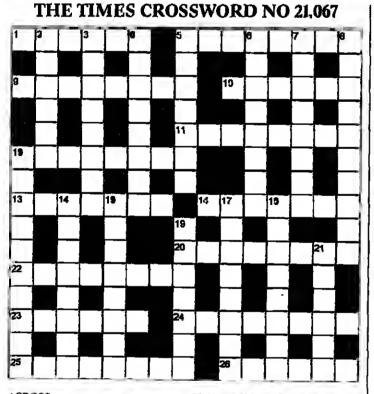

If our democracy is to prove as sophisticated as our weaponry, public support will be best served by honest dialogue Page 24

Lieutemant Colonel C.J. Boyle, wildlife expert: Canon Bill Vanstone; Marjorle Hessell Tiltman, writer; Professor Gordon Stewart, microbiologist Page 27

A Contract Ethnic cleansing in Kosovo: new housing stock; could the Devil be female: Good Friday: women priests; computer chaos; the school run; Thatcher and Pinochet: science in Russia; wedding gifts...... Page 25

1, 5, 12, 24, 26, 38, Bonus: 11

THE TIMES CROSSWORD NO 21,067

ACROSS

- 1 From China it developed, not new as martial art (3.3).
- 5 Deliberate about maiden coming to a ball with aromatic scent (8). 9 Safe to criticise children's play
- 10 Team of five write little (6).
- It Giving one's notice may be very
- risky (3).
- t2 He was brought to book for his woeful predictions (3).
- 13 Fool taken in by wizard's manipulation (7). 16 Had dreadfully died after sack of - ancient city (7).
- 20 Party served with prime fillet (S). 22 Old Jew depressed, expected to embrace another religion (8).

Solution to Puzzle No 21,066

23 Natural blend of tea offered by hotel (6).

- 24 Give approval to girl t take out
- 25 Subtlety of type of creed followed by one saint after another (8). 26 Engage a bishop to lead service (6).

- 2 A nine-month period, then another six, as primate? (3-3).
- 3 Draughts in US politician's house
- 4 What model says at work is grand
- 5 Swaggering confidence in complete cure cut short with heroin injection (7).
- 6 Supporting a risky activity (8). Having no emotions in such a
- g Vigorous old beer odd brew (3-7).
- 12 Blocks broadcast with weird nois es and improvised music (3,7). Conrad is wrong to be cynical (8).
- IS After a month, article describing Pope's age (8).
- 17 Nearly four feet separating horse and a woman (8).
- 18 Travels with short apostolic letter over islands (8).
- 19 After cuts in field operations, they re bound to pile up (7).

21 Name total idiot (6). Times Two Crossword, page 56

TIMES NEW SPAPERS LIMITED, 1999. Published and printed and ficensed for distribution in electronic and all other derivative forms by Times Newspapers Ltd., PO Box 495, Virginia Street. London El 9XN, telephone 0171-782 9000 and also printed at Natling Road, Prescot. Merseyside. L34 9HN, telephone 0151-546 2000. Priday. April 2, 1999. Registered as a newspaper at the Post Office.

AA INFORMATION se Road and Weather condic

The sale office 414 397

AA Car reports by fax id used car reports from menu of 175 curs 0234 416 3## intermetale American Developments List. Carbon House Pressing Land Empayable 2014 Serv

HOURS OF DARKNESS

7.34 pm

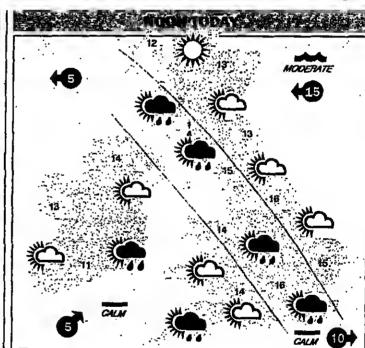

Last quarter April 9 London 7.34 pm to 6.32 am Bristol 7.44 pm to 6.42 am Edinburgh 7.52 pm to 6.40 am Manchester 7.45 pm to 6.39 am Pertrance 7.55 pm to 6.56 am

NEWSPAPERS

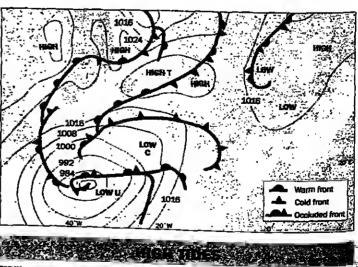

SUPPORT RECYCLING 0.01 0.01

Changes to the chart below from noon: Low C drifts E and loses its identity Low U remains slow moving with little change in pressure. High T drifts N

Yesterday's bottest: Northolt, London 21C (70F). Lowest day man: Tynemouth and Fair Isle 9C (48F). Wettest: Stornoway, Outer Hebrides 0.25ins. Sunniest: Clacton, Essex 11.4 hours.

4

r. . .

....

110

BUSINESS EDITOR Patience Wheatcroft

FRIDAY APRIL 2 1999

Entrepreneur confounds City institutions with complicated offer

Ashcroft bids £200m for CSG

BY PAUL DURMAN

Page 3 the great wheeler-dealer en-repreneurs of the 1980s and now a leading bankroller of the Conservative Party, strode het onto the City stage yester-not day with a £200 million-plus Page offer for the embattled Corpo-rate Services Group.

The tycoon, who gave El milinn to help William Hague's attempts to restore the finance HTER of the Tory party, waded into the row at CSG with an offer hat has confounded three City and the institutions seeking their own " will be conclusion to the troubles at His bur, the employment and training

Mr Ashcroft's offer is one of the more complicated offers that shareholders will have had to deal with. He plans to AICHAEL ASHCROFT, one and then to make an offer worth anything from £206 million to £282 million for CSG which has issued two profits warnings in the past month.

A condition of the offer is that CSG's board should remain unchanged — even though Schroders, Mercury Asset Management and M&G are seeking to force the removal of Jeffrey Fowler, its chair-man, and four other directors. Mr Fowler is understood to share Mr Ashcroft's close ties to the Tory party. However, it is believed that until recently Mr Ashcroft had not seen Mr Fowler for more than ten

Tim Holland-Bosworth, a CSG director, said Mr Ashcroft "clearly thinks more highmerge two of his companies by of management than the

Michael Ashcroft is back on the City stage William Hague and the Tories received £1m dissident institutional shareholders]", whose action he said was badly damaging for the group's business.

However, one of CSG's crit-the £464 million company to knight, they must be colour be formed by the all-share merger of Carlisle Group, Mr Ashcroft's Aim-listed recruitblind." CSG strongly urged its shareholders to take no action. ment and cleaning business, and BHI Corporation, his Nasand to wait for the offer document from "New Cartisle" -

daq-listed facilities management and financial services

Much of the complexity of the offer stems from an "addidonal cash" component, which could be financed by up to E80 million of Mr Ashcroft's shares in Tyco International, the US conglomerate to which he sold his ADT security services business for £3.5

Depending on fluctuations in Tyco's share price, Mr Ashcroft's advisers at Rea Brothers suggest the New Carlisle offer will be worth between 87.7p and 120p for each share in CSG. CSG's shares climbed from 73%p to 94%p yesterday — still far below last year's peak of 261p. One investor said: "Don't ask me to explain the bid. It's difficult to establish the value of a bid from a vehicle that has vet to be created."

Mr Ashcroft, a veteran of dozens of deals, is said to regard his proposal as "very simple", despite the uncertainty over CSG's profitability. Estimates of last year's profits have been cut from £55 million to E20 million but Mr Ashcroft is backing his judgment and experience of running service businesses.

However, New Carlisle's offer would be conditional on CSG making underlying profits of at least £19 million and receiving an unqualified report from its auditors.

The institutions are pressing ahead with their plans to remove Mr Fowler and the other directors, since they have no confidence in the current board's ability to assess

Business Today

C&W finds holes in its net 31.
Stock Market: FTSE fails to hold onto lead 32

Minlmum wage

Cassandras left out of court

SPRIME-

Tokyo close Yen 118.55 MORTH SEA OR.

Brent15-day(Jun). $14.70 ($15.20) Total Control of the London close $200.60 ($279.85)
* denotes midday trading prices

Commentary, page 31

Chancellor under fire over tax burden GORDON BROWN's tax mediately seized on the comdentials came un-mittee's surprisingly critical track yesterday af-conclusions as evidence that the Chancellor had played fast and loose with his Budget arithmetic. Francis Maude, Shadow Chancellor, said: "It is a damning indictment of Labour's lack of openness. This is the most dishonest Budget in his-The Committee's 1999 Budget Report, however, stopped short of arguing Mr Brown's

By Alasdair Murray, economics correspondent der fresh attack yesterday afir the influential Treasury Select Committee claimed that the overall tax burden will increase during the coming year". The Labour dominated committee also rebuked the Chancellor for failing properly to clarify his tax burden calculations and for not spelling out how he had achieved an £18 billion shortfall in public spending. Opposition politicians im-

145.

FTSE scales record

BY ALASDAIR MURRAY

THE Stock Market scaled an all-time high yesterday, bolstered by a flood of fresh investor money and some reassuring economic data.

In the last session before the Easter holiday. the FTSE 100 index for once broke with a weak Wall Street to climb more than 100 points to peak at 6,399.1 during the day. However, the market failed to hold the majorny of its gains and tlosed up 34.7 at 6.330.0. just short of its previous record closing high. Analysts said that end of financial year investment beloed underpin the rise.

The March Confederation of British Industry distributive trades survey showed retailers enjoyed their best month since September. The March purchasing manufacturers index recorded its best month since last May.

tax claims were completely inaccurate. The report said that the this year's Budget measures would reduce tax, as Mr Brown has argued, but by less than previously announced measures would increase the overall tax burden. The report also did not endorse the chief opposition claim that Mr Brown had deliberately manipulated the accountancy treatment of certain taxes and benefits in order to make his tax-cutting

The Treasury has counted the abolition of mortgage rate relief (Miras), which will cost homeowners £2.75 billion a year, as a rise in public spend-ing even though in opposition Mr Brown treated the reduction in the rate of Miras as a

The Chancellor has also counted the introduction of the Working Families' Tax Credit - worth £1.5 billion to eligible families - as a tax cut. despite the Office for National Statistics insisting the credit should instead be treated as a rise in public spending. If these two accountancy conventions were reversed, opposition politicians have calculated that taxes would rise by £100 million as a direct result of this year's Budget. However, the Committee said it saw "no objection" to the Chancellor's measure of taxes and social spending but added that Mr Brown should have better spelt out the differences.

Sir John Browne, BP chief executive, described the deal as a "compelling strategic fit of quality assets"

BP Amoco bonanza for Arco chiefs By CARL MORTISHED, INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS EDITOR

FIVE EXECUTIVE directors of Atlantic Richfield (Arco) will share $17 million (£10 million) in severance payments after delivering the debt-burdened US oil company to BP Amoco in a $26.8 billion deal, confirmed yesterday.

ate a $190 billion behemoth but will lead to the loss of 2,000 jobs at the American company, of which 15-20 per cent will be in Alaska, where BP and Arco are already the numer one and number two oil producers.

The bulk of the jobs will go at Arco's head office in Los Angeles and its downstream opera-tions on the US West Coast. Some 200 jobs will go at Arco's UK headquarters in Guildford, Surrey. Sir John Browne, BP's chief executive, described the takeover, which will propel BP into second position in worldwide oil and gas production, as a "compelling strategic and geo-graphic fit of quality assets".

BP and Arco combined will be the largest oil producer in the US and in the UK. Worldwide, the enlarged BP will pump 4 million barrels of oil and gas per day (bpd), ahead of Shell's 3.7 million bpd but below Exxon-Mobil's 4.3 million bpd. Arco also brings with it a vast gasfield in Indonesia. Tangghu, with 8 trillion cubic feet in reserves. Sir John promised that the deal would generate $1 hillion in cost-savings with 70 per cent coming from upstream businesses, including a $200 million saving in Alaska, struggling to reverse declining oil outputs. In Alaska, BP hopes to cut the cost of lifting a barrel of oil by 80 cents. A restructuring charge of $1 billion will affect BP's accounts where the two companies are this year to pay for redundancies and taxes to the UK Treasury. BP is forced to pay $400 million in Stamp Duty Reserve Tax as a result of changes in the last Finance Bill, which closed a loophole used in the BP Amoco merger.

The initial approach came from Mike Bowlin, Arco's chief executive, who contacted BP in January. According to Sir John, "he effectively offered us the company". Sir John said that the Arco board would be not offered jobs at BP Amoco. However, recent Arco filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission reveal change of control provisions that will award the directors three times their salary plus the highest bonus paid over the past three years, plus a pro rata portion of the current year bonus target. In the case of Mr Bowlin, the severance package could be worth more than $6.8 million.

BP's exploration director, Dick Olver was rushed to Alaska at the beginning of the week for talks with the state government, where BP faces tough negotiations over its potential domination of the industry. Sir John indicated that disposals totalling $3 billion would be on the cards.

C&W sues MCI over Internet sale

BY RAYMOND SNODDY MEDIA EDITOR

CABLE & WIRELESS. the international telecommunications group, yesterday launched a multi-million dollar lawsuit against MCI WorldCom over the $1.75 billion (£1 billion) sale of

MCI's Internet assets last year C&W, in a legal action filed the Delaware Federal Court, accuses MCI of numerous breaches of the sale agree-unspecified amount in damages and compensation.

The UK group says MCI WorldCom broke its agreement by failing effectively to transfer MCI's Internet customer base or its Internet staff; by impeding its ability to operate the Internet business; and by targeting former MCI Internet customers for marketing

C&W says that, as a result of ment and is seeking an, as yet, unspecified amount in damagties. There have also been significant recruitment costs for replacing staff that MCI WorldCom failed to transfer.

The suit also accuses MCI WorldCom of damaging C&W's reputation in the minds of American customers. C&W's share price fell by 22p to 752p on news of the legal action. Denny Matteucci, chief execthe alleged breaches, it has utive of Cable & Wireless USA.

said yesterday the company would do whatever it took to protect customers and services. That includes the costly measures we've had to take due to MCI WorldCom's non-performance under the purchase agreement and our resolve to pursue litigation to a successful agreement," he said.

The lawsuit is clearly the opening shot in a tough final round of negotiations to set a final valuation on the MCI Internet deal. The $1.75 billion deal was always subject to "post-closing adjustments" which in this case could be considerable.

The dispute, however, is unlikely to threaten the continuation of the deal, which is at the centre of C&W's plans to expand using the internet. MCI had to dispose of the Internet business as a regulatory quid pro quo for merging with WorldCom.

MCI WorldCom yesterday declined to comment.

Ford to cut 680 jobs at UK plants

BY CHRISTINE BUCKLEY INDUSTRIAL CORRESPONDENT

FORD is to cut 680 jobs across its UK motor factories to make them more competi-tive with international rivals. The news comes a day after thousands of jobs were saved at Rover's Longbridge plant. The US group is calling for 220 redundancies from the hourly-paid staff at each of its biggest plants, Halewood and will be from salaried staff. All will be voluntary, Ford said. Dagenham, which exports nearly half the Fiestas it builds, has been on a four-day week since October because of poor worldwide markets. Ford employs 26,800 people in the UK and last implement-

Dagenham. Other job cuts ago, when 1.200 posts went. Tony Woodley, Transport & General Workers' Union car negotiator, said: "If the yearly cull continues without something being done to create new jobs or at least maintain iobs, there will be no one left."

ed redundancies two years

Teletubbies director on awards shortlist

THE woman who gave the world the Teletubbies is among the five candidates on the shortlist for the Businesswoman of the Year

Anne Wood, 61-year-old founder and creative director of Ragdoll Productions. the independent producer of the hit toddlers' television programme, has been shortlisted alongside other executives working in retailing, recruitment, IT and ship maintenance.

Rivalling her for the award sponsored by Veuve Clicquot and won tast year by Marjorie Scardino, chief executive of Pearson, are: Linda Bennett, the owner and managing director of LK Bennett, a footwear and clothing chain started in Wimbledon in 1990:

Lorna Moran, the founding chief executive of the quotrecruitment company Northern Recruitment, based in Newcastle upon Tyne. Christiane Wuillamie, a French citizen of Vietnamese descent now living in the UK, who is chief executive of CWB Systems Services, an IT company with offices in the City of London and New York:

Yvonne Mason, chairwoman and founder of Fender Care, based in Seething, Norfolk, which maintains ship fenders.

The announcement of the winner will be on April 29.

EXCHANGE RATES

Celebrating their selection to the Businesswoman of the Year shortlist are, from left, Linda Bennett, Christiane Wuillamie, Yvoune Mason and Anne Wood

Swallow rejects fresh plan for management buyout

SWALLOW GROUP yesterday rejected a last-ditch attempt by Alchemy Partners. the venture capitalist, to rescue a management buyout of its two breweries and a package of tenanted pubs.

Peter Catesby, chief executive of Swallow, said the fresh proposals were "totally unacepiable and would not have offered shareholders adequate value for the assets"

He added: "We do not pro-

BY CHRISTINE BUCKLEY

CAMMELL LAIRD'S South

Shields shipyard closed yester-cussions with Alchemy on this

He was responding to a letter from Alchemy to Swallow on Wednesday night outlining three options for reviving the negocacons. Talks collapsed last week, prompting the resig-nation of Sir Paul Nichelson, the Swallow chairman.

Two of the options involved a cut in the original £63 million offer price, offset by a a review of the group's North-

East operations.

Brett Martin, the deputy chief executive, said: "South Shields suffers from limited la-reduced supply agreement. "Both diminished the value to us," Mr Catesby said. The third opnion was an indicative offer of E125 million, incorporacing Vaux Breweries, together with the entire estate of 650 tenancies rather than just the 350 originally put up for sale by the company in September. This compares with a book value of £144.7 million. of which the pubs account for £100.4 million. Mr Catesby

Sadly, we had to conclude that this would not be cost-ef-fective when weighed against added: "It is our view that the 650 renanted pubs would, if we were to put them on the open market without a tie, fetch £130 million. So there is no value in us considering this."

Jon Moulton, managing partner of Aichemy, said he was disappointed with the Swallow board's reaction and furious at learning of its response by press release. They didn't bother to contact us," he its other workers. The closure of South Shields came the day after the group won a £10 million order to convert a grain ship into a hospital ship. That cause there is an economically sensible solution which would have saved a lot of jobs."

A source close to Alchemy went further in its criocism of Swallow: "They couldn't organise the proverbial in a brewery, which is probably why they's closing them!" Mr Moulton conceded that a deal was now dead and, unless any new buyer emerges, a total of 620 staff will next week receive redundancy nooces. 520 of them at the Sunderland brewery. The breweries are due to close on July 2 Swallow is now considering alternative ways of selling the assets and analysts believe it may make them more attractive by including all 650 tenancies. The parties interested in its Sheffield brewery and 100 or so related pubs are Hardys & Hansons, the Nottingham brewer, and Mansfield Brewery. Pubmaster, the tenanted pub operator, is thought to be eyeing most of the pubs.

creating extra capacity, better facilities and ultimately better employment prospects at the day after the engineering group decided that it needed cilities and environmental rework will be done at its Tynelarger yards." too much money for repairs side yard. Cammell Laird bestrictions and would require and renovation. several million pounds of re-Cammell Laird is to transgan reviewing its North-East fer all South Shields' apprentices and to try to find work for The closure - which took medial work on both the dry siles after buying ALB, the immediate effect - came after docks company, last year. docks and the quayside jetties.

Cammell Laird shuts shipyard

Engineer studies US approach

By ADAM JONES

POWERSCREEN Internation al. the Northern Ireland engineer whose shares have leapt 42 per cent since it announced on Wednesday that it is a takeover target, is mulling over a bid proposal from a US buyer. Although Powerscreen refused to comment in detail, it is thought that its suitor may be John Deere, a tractormaker that has already bought assets from Powerscreen. Industry sources say the suitor is not a management buyout team.

Powerscreen is in play after accounting irregularities led to the collapse of its share price last year. After the irregularities, which are the subject of a Serious Fraud Office investigation, the top three executives were replaced and assets were sold to reduce debt. The Powerscreen board has received a cash proposal that it sees as serious. The approach is not thought to involve Sean Quinn, a businessman based in Northern Ireland whose business is Powerscreen's biggest single shareholder. Mr Quinn is a friend of Shay Mc-Keown. Powerscreen's former chief executive, who left after the irregularioes were found.

Yahoo! in $5.7bn purchase

FROM ANDREW BUTCHER IN NEW YORK

YAHOO!, the loternet search engine, moved to expand its reach yesterday with the $5.7 billion (£3.5 billion) purchase of Broadcast.com.

The purchase of the Interpet audio and video broadcaster is an attempt by Yahoo! to become a one-stop-site for us-ers of the Web. Broadcast.com recently aired a live Webcast of a Victoria's Secret lingerie show, while it also broadcasts sport, press conferences, news and music.

Broadcast.com sharehold-ers will be paid with shares in Yahoo! Although the deal val-ues Broadcast.com at $5.7 billion, the company has not made a profil since it was founded in 1995. Yahoo! will pay $4.7 billion for the compaoy's common stock and a fur-ther$900 million for outstanding options.

The merger is the second this year by Yahoo! In January. Yahoo! bought GeoCities to snare its 3.5 million members and personal Web site

The combined companies will have a market capitalisation of about $40 billion.

BUSINESS ROUNDUP

BNP takeover will cost 6,000 jobs

BNP will axe about 6.000 jobs over four years under its plans to take over Paribas and Société Générale, equivalent to 10 per cent of the workforce. The job cuts will be implemented across the entire merged group. BNP made a hostile bid for Societé Générale and Paribas, after Societé Générale rebuffed it as a suitor at the eleventh hour in favour of merger with Paribas. The French regulators earlier this week gave the green light to the three-way merger and urged the banks to sort out their differences.

Baudouin Prot, BNP director-general, who was in London yesterday, claimed his bank's bid was by far the best option for Société Générale and Paribas. He pointed to the bank's own track record on increasing returns on equity: Over the past five years. BNP's return on equity has risen from 2.2 per cent to 11.8 per cent. Under the three-way merger plan, Mr Prot wants to raise this figure to 16 per cent through a system of cost-curing and growth. The boards of Société Générale and Paribas are to meet next Tuesday to

Commentary, page 3t, City Diary, page 33

Equitable challenge

AN ACTION group represending 1,500 Equitable Life investors has filed a writ against the insurer to widen the scope of a test case over guaranteed annuides being brought to the High Court in July. The Equitable Life Guaranteed Annuity Action Group is fighong Equitable's decision to cut the terminal bonuses of investors who choose to exercise opdons in their pension policies allowing them to take a refrement income 25 per cent higher than they would get from a conventional annuity today. Equitable is calculated to face a £1 billion bill.

Japan tackles bad loans

JAPAN yesterday launched a new institution to recover banks' bad loans, in what could be an important step towards repairing its battered financial system. The new governmentbacked body, the Resolution and Collection Corp. is modelled on America's Resolution Trust Corp, which helped to clean up the savings and loan fiasco of the 1980s. The RCC will buy problem loans from banks and then try to sell the collateral mostly land, to recover as much money as possible. Japan's land prices fell for the eighth consecutive year in 1998.

UK oil revenue down

RISING North Sea oil prices came too late to avert a fall in revenues from UK oil and gas production in February. According to monthly data from the Royal Bank of Scotland's oil and gas index, oil revenues were down 9.4 per cent on the previous month and gas revenues were down by an estimated ,9 per cent. The value of combined oil and gas production fell by an estimated 6.6 per cent on the month, to £40.5 million a day. The average price of the benchmark Brent crude was: $10,20 a barrel, down 27.5 per cent on February 1998.

Skillsgroup reshapes

SKILLSGROUP yesterday confinued its transformation from a computer reseller into a pure IT services group through the £32.5 million acquisition of Cap Germin's British training division. After the deal, about 60 per cent of the group's revenues will come from services such as training, consultancy and recruitment. The remainder will come from upmarket computer reselling and related services.
Skillsgroup shares rose 6 per cent yesterday to 323p, compared with 158p in November.

Tempus, page 32

King World for CBS

CBS, owner of the US television network, yesterday paid $25 billion (£1.5 billion) for the King World production company, whose programmes include the Oprah Winfrey Show. The deal gives CBS access to King World's stable of talk and entertainment shows, and to the $1 billion in cash hoarded by its founders, the brothers Michael and Roger King. The brothers will retain their jobs heading the syndication company when it becomes an arm of CBS. Profits from the Oprah. Winfrey Show are about 40 per cent of King World's income.

Scats buys export unit

THE Southern Coundes Agricultural Trading Society (Scats) is taking over Continental Grain's UK grain export business and assets for an undisclosed sum, it was announced yesterday. Scats will get Continental's Southampton deep water grain export facilities plus animal feedstuffs and fertiliser import facilities. Grain exports through the port of Southampton average more than 850,000 tormes a year. The acquisition follows last year's takeover of Cootinental Grain's worldwide operations by Cargill, the agrifood concern that is America's largest private company

Raphael's grim picture

SHARES of Raphael Zorn Hemsley fell 27p to 65p yesterday after the UK corporate finance advisory group said that because of poor market conditions in the insurance sector first. half profits would be well below expectations. The group, which deals in corporate finance, market-making and instititional stockbroking, claimed that its profits had been hit by the downturn in the general insurance sector, particularly in corporate finance. The company, which floated on AIM in 1996, made £1.3 million in the first half, last year.

Banner voices fears

BANNER CHEMICALS, the group formerly known Sutcliffe Speakman, yesterday gave warning that it does not foresee any improvement in its sector until "the end of the fourth quarter". The announcement follows a profits warning in January. Stuart Lloyd, chairman and chief executive, ha agreed to stand down as part of cost-cutting arrangements. His departure from the board is said to be "totally amicable". Banner currently has no borrowings and net assets of ETS million. The shares fell up to 8up.

Scotia founder raises £8.5m in share sale

BY PAUL DURMAN

DAVID HORROBIN, the controversial founder of Scotia Holdings, has raised an esti-mated £8.5 million by selling almost all his remaining tl.t per cent stake in the drug development company.

The sale came only two days after Rob Dow. Scotia's chief executive, savagely criticised the state of the company and the development work that he took over from Dr Horrobin.

Dr Horrobin was forced out last May after a boardroom battle to seize back control from Dr Dow. Even before yesterday's sale, he had sold about £5 million of shares Perpetual, the fund management group, acquired 5.25 mil-lion of the shares owned by Dr Horrobin's Wimberley Investments, paying just over 100p a share. Nomura International placed another 3.35 million shares with other insotutions. Perpetual, a big shareholder in the troubled British Biotech.

is now Scotia's biggest invest-or, with an 11.35 per cent stake. Dr Horrobin is expected to use some of the money raised to finance Laxdale, his new company, which is thought to include some projects that he acquired from Scotia.

The sale of Dr Horrobin's stake removes the overhang that has contributed to the weakness of Scotia's share price over the past year. Yester-day the shares were Ip off at 1011/2p. down from a high last year of 3874p. Dr Horrobin has many scientific papers to his name, but could not gain regulatory approval for Scotia's seemingly promising products.

re we about to see a cause A célébre that could prick the internet bubble? If Cahe & Wireless gets to court with is lawsuit against MCI, it could retainly prove a long and pain-ful exercise for more than the diect participants.

MCI turned itself into Amerias number two long distance telhephone carrier on the strength of balling potoriously sharp wits. The group has been caricatured as a wifirm with an antenna on top. legal into a legal battle with so formidable an opponent.

News of the lawsuit pushed Ca-he & Wireless shares down 3 per cant as investors took refuge in C&W Communications, the UK re dishoot. Clearly, traders mused.

The something has gone wrong with the wholesale and retail Internet to business that C&W bought from the MCI for £1.1 billion little more than six months ago.

At the best of times, it is hard for any board to allow that it might have been sold a pup. Indeed, the only time this is likely to occur is when the top team changes. Graham Wallace is suing over a deal done under former C&W chief Dick Brown, the bottom of the change of the chief brown. the the dynamic American who has h since repatriated himself.

Even so, it is a double-edged sword. C&W was generally thought to have established a leading position in Internet net-MCI was a forced seller. In order

C&W finds holes in its net to be allowed to merge with WorldCom, whose UUNet is the market number one, MCI had to divest its number two business. In the highly coloured lan-guage of its writ, however, C&W claims that MCI tried to woo away its customers, denied access to customer contracts, held back key staff and generally made life hard. As a result, growth rates of 50-100 per cent collapsed to "far short of the rate at which the market is growing as a whole", tens of million of revenue were lost and costs rose.

As yet, it is not clear whether this is a conventional contract spat in over-the-top American legalese or something that will inflict serious permanent damage on the business. Even after a change of management, the com-pany is understandably not in-clined to play up the import of its row to a home audience.

The significance, perhaps, is to show how fragile the Internet business can be. Growth rates are now so high that everyone can have a share. Turning that business growth into revenue and revenue into profit remains uncharted territory. C&W's row with MCI World-Com is a reminder that business COMMENTARY by our City Editor can just as easily be taken away. that it may not be hard for new entrants to cannibalise the market and the conditions do not yet exist to eliminate enough lowoverhead competition to establish the profit margins that share prices already anticipate.

Not being an Internet stock may be the mark of a dinosaur in retail, telecoms and financial services. Being an Internet stock is no guarantee of fortune.

French bank on money and flag rench bankers are only too aware that the eyes of the fi-nancial world will be on them next week. Boards of Société Générale and Paribas must decide whether to go along with an unprecedentedly hostile bid for both of them by Banque Nationale de Paris.

The spurned earlier suitor of SocGen has already outflanked the substitute merger arranged by the other two. While that merger led to a fall in the combined share prices, BNP's hostile revenge has boosted all three.

The reason is simple. Putting SocGen and BNP together gives scope for massive cost-cutting, in-cluding phasing out at least 6,000 jobs in France alone. And BNP has shown it is able to cut costs. By trimming the cost ratio, it has become the most profitable of the big French groups, even if that only raises it to the standing of the Swiss.

Paribas is in different businesses such as consumer credit, investment banking and insur-ance. A merger of either of the high street banks with Paribas is more creative, making the framework for a universal bank on the German pattern. But it does not. of itself, save costs.

Inevitably, euro politics have intervened. The French Government, at least, appears to believe that it would be a great coup for for the creation of national mo-nopolies in Belgium, Italy, Spain and France that passes for restructuring to compete in the single market of euroland. In the words of BNP's Bau-douin Prot, "When the flag and France to create the world's big-gest bank in terms of assets. The SocCen/Paribas deal was immemoney point the same way, it is hard to go the other way". Quite.

diately wrapped in the Tricolour That man Ashcroft at the Elysée. Now the Governor of the Bank of France has virtually instructed the two would-be is back again victims to talk turkey with BNP in the wider national interest. t is hard not to have a sneaking admiration for Michael Ashcroft's utter disregard for Abroad, BNP has been cast as his reputation as "the controver-sial tycoon". If he had any con-cern at all for losing that tag, he would not be plunging so wholethe agent of French financial gloire and the top national priority of keeping out the Germans. At home, however, things look different. By going to the mar-kets rather than relying on the smoke-filled rooms, this vigor-ous reinvention of a former moriheartedly into the mess at Corporate Services Group. bund state bank has been cast as CSG, the employment and training group that owns what became of Blue Arrow, had already roused the City's ire with two poorly explained profit warnings in the space of three weeks. The finance director seems to have become an enemy in his own boardroom, prompting a shareholder attempt to throw out his chairman.

Just to liven things up further. Mr Ashcroft has pitched in a mind-bogglingly complex takeover proposal from a company that has yet to be formed. Inves-tors are offered the tantalising prospect of taking paper in an Aim-listed company controlled by Mr Ashcroft and some cash. The amount will fluctuate with the share price of an unrelated American company - unrelated, that is, except that Mr Ashcroft wants to sell some of his Tyco shares. And just for good measure, one of the main conditions of the offer flatly contradicts the board changes being sought by Schroders, Mercury and others.

Mr Ashcroft clearly thinks he can make a killing from CSG, but, to spice things up, has chosen to thumb his nose at almost the entire City while he does so. With so many players involved, this one is set to run and run.

Vacant hot seat

ONE more deadline has passed without a new Director-General being chosen to head the World Trade Organisation. Thailand's foreign minister and an ex-New Zealand prime minister are deadlocked. Even the EU's votes are split. The trouble is that only a diplomatic conciliator is likely to become a consensus candidate, but a tough leader is needed to bang some over-powerful heads together if a trade war some time in the next few years is to be avoided. Perhaps somebody should threaten trade sanctions.

Hanson buys second largest US brickmaker

BY ADAM JONES

Will ? HANSON, the building matenak group, is buying the scond-biggest brickmaker in America as part of its transatlantic expansion plan.

Hanson, which emerged from the break-up of the multinational empire created by Lord Hanson and Lord White. s boying the North American bick arm of Jannock, a Canadian company, for £160 million in cash on a debt-free Jannock made an operating profit of £20.4 million last ear, on sales of £120.1 million. tdraws 70 per cent of its sales from the US market. The remainder comes from Canada.

where it has a 70 per cent market share in Quebec and Hanson shares have risen strongly from 305p last September on the back of a buoyant US market, which helped overcome fears about the state of UK housebuilding and construction, where fears of slowing domestic growth or even recession had damaged investor sentiment. Yesterday. after the Jannock deal was announced, the shares fell to 535kp, down 20p, by close of Nearly £17 million of the purchase price will be paid only when plans for a new brickmaking plant in Ontario are approved. Completion of the purchase is anticipated in the second quarter of this year. A Hanson spokesman said the group will continue to con-venture into US brickmaking. Hanson's UK brickmaking arm, which is the secondbiggest in the country, has an operating margin of about 25 per cent, the spokesman said, compared with 17 per cent at sider bolt-on acquisitions for Jannock, which is its first

Jannock. He said Hanson's succesful cost and pricing control sys-tems, which are in the latter stages of being introduced into its US aggregates businesses. will be implemented at Jannock. The spokesman said there would also be focused investment, in areas such as kiln controls, to increase profits. However, it is unlikely that there will be purchasing benefits to be gained from Hanson's new bulk in the

Andrew Dougal, chief executive, said: "The inclusion of the Canadian operations is consistent with our objective of gradually widening our geographic presence into a limited number of new areas outside our primary markets of the US and the UK."

brickmaking market.

TV deal and new chief for Scoot

SCOOT.COM, the loss-making Yellow Pages rival, yesterday announced the appointment of a new managing di-rector and a digital TV deal with Cable & Wireless Com-munications (CWC), the cable group (Chris Ayres writes).

Jon Molyneux, 40, will join Scootcom from the UK division of Apple Computers, where he was managing dimotor for three years. He rerector for three years. He re-places Martin Keogh, who becomes chief interactive and channel partnerships officer.

Scoot, which last year reported losses of £27 million (£15 million), is to develop and supply digital interactive TV services for CWC. Scoot shares were unchanged at Tempus, page 32

Inchcape sells in Middle East

BY PAUL ARMSTRONG

INCHCAPE has taken another step in its transition from a trading group to a vehicle distributor, with the sale of its marketing operations in the Middle East for $116 million (E72.5 million).

the Anglo-Saxon barbarian, interfering with the normal civilised French way of doing things. BNP top brass are not unhappy with this. A generation after Lloyds's Sir Brian Pitman, they extol the need to chase shareholder value and to change the old ways of doing things.

At least that provides a figleaf

The sale brings the amount raised from Inchcape's asset disposal programme to £618 million since March last year. This is expected to result in a one-off payment to shareholders of about £1 a share, in line with Inchcape's promise to distribute the proceeds.

The sale of the Middle East marketing business, which was bought by Cupola investments, a Dubai-based development capital group, leaves the company with only its Asia-Pacific office automation business to sell as part of the rationalisation process.

Inchcape said yesterday it expects this to be sold by June. It has already sold bottling businesses in Russia and South America, marketing operations in the Asia-Pacific region and its shipping services group. The asset sales are aimed at leaving Inchcape with only its international vehicle distribution division, that provided 67 per cent of the company's operating profit last year.

This business has exclusive distribution agreements with manufacturers, including Toyota and Mazda, in 30 countries. Inchcape shares closed 3p higher yesterday at 145p.

The way ahead, page 33

TT Group poised to raise stakes

TT GROUP said yester-day it was ready to increase its hostile takeover bid for Hall Engineering after John Sword, Hall's chief executive, unveiled an £82.8 million management buyout (Paul Armstrong writes).

The buyout, backed by Candover Partners, the venture capital group, has made a recommended offer of 155p a share. This compares with TT's existing offer of 136p. Hall shares closed 14%p higher yesterday at 155p. Mr Sword said yesterday that the MBO offer had secured acceptances representing 52 per cent of Hall's shares.

Covered by Allianz Group.

Wherever you are. Whatever you do. A company in the Allianz Group is always on your side. To us thek management means seal companies such as Carabili our financial strength - both locally and elebally

Allianz. The Power On Your Side.

FTSE fails to hold onto lead as books squared

SHARE prices raced to a record high, just one point short of himing 6,400, before falling to close well below their best of the day. Wall Street opened on a high note but, by the time the London market closed, the Dow Jones industrial average was bearing a hasty retreat af-ter publication of the latest US purchasing managers' survey.

At its best the FTSE 100 in dex hit a peak of 6.399.1 with a rise of 103 points. But by the close that lead had been whitited away for the index to finish 34.7 up at 6.33(10). The fig-ure at the close was just 5.7 points below its best closing level, hit three weeks ago. The rise on a shoriened week was 190.8. By contrast, the FTSE 250 in-dex finished 21.9 down at 5,453.3 as total nurnover reached 1.19 billion.

Once again, early sentiment was dominated by the current spate of mergers. BP Amoco. down 39p at £10.09%, fanned the flames by confirming its $.37 hillion (£17 billion) merger with Atlantic Richfield.

Yesterday also marked the end of the first quarter as well as the end of the financial year. The session was taken up with window dressing by both institutional investors and traders eager to square their book positions.

Private investors were able to finish off opening extra personal equity plans before the introduction of the Isa. Once this had been completed, it was time for the profit-takers to move and cream some off the top. But with hopes riding of another cut in interest rates next week when the Monetary Policy Comminee meets, selling pressure is likely to be limited.

The extent of the market's volatility was clearly reflected in the movements of leading shares. Glaxo Wellcome touched £22 fuelled by suggestions that merger talks with Bristol-Myers Squibb, the US drugs company, might be re-sumed. The price later senled 82p higher at £21.58. Zeneca continued to benefit from a large buying order carried out earlier this week by Deutsche Morgan Grenfell. £30.37 as 31.5 million shares changed hands.

EMI Group responded to news of stakebuilding in its shares with a rise of 1714p to 459 p. Putnam Investments has picked up 26.16 million shares, or 3.32 per cent of the

COCOA

ROBUSTA COFFEE

... 1557 BID

Patrick Pearce, Country Gardens finance director, saw shares blossom, helped by forecasts of warm weather over Easter music publisher. A total of 7.47 million shares were traded. News of stakebuilding was also behind a rise of 221-p to 2521:p in Cambridge Water. tts bigger nival. Anglian Water, down 8p at 752 p. has bought a near 10 per cent stake, or 652,338 shares.

The mobile-phone operators were wanted ahead of what is expected to be another set of house, issuing a "strong buy" rating and setting a target

Takeover favourite Pilkington ran into profit-taking, finishing op lower at 7612p as St Gobain, the French glassmaker, denied suggestions it was prepared to bid. Earlier reports claimed it was ready to offer 100p a share for Britain's biggest glassmaker, which has

The agreed bid for Hall Engineering, up 14½ p at 155p, by Acertec came after the close of trading. It values Hall at £82.8 million, Rival bidder TT Group, unmoved at 17612p, is now considering whether to raise its offer. If it decides against such a move, watch Silvermines, down up at 25p, where it holds a small stake.

buoyant subscriber numbers next week. Credit Lyonnais Securities, the broker, expects Vodatone, up 31p at E11.82, to have achieved 700,000 new subscribers with Orange. 27!: p dearer at 894p. (335,000). and Cellnet 350,000. Cellnet is owned jointly by British Tele-com, up 17p at £10.28, and Securicor, 22thp higher at 568p. Telewest advanced 8 in to 277Gp with Morgan Stanley

Dean Witter, the US securities

COMMODIFIES

-065 -035 -036 -030 -035

. .129 50-130,00 - . 131 00 800 Volt 17645

LIFFE POTATO (E/I)

LONDON METAL EXCHANGE

ent Physica | 14.25 and 15 day (Man) | 14.75 and 15 day (Man) | 14.75 and 15 day (Man) | 14.70 lexic Informediate (Man) | 16.50 lexics Informediate (Man) | 16.50

PRODUCTS (S/MT)

IPE FUTURES (GM Ltd)

GAS OIL . _ .129.25-129.50 Jul 129.75-129.00 Aug 139.00 SLR seen its price collapse from a peak of 148p last year.

Charles Bauer, the deputy chairman, has unloaded 293,115 shares in Amvescap at 635p. It reduces his total holding to 46.8 million, or almost 7 per cent. Amvescap eased 7/sp to 619p. Scottish & Southern Energy firmed 14p to 56l4p as David Payne, a director, picked up 3.000 shares at 5724p. He now holds 5,000 shares. Share-buying by one director

MOVERS	OF THE WEEK
Price	Change
Marks & Spencer 405hp Selfridges 253p	+26½p
Glaxo Wellcome £21.58	+262p Merger speculation
BP Amoco£10.09\pp
ICt 5501-p
AEA Technology 346p	-23½p Recent profits warning
Emap£12.35	-69p Brokers' downgrading
Premier Famelt 2074p	+13½p Brokers' recommendation
Stanley Leisure 2731/2p	-284pProfits warning

Group 3p to tllp. Patrick Muleahy. finance director, has bought 30,000 shares at 110p. The group has appointed Rowan Dartington as house broker.

Linden held steady at 180p after Lou Jovic, finance direc-tor, sold 28,000 shares at 178p. He cononues to hold 142,300, or less than I per cent of the total. But XKO firmed lp to 159p as John Gardner, a director, bought 20,000 shares at 158p. Powerscreen touched 16315p as the group continued to draw strength from this week's bid approach. But the profit-takers moved in, leaving the price 3p softer at 146%p. IOC International also added 1444p at 8644p after agreeing the terms of a bid with SDL on Wednesday. It looks as if AEA Technology has fallen far enough, for the time being. The price ral-lied 24p to 34op on the back of news that the group has linked up with Cadcentre Group to develop their 3D technology and client base. HSBC Securi-oes, the broker, says the shares are a "buy" and has set a target price of 410p, while Merrill Lynch has upgraded from "reduce" to "neutral".

The warm weather that has been forecast over the Easter holidays should be good news for Country Gardens. Its shares blossomed 104p at 248p as investors pinned their hopes on the garden centre operator enjoying a boom time at its check-outs.

Coffee Republic touched 134p before reverting back to square at 125p. The group has linked up with Waterstones, the bookseller, and is to install its own coffee points at each of Waterstones' new stores.

GILT-EDGED: Bond prices in London lost an early mark-up as US treasury bonds turned easier on the back of the Purchasing Man-agers Index and ahead of today's employment numbers. In the futures pit, the June series of the long gilt finished

36p down at £116.98, while among conventional issues Treasury 9 per cent 2008 shed INEW YORK: Blue chips in late morning trade as Internet shares rallied. By midday the Dow Jones industrial average was up 29.42 at 9.815.58. ☐Owing to technical problems at our supplier the recent issues refer to Wednesday's

LONDON PINANCIAL FUTURES

Jan 99. ... Sep 99 ...

MAJOR INDICES 1089.87 (+3 50)

16327 56 1-490 94 Hong Kong: Hong Seng Amsterdam: Frankfurt Singapore: 1545 19 1 + 25 881 Brussels: 25.20 ____ Zurich: SAE Inter

0.6737 1-0 0046)

RECENT ISSUES

	Ason Group	27212	+	1
	BGI Endowment III	991=
ł	Camporm Euro Restruct	10712	+	2
1	Cairngorm Restruct Wrts	25	_
1	Canary Whart (WD	3311:	_
١	Enhanced Zero Trust	100%
ı	Gander Proparties	71-		٠
1	Galmore High Income	107	+	1
ł	Gartmore Zero Div PI	1062
ı	Govetl Enhanced Dv PI	1024	+
1	Govell Enhanced Inc	94
ı	Jupiler En Zero Dv PI	108
į	Jupiter Enhanced Inc	102	+
١	Luminar Warranis	255	+	5
ı	M Currie Cap Return	75 .
Į	M Curie Portiolio	79'2	_
I	Morse Holdings	244
l	Murray Global Return 8 Ut	$185
Ì	Murray Global Return Pri	1024
١	Mulray Global Return Units	184':
Į	NBA Guantum	110

RIGHTS ISSUES

First Tech Criv Pri rup (320) 28 Holmes Place n/p (275) 17's Waste Recycling n/p (406) 45

MAJO	CHANGES
RISES:
Stock	Clase Ching Ching's
Corp Services	94's + 21 + 28.5 86's + 14's + 20.1
Rolle & Notan
Easynet.	470 + 54'2 + 131
Character Grp	155 + 14'2 + 10.3 345 + 31'2 + 10.0
Acom	217'2 + 17'2 + 87
Fuji Bank Y McCarthy & S
Hamleys
Skillsgroup	323 + 18'2 + 6.0
Independent Barn Scotland	787'2 + 15 + 55 867'2 + 44'2 + 5.4
Delatactain	2571 + 121. + 50

105,28

97.195 97.240 97.040 91.160 97.890

5,-5, 4% 5-5,

5. 5.-5% 5.25 5.-5%

5. 5.51 490 9.51

113.35 113.50 113.15 113.30

97.215 97.180 97.265 97.220 97.090 97.025 97.185 97.156 97.110 97.085

97.200 97.210 97.300 97.240 97.848 97.150 97.160 97.000 97.100 97.000

#3 5'≈5'₹ #3 5'≈5'$

544 5-52 2-21 F-1 49-44

94.960 96.000 94.810

computer distribution com-

33220

793

113971 61463

TEMPUS

A slick operator balanced by UK funds that

ARCO was a siming duck for BP, to was highly geared, heavily exposed to oil prices and suffering a collapse in profits. Its dividend is uncovered by earnings and in the absence of an improvement in the oil price the market was expecting a cut in the payout. Hardly suprising, therefore, that its chief execurive made a call to Sir John Browne at BP.

It is hardly surprising because the fit between the two companies is so good. The two are already twinned at Prudhoe Bay in Alaska. And the absence of crossover downstream makes the merger almost astonishingly neat BP claims that not a single Arco petrol station competes with BP Amoco, and that suits both the regulators, and the expansionists at BP.

Despite the inevitable job loss headlines, this deal is less about cost-cutting than a cheap opportunity for BP Amoco to expand worldwide. In Alaska, the two companies have trimmed hard already and Arco has abandoned its glinering downtown LA skyseraper head office. Joo.

It also enables BP Amoco to increase its exposure to gas -always a sore point for oily BP. Into the bargain BP is getting juicy opportunities, such as Tangguh, the vast gas play in Indonesia. BP Amoco also takes a quantum leap in its share of US refining and marketing. Moreover the jewels are offered on a plate, with no immediate investment requirement. The Arco retineries are top drawer and Tangguh is still on the drawing

A goodwill write-off of $20 hillion (E12 billion) will savage BP Amoco's earnings. But the buyer's ability to use highly rated paper to buy underperforming Arco stock means that the deal will be strongly positive in cashflow terms. he measure that maners.

board.

There is also a risk that Arco investors will sell their BP Amoon shares when the deal is sealed but this will be agement elderly and addicted i fringe benefits. Sir tohn Browne has created a ruthless, asset-stripping machine that looks, at present. unsioppable. If Shell feel they have no choice but to bite their lips and pay up for pricey BP Amoco, which now represents an astonishing to BP Amoco is the most expensive oil stock around, but for good reason. The oil sector had become as bunged up as a barrel of crude, its organisation bureaucrane, its man-per cent of the FTSE too.

fails to address its problems quickly, it is not inconceivable it could end up in a BP m.

The oil price is helping, 100. Do not be short.

Dec

Jan

Nov

Skillsgroup

EIGHTEEN months ago Skillsgroup (formerly called P&P) was regarded as a "boxshifter"; that is, a company that sold low-margin personal computer hardware.

After a series of corporate disasters, it decided to transform itself by getting rid of its low-margin distribution business and buying into highmargin services companies involved in IT training, consultancy and recruitment.

Yesterday's £32.5 million acquisition of Cap Gemini's UK training business forms the latest part of this strategy. and comes hard on the heels of the company's £34 million acquisition of Ponris Consulting a few weeks ago.

The company reckons that 60 per cent of its revenues now come from "resource management" - IT services such as training, consulting and recruitment. Its remaining revenues come from upmarket computer reselling - a rival to Morse - where margins can be improved by the tying-in of related services. Meanwhile, Skillsgroup has completed the disposal of P&P, its troubled personal company's share price has more than doubled from 158p to yesterday's price of 323p as a result. The only big worry is over whether the management can cope with such massive change in such a short period of time. That risk, however, appears to be built into the company's share price, which despite the impressive recent advance is still only 20 times earnings forecast for the year ending November 1999. Given that lower class resellers such as Computacenter are currently meriting this kind of rating, Skillsgroup shares look undervalued.

Lloyd's vehicles

THERE is a gaggle of small companies anempting to achieve recognition operating as insurance companies at the Lloyd's market. Their number includes Amlin, Cox Insurance, Euclidian, Kiln, Ockham, SVB, Wellington and Wren and are commonly vehicles because they ap-proach Lloyd's as providers of capital backing for insurance risks, and as an underwriter of those risks.

Last summer several Tempus column inches were given over to discussing ILVs.

The view held then, that the restructuring of Lloyds was a good enough reason to get involved and own shares in these firms, has increasingly

If the faith that has now ebbed away is to be restored, ILVs will have to demonstrate the ability to deliver consistent profits from underwriting. It will not be enough to earn fabulous returns one year but disappoint the next,

ILVs must also be able to demonstrate this ability by publishing clear numbers for underwriting performances. and publishing them in a way which makes them easily comparable with their peer group. Performance numbers need to be recent and companies need to earn reputations for publishing accurate forecasts for their under-

Profit and loss accounts tell little about the value of the shares. Shareholders need instead to look, and be helped to look, for a sustainable underwriting earnings multiple. The sooner the boards are subjected to the discipline of paying progressively im-proving dividends the bener.

out to earn investor respect.

DOLLAR RATES

Australia.	1.5678-1 5691
Canada	£.5039-1 5049
Denmark
Euro
Hong Kong	7.7496-7.7501
Japan	119.36-119.46
Malaysia
Norway	7.7305-7.7365
Singapore	1,7288-1.7298
Sweden	8.2340-8.2440
Swazerland	1.4806-1 4816

OTHER STERLING Cyprus pound 1.4819-1.4543 8.8354-8 9983 483.00-495.00 12.4211-12.4296 5.0935-6.0976 Singapore delia: 2.7718-2.7752
5 Akica rand. 9.8230-10.0748
U A E dinam. 5.8400-5 9886

FISE VOLUMES

4839 15,205 24,495 27,775 25,205 25,2 14.644624 39.95153 3.945 looked wide of the mark.

writing performances.

ILVs have their work cut EDITED BY ROBERT COLE

WALL STREET APP lac.
AMP 2 5141-2,5169

而是是有多类的方面是是多类的。 1967年,1968年,1968年,1968年,1968年,1968年,1968年,1968年,1968年,1968年,1968年,1968年,1968年,1968年,1968年,1968年,1968年,1968年,19

Down Jones
Down Jones
Down Jones
Date Service
Essama Kousis
Essama Kousis
Essama Kousis
Essama Kousis
Essama Kousis
Essama Kousis
Essama Bord
Essama Cop
Essama Cop
Essama Cop
Essama Cop
Essama Cop
Essama Cop
Essama Date
Essama Date
Fast Cops
Fast C

Minn State Part Control Part Co

4SDA (150-)
4SDA (150-)
4SDA (150-)
4SDA (1527-)
4SDA (1527-)
4SDA (1527-)
8A (160-)
8A

31 Sheep 96 23 -1 23 102 11 +2 77 -31 0 96 54 +0 53 -44 0 91 57 068 90 33 -0 96 -9.0 98 76 +1.39 -12.0 Copper Gale A ($.torne)
Liud ($.torne)
Zinc Spec Hi Gale ($.torne)
In ($.torne)
Allumatin Hi Gale ($.torne)
Nickel ($.torne) Cash: 1370 0-1371 0 507 50-508 00 991 00-992 00 5280 0-5285 0 1214 0-1215 0 4850 0-4835 0 કુક મોલામાં આવેલું કો મુખ્ય મહિલાનો તે છે. LIFFE OPTIONS Prudenti 1*803*-1 Rie Tinto 1*859; R-Rayce 1*265*-) Tesco (*166) Uid Brsc (*182) 900 900 950 1150 1200 374 40? 3000 3100 364 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | 150 | BG 173821 8Sav8 (*529) 5 800 1716 7 800 1716 7 800 1716 7 800 1716 7 800 1716 7 800 1716 7 800 1716 7 800 1716 7 800 1716 7 800 1716 800 1 785.Les. (856) 1
877. Sebb (*278) 696 (*278) 696 (20) 1
87. Acro (20) 8 Acro (20) 8 Acro (20) 1
8 Telem (*1028) 6 Acro (20) 1
1007. Carton (1286) 1
67. Carton (1286) 1
107. Carton (1286) 1 Pets
Jam
1741; 19312121;
232;
2511;
270;
200; 3261;
33661; 2061: 245 264 281 300: 324 327 376 346 316 286 256 256 201 182 136 Dec 474% 514'-561

Japanese Govt Bood Jun 99.... Sep 99.... Asi 99.... Sep 99 ... Dec 99 ... 3-Mith Enribor 230 950 930 950 935 940 936 939 930 035 00er oteres 2192 3-Mith Euro Libor FISE 180 MONEY RATES (%) Base Rates: Clearing Bank 5: Firance House 5: Discount Market Loans: Origin hat: 5: Treasury Bills (Dis):Buy 2 min 5 + 3 min 5. Seli Local Authority Deps Sterling CDs: Dollar CDa: Building Society CDs 5% 5%52 485 5%5% EUROPEAN MONEY DEPOSITS (%) GOLD/PRECIOUS METALS (Baird & Co) Pullion: Open: 5280 00-280 40 Cless: 5280 40-280.90 High: $290 40-280.90 Low: $280 00-280 40 AM: $290.50 PM: $280.55

5-Year 6課

ruperrand: $281.00-283 00 ($175 00-177 00) Insure $359.00 (0203.75) Silver: $5.005 (03.125) Pedindham: $349.00 (0211.50)

> Zunch....

STERLING SPOT AND FORWARD RATES 11,027-11,040 1.483$-1.4855 .4837-1.4853 2 4090-2 4284 1.5016-1 5115 2.4132-2.4163 1.6045-1.6055 D 28-0.15pr 0.057-0,037 p 0.100-0,070 p "state" "state" "state "state" "state "state" 21-22 pr "state" 22-22 pr "state" 22-22 pr 12376-12547 13 180-13 363 12.375-12.393 13.180-13.204 190 81-192.57 2 3582-2.3935 191.70-191,98 2 3582-237 (3

صكذا من الاصل

Minimum wage leaves Cassandras out of court

Landmark has finally drowned protests from its detractors, writes Christine wo million people are now better off. One in II of the working population has gained from yesterday's introduction of the national minimum £3.60 for adults and wage — E3.60 for acruits and E3 for workers aged between 18 and 21 -- with pay increases averaging 30 per cent.

Buckley

A legally enforceable minimum wage is the end of more than 100 years of campaigning by trade unions and brings the UK into line with many other countries that impose a basic floor on pay levels. But, as in many employment issues, the Government's legislation has left some parties on both sides wailing their dissatisfaction.

Unison, the biggest union, has shifted its campaigning from demanding a minimum wage to calling for a living wage and wants the level lifted to £4.79 — half of male median earnings. The T&G also believes the rate is way too low, arguing that employers should pay a minimum of more than £5.

Some employers, especially smaller companies, and economists have given warning of dire job losses as companies struggle to meet their new commitment. Business Strategies, the economic consultancy, has this week spoken of 80,000 job losses, while Patrick Minford, the rightwing economist, has said that up to 250,000 jobs could go.

Meanwhile, the TUC and the Confederation of British Industry are taking a more pragmatic line. While the TUC is not delighted at the rate and the CBI is not entirefy pleased with its existence. both organisations have declared the minimum wage Industries such as hotels. retailers and services — that are labour intensive - and textiles, which face tough compeal rivals, will be the hardest bit. The hospitality sector will have to raise the pay of 30 per cent of its workers, while 15 per cent of retail workers are set to benefit. - Many large unionised workplaces will experience no dificrence after the start of the minimum wage, as the rates agreed already exceed the new starting level. The real effect will be felt by many workers in small businesses, part-time employees and those who work from home. Women workers will gain more than men as they are paid less on

However, many companies have pre-empted the launch of the minimum wage with recent pay increases. Interestingty, many are also choosing to pay all their workers at the same rate rather than force younger workers to take the lower statutory rate.

It is the small business world that has made many of the starkest warnings over minimum pay. They com-plain that pay flexibility is a

Labour-intensive service sectors and retailers will be affected most by the new minimum wage necessity for the new small business and that their market power is so slight it is impossible to pass on increased costs to their customers. The argument against this is that higher pay will reduce staff turnover which, in itself, is a drain on a business. Some believe that the minimum wage could force some businesses either openly to flout the law or to drift into an informal economy, free from official scrutiny. The mini-mum wage's police will be some 100 special staff from the Inland Revenue. Their job will be to make sure the country's employers comply with the legislation and to investigate complaints made by workers, either through employment tribunals or to the Department of Trade and Industry's hotline. The police numbers could be increased if the workload proves too great, but officials are optimistic that the majority of businesses will not break the law. The burden of proof in disputes will be on the employers, who face penalties if they ignore enforcement or-ders. They will have to pay each employee double the minimum wage per day to each worker for the duration of their defiance of an order. In addition, transgressing busi-nesses will be fined although fines cannot exceed £5,000.

But wrangles over enforcement are likely to be dwarfed by the constant pressure from unions to up the rate.

Unison will hold a series of celebrations today to welcome the minimum wage. Next week it will go back on the offensive with a big rock concert and rally in Newcastle attacking the rate. Organisers are press home their contention that £3.60 is only a start. Tickets are priced at £3, highlighting the lower level for younger workers. This rate was decided by the Government against the recommendation of the Low Pay Commission, which advocated £3.20. The decision ignited a storm of protest from unions that argued young people should not be paid less than older workers when they faced the same cost of living.

It is likely that the youth rate will be the first part of the minimum wage that is reconsidered in response to the controversy. It had been imposed because of greater fears of unemployment among younger workers. But if these concerns prove unfounded it could be raised before the standard rate is revised.

However, neither move is likely to be quick and Unison may have to hold a good number of rallies before the minimum wage nears its own objective - if it ever does. The Low Pay Commission is due to report to the Government on the impact of the minimum wage by the end of the year. But even then, the Govern-ment is unlikely to back a quick rise for fear of appearing hasty. While there has been much speculation about the economic impact of a minimum wage, the reality will only emerge after a prolonged

We may well soon see a spate of redundancies being blamed on the minimum wage. Whether or not this is the case, rather than falling markets or poor management or other competitive pressures, will remain to be seen.

Professor George Bain. chairman of the Low Pay Commission, has said that the minimum wage could take up to three years to bed down properly before its true impact can be ascertained.

This is probably a little long, in political terms, to keep the rate pegged at £3.60. Not only will the rate's value have diminished substantially by then, we will have had a general election. It will not barm a Labour Party that is often accused of being too business-friendly by its traditional supporters modestly to move could easily be explained to employers as merely an attempt to keep pace with inflation.

n doing this, the Government would not even be likely to encounter much opposition from the Conservatives. The party has become increasingly ambivalent towards the minimum wage. A combination of the Tories' new-found interest in the poor, and the realisation that pledging to slash the pay of millions of workers will not win votes, has led to a recent moderation in their stance. Remarkably, John Redwood, Shadow Trade and Industry Secretary, admitted a couple of weeks ago that the Conservatives would not necessarily dismantle the minimum wage. The pay regulation that was first promoted amid much protest is clearly seeing some of its high-profile detractors fall away. The Cassandras that warn of high unemployment costs could follow.

NO APPRECIATION SOCIETY Selis Middle East ness for £457 JANUARY 8, 1999 for £51m

Acid test for trading house turned vehicle distributor to demands from investors to decide where its future lay, inchcape is about to face the stock market's acid test. For the trading house which was once a well-entrenched member of the London Establishment, this means learning whether its reinvention into a vehicle distributor has been worth the effort. The sale of Inchcape's office automation business, which it expects to complete within three months, will mark the end of the company's extensive transformation. But, more importantly, it will herald the start of Inchcape's concerted campaign to convince the market that its shares are worth buying - and worth paying considerably more for. This will be no mean feat. Despite the asset disposal programme, inchcape will continue to carry the baggage con-taining its poor perception for some time. It will also need to persuade investors, and this is the hard part, that its shares warrant a higher price earnings multiple than that attributed to most vehicle distribution companies. The sector's poor popularity is shown by its earnings multiple of seven to eight times. to be part of it is not much clearer than why anybody would choose to buy a house in Kosovo.

Philip Cushing, chief execu-tive, acknowledges this, but says: "You can't change what you are." Mr Cushing also points out that the alternatives, which were to retain one of the other businesses or remain a conglomerate, were even less attractive.

This is a compelling argument, as is the fact that the Paul Armstrong considers the impact of Inchcape's disposal programme

sales will fund a one-off pay-ment to shareholders of about El a share.

However, the steady flow of asset disposals, which started with the sale of the Russian bottling business in October and has so far generated £618 million, has done little to close the substantial gap between Inchcape's share price and the FISE all share index.

Inchcape shares were smashed from £2 in August to 91p by October, amid fears about the impact of the Asian crisis on car sales. The stock has since edged its way back to yesterday's close of 145p, although the index has staged a imilar recovery.

Analysts say the fact that Inch-cape is yet to be paid for the £457 million sale of its South American bottling business is a key reason for the market's reluctance to embrace the process. the deteriorating outlook for vehicle sales in most markets this year, particularly the UK.

But having accepted its lot in life, Inchcape can at least start selling its merits to the investment community knowing that its business is now probably simpler and easier to understand than ever.

There is nothing too compli-cated about the activities of Inchcape Mk II. It has exclusive distribution agreements with severmanufacturers, including

Toyota, Mazda, Chrysler and Ferrari, covering 30 countries. UK sales generate about one-third of the distributorship's profit, with Europe and Asia providing much of the rest. However, Inchcape is also selling an increasing number of cars in South America, the Middle East and Africa. Those who see limited investment value in distribution companies argue that many of the prospects for organic growth are in the hands of those making the products and that acquisitions present the best chances to lift the bottom line.

ut Mr Cushing rejects b the assertion, saying advertising and after-sales service are just two ways in which vehicle distributors have a big impact on sales. He also points out that there are few, if any, significant acquisition opportunities for Incheape.

Mr Cushing cites figures showing that the markets in which Incheape operates grew 6 per cent last year. This compares with Inchcape's growth rate of almost 13 per cent.

Inchcape has also joined the rapidly growing line of companies searching for a way to in-clude the Internet in their business. It has formed a joint ven-By-Tel, under which Inchcape will operate a car purchasing web site similar to the highly successful model employed by its partner in America. Mr Cushing believes there are also bright growth prospects for Inchcape's vehicle finance arm. In the meantime, Inchcape can start calculating the return to shareholders from the sale programme. Shareholders, for their part, may prefer to delay calculating their own returns from Inchcape.

Broker deal

THIS one is hard to believe. but it is true. A futures broker at ING Barings has discovered that it is possible to e-mail Slobodan Milosevic from his Bloomberg trading terminal. Do I detect a hint of scepticism? Bloomberg has a service that provides profiles of famous people; type in "Who Milosevic" and you get a list that includes a couple of footballers and the Butcher of Belgrade. You can then e-mail any of those with available addresses, which is what John Macpherson at ING Derivatives did, to Slobodan.Milosevic@gov.yu. His message was: "Give back our boys (the captured US soldiers) or you will regret it". Bloomberg confirms that this is indeed possible, although they seem as surprised as Macpherson himself.

AN APRIL fool from India. and on a more cerebral plane than our own giant chickens or rhinos with measles. I think. The Deccan Chronicle says India and Pakistan will create a common currency, the IndoPak, by January 3000.

The pilot agreement was to be be signed yesterday by the two countries' respective Foreign Secretaries, the paper said, in the presence of an adviser from the European Commission. The Commission man. a spoilsport as ever, then reminded readers of the

Off the menu

THE un-Gallic hostility surrounding the Banque Nationale de Paris bid for both Société Générale and Paribas becomes easier to understand. Baudouin Prot, chief operat-

Gen about a possible merger for some time. They arranged a meeting with their counterparts on Saturday, January 30, to finalise this. SocGen cancelled at the last moment.

The BNP directors decided to go ahead with a lunch planned for before the meeting anyway, this being France where lunch is rightly deemed important. They read in that morning's Le Figaro that Soc-Gen had instead agreed a merger with Paribas.

"It was a very pleasant and useful lunch, as you may imagine," says Prot dryly.

Drip teed A READER complains about some autocratic treatment by vate client business. He has been a shareholder in BP for vears and has taken advantage of the enhanced dividend offer, which gives you an extra 25 per cent on top if you reinvest your payments in BP

This has had to end, to be replaced by something called a dividend reinvestment plan, or Drip. It works much the same. But Barclays is refusing to offer this to customers, saying they must take cash. As Drips will be increasingly common for tax reasons, I suggest to Barclays they put their house in order.

"It's being looked at, and hopefully we will be able to do something in the next few months," a spokesman

AT 8.46am yesterday the Reuter screens flashed up a story headed "Glaxo-SmithKline Beecham talks collapse." Analysts were shocked - had the talks started again in secret and then been called off? It soon became obvious that the news story came from last year. My man at Reuters laughs nervously: "It was a technical glitch."

On ver bike GORDON BROWN was boosting his green credentials environmentally conscious acts was excluding bikes bought by employers from the list of taxable benefits.

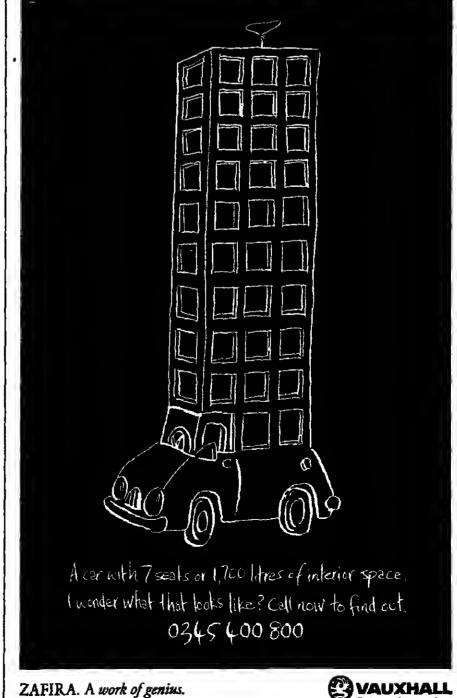

Now, and I am indebted to John Battersby, tax partner at KPMG, for this, someone is worrying about tax evasion, and the benefit is to be limited in the Finance Bill to bikes used for commuting.

It raises the question, how will they check? Battersby himself imagines tax officers riding around on their bikes after but I think he has missed the obvious solution. Clearly the Revenue will have to order a huge fleet of gas-guzzlers to police the new dispensation.

> MARTIN WALLER city.diary@the-times.co.uk

Gordon Brown will damp

Raising the Standard

Glasgow makes itself a must-have location for top-flight retailers here were no soap opera celebrities on hand to cut the ribbon and no free gifts being handed out. There wasn't even a bagpipe to be heard. But when the doors to Buchanan Galleries, Glasgow's newest shopping centre, were thrown open for the first time this week, about 100,000 people passed through in the first few hours.

Although many were looking, rather than buying, a fair proportion of the scrum of people who managed to force their way onto the centre's escalators emerged clutching shopping bags. Even those just looking may well return to spend. The operators of the Galleries were gratified. 'There has been a lot of interest," Sandy Cook. chief executive of the Buchanan Partnership, said. "Now we want to see it turned into business."

Buchanan Galleries, valued at £200 million, has 600,000 sq ft of space and 80 shops, including the first branch of the John Lewis department store to open in Glasgow, Alone, the centre will make a huge difference to how people shop in Glasgow. However, it is by no means the only development.

tf planning consent is given for all the sites that developers want to turn into shops, a further 500,000 sq ft of retail space will be added in years. Moreover, a huge shopping development covering up to 1 million so ft is due to open five miles outside the city in September.

Sarah Cunningham on openings for top stores in Scotland's shopping boom

Capital Shopping Centres is building the Braehead shopping centre on the site of an old power station between Govan and Renfrew, west of Glasgow. After a toughening of planning regulations, it is likely to be the last big regional shopping centre to be built in Britain. It will be firmly massmarket, with large branches of Marks & Spencer. J Sainsbury and Woolworth. Ikea, the Swedish furniture company, may open its second Scomsh branch there.

Glasgow's retail developments have been seized on as an opportunity for those English and overseas retailers that are under represented. or even unrepresented, in Scotland to move in Sainsbury, which has just 12 Sconish branches, will not be in Braehead with a branch big enough to qualify as a hyper-market, it has also opened its first branch of Sainsbury's Central at Buchanan Galleries. The formal is similar to Tesco's successful Metro. and is intended to provide snacks and quick-to-prepare meals for the Galleries' workers and shoppers.

A London-based retailer that flirted with the idea of moving to the Galleries but ended up choosing Edinburgh instead is Harvey Nichols. Mr Cook is none too fond of the upmarket fashion store. By the time it had decided not to come to his Galleries he had already given up and let the space. "I am so glad we did not wait for Harvey Nichols," he says with a shake of the head. The site that Harvey Nichols might have taken is now occupied by the biggest branch of Habitat in Europe, a large Boots and the biggest branch of Next in Scotland. The deal struck by Harvey Nichols in Edinburgh is reputedly will use it as bait to lure other upmarket retailers. Glasgow will not go unchaltenged as Scotland's re-tail capital. Selfridges is another London department store that is big on high fashion and is branching out into the provinces. Having successfully opened in Manchester, it may yet end up in Glasgow, even though plans for it to open up on the site of the old Buchanan Hotel were High fashion aficionados in the city are already well catered for by Frasers, the House of Fraser flagship store, which has recently been renovated, and by the smaller fashion stores in Princes Square, which is also being expanded, and in the Italian Centre, which houses Versace. Armani and others. Another new development, next to the Buchanan Galleries, is on the site of the old George Hotel. It will contain a huge Virgin Megastore and some clothing chains, mong the shops recently opened are branches of Borders and Waterstone's, now two of the largest bookstores in Britain, Indeed, so many very large stores are emerging in Glasgow that you begin to wonder whether it is all going to be economically sustainable. Can Glasweigians spend enough to make these good investments for the developers and the retailers?

Mr Cook is sure that the investments will pay off. "Glaswegians have a relatively high disposable income." he said. "Housing ownership and car ownership are relatively low, and they like to shop and are fashion-concious." Robert Miller, retail analyst with Dresdner Kleinwort Benson, is also confident that it can work, "It really is a thriving city." he said. and I'm sure there is plenty of scope to increase the amount of spending there."

Rents of about £180 per square foot at the Buchanan Galleries compare very favourably with London. where £400 or £500 per square loot can be paid for top sites. Also, the new developments provide the big sides that retailers now consider essential to show their full ranges. Glasgow looks likely to remain a big draw to retailers, as well as shoppers, for some time to come.

The Buchanan Galleries in Glasgow are attracting shoppers - and also retailers lacking outlets in Scotland

The Buchanan Galleries could be followed by a further 500,000 sq ft of new retail space in Glasgow MANY WOMEN LAWYERS EEELTHEY FAVETO SACRIFICE EVERYTHING NEFE O BUILDA

...IT DOESN'T HAVE TO BE THIS WAY

SUCCESSEUL CAREER

The 1999 Woman Lawyer Forum will: focus on improving gender awareness " and driving out prejudice

MAINSTREAMING

Dismantling the barriers

· Hear refreshingly bonest talks from successful women lawyers Participate in hispiring discussions

Enjoy interactive specialist workshops

The 1999 WOMAN LAWYER FORUM

Saturday 15th May The Queen Bizabeth II Conference Centre, London

www.blaircomms.co.uk

CONTACT US NOW: Telephone 0171 722 9731 . Facsimile 0171 586 0639 . Email info@blaircomms.co.uk

Canadian buy for Tomkins

Tomkins, the conglomerate, is to buy ACD Tridon, a windscreen wiper manufacturer based in Canada for C$155 million (£63.3 million). ACD Tridon, part of Devtek, will be bolted on to Tomkins's automotive engineering business. Tomkins is paying £22.5 million in cash from existing debt facilities and assuming £40.8 million of ACD Tridon's debt. ACD Tridon last year made operating profits of £5.1 million on sales of £121 million.

Garton tumbles

Garton Engineering, the metals group, saw pre-tax profits almost halve to £802,000 last year after what Tim Garton, managing director, called an "extremely poor final quarter" because of an unexpected downturn in UK and export markets. Earnings per share fell to 14.4p, from 30.6p. The final payout falls to 5.25p (5.5p). giving an unchanged Sp total.

Mansfield progress John Mansfield, the builders' merchant that is an acquisition vehicle for the UK Active Value Fund of Brian Myerson and Julian Treger, reported 1998 losses of £1.7 million. about half 1997's deficit. It said the £1.5 million cost of its unsuccessful bid for Marley has been picked up by Phillips & Drew, the fund manager that subscribed for shares.

Charlton in black Premiership football has put Charlton Athletic into profit with a threefold rise in interim turnover, to £8 million, on the back of television money and a tripling in sales of season tickets to 17,000. Pre-tax profits for the half year to December 31, after transfer costs, were £1.4 million, against losses of £1.1 million previously.

AFA fundraising

AFA Systems, provider of Musketeer capital markets risk-management software, is raising £4.5 million by a placing of new shares at 90p. It says that it aims to spend the money on marketing Musketeer. The shares rose 3p to 971:p on a cut in 1998 losses to £1.4 million, from £1.8 million.

BUPA suffers £23m loss at core business

BY GAVIN LUMSDEN

BUPA, the private health insurer, yesterday blamed a fall in its annual surplus on the Government's tighter fiscal regime for private healthcare and the economic downturn.

Sir Bryan Nicholson, chairman, reported a fall in BUPA's pre-tax surplus to £50 million in 1998 from £55.5 million in BUPA's core UK insurance business incurred a £23.2 million loss as a result of an II per cent rise in the level of

Edward Lea, finance director, said the increase in claims had been caused by the Government's withdrawal of tax relief on private health insurance premiums for the over-60s. This had increased the cost of private medical cover for older people and had prompted many to claim on their policies. General economic uncertainty and the threat of iob losses also caused a sharp rise in claims from younger people in company healthcare schemes, he said.

Total insurance claims rose to £830.4 million from £773 million, wiping out a £27.3 million increase in premiums to El billion. The company invested £22 million in technology and customer support services, which masked an overall reduction 5

Almost 40 per cent of income came from healthcare provision, compared with 27 per cent in 1997, following the acquisition of the care homes of Care First Group. Goldsborough Healthcare and Community Hospitals.

Turnnyer in the division leaped from £388.6 million to £699.4 million as a result of these purchases. The division also secured a 12-year £108 million contract to manage 15 homes for Bedfordshire Coun-

VFG aims to raise £10m

VFG, the broadcast video. film and grip equipment hire and sales company, is raising £t0 million by way of an open offer to fund expansion. The placing is to be made on a one-for-ten basis to sharehold-ers at 50p a share (Matthew. Barbour writes).

VFG also gave warning that the first half of the current year would produce a "small loss". David Rudd, new executive chairman, said that in the year to end November pre-tax profits rose 30 per cent to £1.2 million on sales up 166 per cent to £14.5 million. The full-year divi-

PGA sells non-core land

BY MATTHEW BARBOUR

PGA European Tour Courses. the golf course operator in which Mark McCormack's IMG has a 19.3 per cent stake. yesterday continued its drive to focus on its four flagship courses by selling two blocks of "non-past two years has realised £9.5

at Catalunya, outside Barceloessential" land for £1.5 million. The group, which over the core assets, said its strategic re-focusing on its flagship facilities is now largely completed.

PGA is due to open a third course at its Woburn site next summer as well as a new course na, in two months' time. tion that PGA is looking to sell-

Michael Friend, chief executive, countered recent specula-million from the sale of nonoff its two smaller Collingtree Park and Stockley Park clubs. The group reported pre-tax profits for 1998 up 8.5 per cent at £1.3 million (£1.2 million) on turnover down 35 per cent at £6.8 million. Mr Friend said the reduction in turnover feflected the consolidation of the group's operations. Earnings per share rose to 1.2p (1.0p). There is no dividend

				TANTES CINITERREST	INFORMATION SER	WICE	INII IRUSI	FRICES 33
THE STATE OF THE S	95.37 50.291 + 017 5 40 10 191 10270 + 8550 155.30 37.31 + 0.20 5 50 TREST 1.10 147.96 157.67 + 1.15 145.58 145.98 19.90 177.95 + 0.00 2.16 116.90 110.950 95.70 960.00 + 0.00 2.50	See Bay Pitts 144	Scale Day Wiley Yes	Trace lates 123 10 121 60 3 1.2	Selector	Sed Bay Vealy 151	Sed Ear Weby no	Seal Char White Yell
Frank State Control of the Control o	#### #### #### #### #### #### ##### ####	American 3 Gan 36 20 49 691 + 220 0.47 Corporat Apr 1920 127 047 691 + 220 0.47 Corporat Apr 1920 127 047 - 040 1.82 1.02 1.02 1.02 1.02 1.02 1.02 1.02 1.0	FRAME BISTON BISTY MEMOT LTD Say 9177 328 1930 paning 1835 778912 Amason Ground 173.00 183.407 + 3.70 4to Account 173.00 183.407 + 3.70 Amas Sanit Cit. 714.50 789.20 + 3.70 -to-Account 729.90 775.40 + 20.70 -to-Account 729.90 775.40 + 20.70 -to-Account 600 80 724.301 - 20.70 100 Cont Sanit Cit. 774.70 + 0.27 -to-Account 784.70 774.4 - 0.27 -t	Macros Macro Macros Macros Macro Macros Macros Macros Mac	Serian Lan. 224.0 + 2.00 - 2.00 - 40-2.00 - 40-2.00 - 200 -	Brigds 1970 753 00 + 7 10 5 93 for page 1970 753 00 + 7 10 5 93 for page 1970 753 00 + 5 20 5 93 for page 1970 753 10 + 5 20 5 25 10 + 5 20 5 25 10 + 5 20 5 25 10 + 5 20 5 25 10 + 5 20 5 25 10 + 5 20 5 25 10 + 5 20 5 25 10 + 5 20 5 25 10 + 5 20 5 25 10 + 5 20 5 25 10 + 5 20 5 25 10 + 5 20 5 25 10 + 5 20 5 25 10 + 5 20 5 25 10 + 5 20 5 25 10 + 5 20 5 25 10 + 5 20 5 25 10 + 5 20 5 20 5 20 5 20 5 20 5 20 5 20 5	GUELTER FURTY MANAGEMENT LTD STYT 556-800 1 118 45, 125 697 - 190 3111 Instantal Ress 145 57 154 807 - 251 000 IN Smaller Cox 128.64 136 71 - 0.46 171 ERLEADEZ LINTY MISRS LTD STREET STORE LAW STREET STREET STORET STORET STREET STREET STORET STREET STREET STORET STREET STRE	SHARP (ALBERT E)
The state of the s	Mail	CERT CHARGES OF EMBLASSO FLASOS 917 388 1978 10 10 10 110 11 1205 16 11 16 3 10 10 16 18 11 11 1205 16 11 12 11 10 16 18 18 11 11 12 15 16 11 12 11 10 17 18 18 1978 10 18 18 18 18 18 18 18 18 18 18 18 18 18	-do-Accions 44.55 46.55 + 8.74 8.74 Empages 440 2400 47.50 + 7.50 40 Accions 25.40 275.30 + 7.50 40 Accions 25.40 25.40 + 8.012 8 Endra Income 50.40 55.40 + 8.02 8 8 Accions 25.40 30.40 + 8.50 4.00 40 Accions 25.40 25.40 + 8.50 4.00 40 Accions 25.40 25.40 + 8.50 4.00 4.00 Accions 25.40 25.40 + 8.50 4.00 Accions 25.40 25.40 Accions 25.40 Accions 25.40 25.40 Accions 25.40 Accions 25.40 25.40 Accions 25.40	Difference 187.80 113.80 + 1.50 2.98	Amilitiza			Abec 1 55.89 + 3.55 Ame for Food 1 2251 + 3.55 Entopena 1 299 13 + 6.50 Const Bond 1 01 2 + 0.66 Const Bond 1 01 2 + 0.66 Entopena 1 299 13 + 0.66 Entopena 1 123 5 + 1.56 Entopena 1 123 5 + 1.56 Entopena 1 123 5 + 1.76 Entopena 1 123 5 + 1.77 Entopena 1 127 15 + 0.16 Ento Receive 1 99 15 -0.16 Ento Receive 1 19 15 Entopena 1 125 10 744 20 + 6.51 Entopena 1 125 10 745 10 + 1.70 Entopena 1 125 10 10 10 + 1.70 Entopena 1 125 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10
per 17 337 In 6 Forest No. 17 17 17 17 17 17 17 17 17 17 17 17 17	189 50	Smaller Cos	Banding SETP 600 Schol deng SETP 600 Schol Set Pr P Annaica 1190 117 71 + 0.70 1.77 1.7	Company Comp	-00 - Account 200.79 261.22 + 0.89 4.00 604 34.20 36.70 - 0.20 0.60 40 - Account 41.70 44 10 - 0.20 0.67 41.70 44 10 - 0.20 0.67 41.70 44 10 - 0.20 0.67 41.70 44 10 - 0.20 0.67 41.70 42 6.70 6.70 6.70 6.70 6.70 6.70 6.70 6.70	The bissages Remains planes William the-Legal French Card Equity (A) #8 211 7 4 205 1.33 Card Equity (A) #8 212 7 4 205 0.40 She Equity (A) #8 245 7 4 205 0.40 She Equity (A) #8 446 1 400 1.55 She Equity (A) #8 450 1 400 1	Figure 1755.00 1957.00 1967.	SOCIETY GENERALE UNITY TRUSTS LTD Class Barrices: 1806 100 254398 IN GOOM AND AND 100 254398 IN GOOM AND AND 100 254398 IN GOOM AND 100 254398 IN GOOM AND 100 201 100 807 - 3 20 0.95 Enco Subh Acc. 94 47 100.307 - 2 60 STAYERICAL UNITY TRY SIGNS LTD SINOPPRINCE 5.1 40 65.441 - 0.06 6.00 Elecal 100.30 107.201 - 2 00 0.31 Encount France 100.30 107.201 - 2 00 0.31 Encount France 100.30 107.201 - 2 00 0.31 Encount France 100.30 100 70 - 3 00 IN Encount France 100.30 100 70 - 3 00 0.40 STANDARD LIFE INVESTMENTS LTD Count Inite Transic 1006.33 33 53 After Liver 1000 50 50 50 Tarrisonant France 1006.33 33 53 After Liver 1000 50 50 50 Tarrisonant France 1006.33 33 53 After Liver 1000 50 50 50 Tarrisonant France 1006.33 33 53 After Liver 1000 50 50 50 Tarrisonant France 1006.33 33 53 After Liver 1000 50 50 50 Tarrisonant France 1006.33 33 53 After Liver 1000 50 50 50 Tarrisonant France 1006.33 33 53 After Liver 1000 50 50 50 Tarrisonant France 1006.33 33 53 After Liver 1000 50 50 50 Tarrisonant France 1006.33 33 53 After Liver 1000 50 50 50 Tarrisonant France 1006.33 33 53 After Liver 1000 50 50 50 Tarrisonant France 1006.33 33 53 After Liver 1000 50 50 50
Age shifteness. Age statement age	128 10 17 17 17 17 17 17 17	Fleed in Acc 316.00 317.26 CHY FRANCIAL UT MERIS LTD CTY FRANCIAL MERICAL UT MERIS LTD CALL TO TAMBOON UNIT TO MERIS LTD	145.03	Mer Japan 170,07 127,50 + 8 77 100,000	Pertise 5 7694 09 1521.10 +7120 247 Pertise 6 7694 1159.87 1159.87 1159 270 Pertise 6 7694 1159.87 1159 270 Pertise 6 7694 1159.87 1159 1159 1159 Pertise 6 7694 1159.87 1159 1159 Pertise 6 7694 1159.87 1159 Pertise 6 7694 1159.87 1159 Pertise 6 7694 1159 Per	### ##################################	ST_AMPESTS_PLACE_HT_SHOUPS_LTD Bird 1302 6500 Fig. Earl be GB_Earl brig inc. 650 600 680 70 6.10 8.23 GB_Earl brig inc. 650 60 680 70 6.10 8.23 GB_Earl brig inc. 650 60 680 70 6.10 8.23 GB_Earl brig inc. 650 60 680 70 6.10 8.23 GB_EARL 100 1807_20 1807_20 9.00 GB_EARL 100 1807_20 1807_20 9.00 GB_EARL 100 1807_20 9.00 GB	And Regr (Bin Acc.) $360 + 0.41 And Part (Bin Acc.) $4.90 + 0.73 1.05 Corporate Bo line $ 00.12 1 + 0.00 5.53 Ex Early Gin Acc. 1 $2.80 + 0.95 0.10 Exhall Annig line $ 11.23 1 + 1.20 1.70 Blood Annig line $ 11.23 1 + 1.20 1.70 Blood Annig line $ 11.23 1 + 1.20 1.70 Blood Annig Acc. $ 50.19 1 1.23 1.75 Growth & Bin Acc. 4 00.50 1 1.51 3.47 In Egy Bin Acc. 1 00.50 1 1.51 3.47 In Egy Bin Acc. 1 52.99 + 0.84 Integrity Gin Acc. 1 52.99 + 0.84 Integrity Gin Acc. 1 52.99 + 0.84 Integrity Gin Acc. 1 52.90 1 1.75 In Egy Bin Acc. 1 157 00 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1
content of the property of the	101.64 127.43 4.3.23 3.68 24.44 263.97 4.4.2 3.68 24.44 263.97 4.4.2 3.68 24.44 263.97 4.4.2 3.68 24.47 44.79 4.4.2 4.6.2 24.47 44.79 4.6.2 4.6.2 25.56 69.30 + 1.75 25.56 69.30 + 1.75 25.56 69.30 + 1.75 25.56 69.30 + 1.75 25.57 9.4.2 4.5.2 25.57 9.4.2 4.5.2 25.57 9.4.2 4.5.2 25.58 25.5 9.5.2 25.59 25.5 9.5.2 25.50 25.5 9.5.2 25.50 25.5 9.5.2 25.50 25.5 9.5.2 25.50 25.5 9.5.2 25.50 25.5 9.5.2 25.50 25.5 9.5.2 25.50 25.5 9.5.2 25.50 25.5 9.5.2 25.50 25.5 9.5.2 25.50 25.5 9.5.2 25.50 25.50 25.50 25.50 25.50 25.50 25.50 25.50 25.50 25.50 25.50 25.50 25.5	Despit Grund 1 Despit Grund 1	Carponio	Fast-track air travel to You've got it.	o Scandinavia?	NEWTON FEAST MEDIE LYD	Statistics	Figure (per) 126 463 133 344 hing St Di En 2 117 2.29 0 97 STEMBART PROBY UNIT TST INSERS LTD Britist 228 2027 American 718 20 740 20 5240 1 34 Empiry 228 2027 American 518 20 150 20 5240 1 34 Empiry 408
Acrolle, piles.	116.20 123.60 - 0.40 5.50 18GSHT SVS LYD 113.44 120.061 + 2.02 2.11 105.66 113.47 + 2.01 2.92 17 MEMORI LYD 169.30 169.60 - 4.80 92.94 96.56 + 0.08	Consistent UT 40 40 49 601 + 0.57 2.74	Pacific Growth 147 602 177 609 - 4 27 (148) Gentlemen Providera Standary Plands Mayagari Equity 255.34 57.30 27.30 141 141 15 1.27 May Jerm But 375.30 275.30 1+14 16 1.27 May Jerm July 47 47.27 47.22 48.20 May Jerm July 47 194.27 - 0.33 2-40 Annutus 577.5 597.75 1-0.70 0.25 July 112 407 1-3.34 July 112 40	With more direct flights more of no quicker way to get to our particles for more information about 0845 60 727 727, or visit www.fooking forward to seeing you out to see you will not see you to see you will not see you to see you will not see you will	iten from the UK, there's rt of the world. SAS, give us a ring on usas.se - we're		Premise Eg Inc # 5-2.00 ST7 40 +13.00 2.16 ST Adu 20 1 2.002 T 40 1 2.002 ST Adu 20 1 2.002 T 40 1 2.002 ST Adu 20 1 2.002 ST Adu 20 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2	Emogram
Pale Cod March Cod March Cod	734 00 738 70	DESCRIPTIONARY DAM'T FUND INSISS #771 377 8879 Description Descrip	Appendix	172-94 238-97 4 594 4 533 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1	MAJEST M	Property 98.32 103 49 + 0.33 4.40 OLD SENTERAL FUND MINESE LTD 11555 758 589 Groupen to: 458,00 495,30 + 5.20 0.01 Japan lot: 1444 183.22 + 2.73 Alle Accessora lot: 750.40 207.20 + 1.50 - 1.50 10 280.00 + 5.30 1.75 Sales Expelse lot: 135 07 148,00 + 5.20 1.75 Sales Expelse lot: 135 07 148,00 + 2.20 0.00 Fred to foot lot: 171.63 175.90 + 0.34 1.53 Expelse Accessor 119.00 182.00 + 3.30 0.55 Gr. Accessor 119.00 182.00 + 3.30 0.55 Gr. Accessor 119.00 182.00 + 0.30 0.55 Gr.	-th- Region # 9194 (2.88 + 0.40 317 Gebal lines Miles 40.8 (2.75) + 0.61 104 - 0.61 104 - 0.61 104 - 0.61 104 - 0.61 104 - 0.61 104 105 - 0.61 104 105 - 0.61 104 105 - 0.61 104 105 - 0.61 104 105 - 0.61 104 105 - 0.61 104 105 - 0.61 104 105 - 0.61 104 105 - 0.61 1	Growth Inc 1 266.99 + 4.13 4.29 Balanced Acc 1 270.65 + 3.00 5.76 Balanced Acc 1 271.05 + 2.30 5.76 Balanced Acc 1 111.5 + 2.34 5.76 Value Acc 1 183.50 + 1.65 1.64 Value Inc 1 183.50 + 1.65 1.64 Value Inc 1 183.50 + 1.50 Value Balance (183.50 + 1.5
Const. First 100 Joshu Car. June Car. J	119.00 294.00 × 5.40 107 182.10 170.00 + 5.70 137 182.10 170.00 + 5.70 137 182.10 170.00 - 217 180.00 2013 - 0.02 217 180.00 2013 - 0.02 217 180.00 2013 - 0.02 217 180.00 2013 - 0.02 217 180.00 2013 - 0.02 217 180.00 2013 - 0.00 217 180.00 2013 - 0.00 217 180.00 2013 - 0.00 2013 180.00 2013 -	Date Disagona # 59-88 62-28 4-0-40 Orlecting Recover # 75-27 40-561 40-70 Orlecting Recover # 75-20 75-20 Orlecting Recover # 75-20 Orlecting Recover # 75-20 Orlecting Recover # 75-20 75-20 Orlect	Several Seve	Month Per 17.00 76.40 + 2.55	MANA MORPULER PIANO MINES LTD	SI) Getter Eint SEQ.02 S23441 + 228 0.34 Demple Equity Inc. 3.4 0.017 2.57 0.25 Herity Routh 174 (0) 100 ct -1.70 0.48 PS Perdode Inc. 172 (0) 100 ct -1.70 0.48 PS Perdode Inc. 172 (0) 100 ct -1.70 0.48 PS Perdode Inc. 172 (0) 100 ct -1.70 0.48 PS Perdode Inc. 172 (0) 100 ct -1.70 0.48 Pr	Beautification French	Throwbreath transformed Female (USEC) Retail State (Ches 1) IN IN Corporate Bel 1 56.32 + 0.06 6.18 IN Equity Inc. 9 56.34 + 1.12 3.23 IN Equity Inc. 9 56.34 + 1.12 3.23 IN Growth 1 63.56 + 2.00 11.00 IN Growth 2 50.37 + 1.06 5.25 IN Minrally Inc. 9 55.08 + 1.2 3.20 IN Solved Gent 1 55.09 + 1.2 3.20 IN Solved Gent 1 55.09 + 1.2 3.20 IN Solved Gent 1 55.02 + 0.11 101 INS Smaller Cov. 2 55.02 + 0.11 101 INS Smaller Cov. 2 55.02 + 0.11 101 INS Smaller Cov. 3 59.04 + 2.00 International Acc. 3 73.39 + 1.27 Arms Set Gent 4 70.41 + 2.00 International 7 73.39 + 1.27 Arms Set Gent 4 70.41 + 2.00 International 7 10.37 + 0.77 Int. 1 10.67 1.04 Integran Gent 1 63.00 - 1.05 0.00 International 7 10.37 - 0.77 Int. 1 10.07 - 1.05 Int. 2 10.07 - 1.05 Int.
Street Process - Dep	273 70 289 92 - 3 70 0 35 174 174 174 174 174 174 174 174 174 174	BINDURANCE PLUID BIGHT LTD 6771 373 7261 783 00 401 10 9 70 1.02		LINECOLN DIRTY TRIBST MIGRIS 01452 371 500 brailing: 01452 371 625 Growth ALCC 675 to 50 to 144 123 Fa East 31.55 31.44 to 470 694 Month Ambridge 111 40 179 50 to 4.50 Global 111 40 179 50 to 27.00 to 4.50 Global 111 40 179 50 to 27.00 to 4.50 Global 111 40 179 50 to 27.00 to 4.50 Global 111 40 179 50 to 27.00 to 4.50 Global 111 40 179 50 to 4.50 Global 111 40 179 50 to 4.50 Again 754 82.53 to 3.55 Int Correctly 80 57 16 60.59 to 4.50 SA Act 2 19 61.55 to 15. Amendad 27.72 13.97 to 15.55 LIGHT 15 15 177 Carb 50 C 50 C to 4.50 LIGHT 15 15 177 Gard 370 40 770 50 to 1.57 Global 111 40 770 50 to 1.57 Global 112 50 to 1.	Section G00 19 774271 + 79.16 227	ied Brimmin ier - 64- Account - 59-57 - 100 7 2 7 7 7 7 0 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1	### 2009 ### 2009	Junes Guth Act : 43.65 1 + 140 300 Sm Ces Cit : 35.60 1 + 133 101 102 Sm Ces Cit : 35.60 1 + 133 101 103 Sm Ces Cit : 35.60 1 + 133 101 104 Ecoupy for # 59.97 1 + 163 373 105 Ecoupy for # 59.97 1 + 169 1.55 105 Ecouph for # 59.97 1 + 169 1.55 105 Ecouph for # 59.97 1 + 169 1.55 105 Ecouph for # 59.99 1 + 169 1.55 105 Ecouph for # 59.99 1 + 199 1.00 105 Ecouph for # 59.99 1 + 199 1.00 105 Ecouph for # 59.99 1 + 199 1.00 105 Ecouph for # 59.99 1 + 129 105 Ecouph for # 59.99 1 + 129 106 Ecouph for # 59.99 1 + 129 107 Ecouph for # 59.99 1 + 129 108 Ecouph for # 59.99 1 + 129 109 Ecouph for # 59.99 1 + 129 109 Ecouph for # 59.99 1 + 129 109 Ecouph for # 59.99 1 + 199 100 Ecoup
Services of the services of th	299.02 221.00; 4.500 1:10 475.0 4259 4:170 1:10 173.0 164.30 - 7.30 1:10 14C.00 +73.0 + 1.70 0:50 7 MCRES LYO 225.0 179.00 - 2.10 . 47.32 23.40; - 0.23 1898 LYO 249.5 280.77 - 3.55 0.56 250.40 172.91 - 0.45 0.78	ENETTER FUND WANNESERS LTD 81392 412 144 62-86 (Growth 179,63 180 00) + 2.24 62-86 (Growth 60 46 70,51 4.05) Fed iver 150 60 46 70,51 4.05 Fed iver 150 100 74,781 + 0.05 100 Probe and 50 46 38,87 - 0.04 FRANKLY SINFESTMENT MEMOT LTD 11777 774 579 11777 774 579 1177 774 779 1177 774 774 1177	Purple Sent Cor 172.75 184.94 + 5.99	Send list of 1223 13017 1325 141 East Petal list of 1223 13007 1300 East Petal list of 1300 1300 East Petal	Gartes Sout 17737 14277 - 039 187 - do-Aesses 202 9 270,59 - 046 187 - Gart & Gester 121.00 189.59 - 280 - do-Aesses 125.00 187.00 - 280 - do-Aesses 111.00 187.00 - 280 - do-Aesses 202 770,20 365 - do-Aesses 183.00 186.91 + 020 365 - do-Aesses 183.00 186 - do-Aesses 183.00 186 - do-Aesses 183.00 186 - do-Aesses 183.0	PORTFOLIO FERRO MIGRIT LTO Gene CITT LES GEORI Pile ETTT SEL GEORI ACIA GENE CITT LES GEORI Pile ETTT SEL GEORI ACIA GENE CITT LES GEORI PILE ETTT SEL GEORI GENE PILO GENE CITT LES GEORI CESCO		Light Article Str 55.00 + 114 140
Total inc. Total Data Total	100 1890 - 179 1896 - 189 1896 - 189 1896 - 189 1896 - 189 1896 - 189 1896 - 189 1896 - 189 1896 - 189 1896 - 189 1896 - 189 1896 - 189 1896 - 189 1896 - 189 1896 - 189 1896 - 189 1896 - 189 1897 -	Hopin research 210 rd 1 - 6.70 3 40 https://doi.org/10.1000/10.1000/10.1000/10.1000/10.1000/10.1000/10.1000	HISTOC LINEAT TRANSPER INCOME TATO CARGO C	### Comm	Congress Con	Pacific 4119 41761 + 127 If he & Gin 1900 197701 + 280 0 60 Is he & Gin 1900 197701 + 280 0 60 PREMER PORTFOLIO MISTA LTO O'NEY GAS EX2 Deviced 147.70 157.90 + 250 281 In Gin & Tr. 231 (0 41570 + 120 THE A GO 71.21 75.104 + 294 0 51 Four Gin Funds 5233 92.77 + 431 Peon Bai Group 92.54 92.77 + 431 Peon Bai Group 125.80 142.90 - 0 90 120	First 244 Great 491 00 522 30 +18.90 1.44 (18.50 pt) to 491 600 522 30 +18.90 1.44 (18.50 pt) to 491 600 523 50 1.44 (18.50 pt) 50 255 50 1.45 (18.50 pt) 50 255 50 255 50 1.45 (18.50 pt) 50 255 5	Source FT information Teld depressed as CAR (Compound Annual Return), Ex Periods and Care of Compound Annual Return), Ex Orderance: 199.50 199.501 - 3.60 171 Coposan Bote 2.53 53.051 - 0.11 4.20 do- Access D1.46 61.651 + 0.30 4.20 Source FT information "Yield expressed as CAR (Compound Annual Return), Ex Orderoft, 5 Middle price, No Syndican data a Periodic returne restricted bronn capital rich Em

THE THE TERMS

down

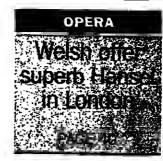

36 EQUITY PRICES		THE TIMES FRIDAY APRIL 2 1999
1999 Pice Ind 1999 Ind	Shares close below best	1999 Proc 10 Proc 10 Proc 10 Proc 10 Proc 10 Proc Pro
615): 408 Alliad Demonspir 46: 69 107 86 121 H2 Over 1 163 - 2 42 79 341: 779 summer (HP) 307: 61 117 365 121 H2 Over 1 163 - 63 12 H2	TRADING PERIOD: Settlement takes place five business days after the day of trade. Changes are calculated on the previous day's close, but adjustments are made when a stock is ex-dividend. Changes, yields and price/earnings ratios are based on middle prices.	366 Photogram 366 7 167
201 1/2	1961 525 688	2. 60 September 50 1 24 0 September 50 1 25 0
450 are 3c Peer 2 2014 97 40 15 21 5 21 5 21 16 20 17 17 17 17 17 17 17 17 17 17 17 17 17	47 39-, Weighter 49-4 - 2.8 15.0 81 59-; Oregine ROM Eng 89 + 1 7900 77,94-Valocie ROV 1879 - 12-12 (62-7) 17.5 Meight Statister? 162-7 12-12-7 (72-7) 17.5 Meight Statister? 162-7 12-7 12-7 12-7 12-7 12-7 12-7 12-7 1	PRINTING & PAPER 130 - 800 150 - 150 150
397. 215 (np Bash 1 2972+ 31 11 215 (2004) 2075 (34 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 12	## 1	168
DIVERSIFIED INDUSTRIALS	40° 12° Daminto 3	1
10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10	167 33 PC 16 167 - 1 163 77 77 Report Not Day # 77 0.6	125 77 Read tendance 1167 35 57 230 190 Resigned Sec 1967 27 56 62 381 381 381 381 384 2 10 22
1500 1365 Hord 1 1500 - 5.5 13 253, 100 Waters 215 - 1.3 2 13 2 13 2 14 2 14 2 14 2 14 2 14 2 1	679 200 Tate & Lytery 615 - 2 4.1 165 ap. 35-1826 Emplate: 679-1 1.1 155 ap. 35-1826 Emplate: 679-1 1.1 156 ap. 35-1826 Emplate: 679-1 1.1 156 ap. 35-1826 Emplate: 679-1 1.1 Amendams 1.2 1.1 156 ap. 35-1826 Emplate: 679-1 1.1 Amendams 1.1 1.1 Amendams 1.1 1.1 156 ap. 35-1826 Emplate: 1.1 1.1 Amendams 1.1 1.1 156 ap. 35-1826 Emplate: 1.1 1.1 Amendams 1.1 1.1 156 ap. 35-1826 Emplate: 1.1 157 ap. 35-1826 Emplate: 1.1 158	37. 1. Abpoint to 2
270 651 Scot & New 658 8 46 12 12 12 12 12 12 12 1	155 109 Franch Cas 127 1 155 109 Franch Cas 157	5 37 1. Bourne Gold 36, 3 154 100 Star-No. 134 110 110 110 110 110 110 110 110 110 11
BUILDING MATERIALS 81 67 Approach (act) 231 20 16.8 93 18 Appleade later 201 45 137 25 161 896 25 25 143 117 108 89 Replacer 84 961 - 1 52 105 17 31 Brackets 37 15	247 - 3145 Sare Lis. 247 - 9.8 34.3 6C. 26 Cov Red Sm. Cos. 787 + 1 . 98 75 . 35 . 75 Horizaftesir 3.45 5.5 91 9 6 Horizate Ris. 167 - 17.5 146 Cests 30 - 1 . 187 - 187	302 244 Chesterd 267 - 5 14 40 6 605 500 Zeroto 152 - 5
150 250 She Gock 334 2 4 151 252 354 Antenand 460 4 15 134 151 150 1	667 311 Head July 2016 467 31 Head July 2016 47 32 32 32 32 32 32 32 32 32 32 32 32 32	577 415 Derived Hidgs 5.77; 14 132; 5.00 COLT Telecone 145 27 19 19 19 19 19 19 19 1
151 121 126 126 126 126 127	C2 13 RM-SSO Eq In 133-y- 17 17 137 107 Sandar (Mint) 124-y 8.7 103 37 107 Sandar (Mint) 124-y 8.7 103 37 107 Sandar (Mint) 124-y 8.7 103 37 127 Sandar (Mint) 124-y 8.7 103 37 127 Sandar (Mint) 124-y 8.7 103 37 127 Sandar (Mint) 124-y 1	201, 128 of Pendand 197 17 50 192 1814 187 187 187 187 187 187 187 187 187 187
472. 300 Merce int 305 = 9 4 4 203 30 14 4 Insert int 50 19 19 19 19 19 19 19 19 19 19 19 19 19	1.29; 1033-Attenuation 125 + 24; 70 8.9 11 3-Attenuation 125 1003-Attenuation 125 1003-Attenuation 125 1003-Attenuation 125 103-Attenuation 125 12-Attenuation 125 12-Attenuation 125 125 Attenuation 125 Attenuation 125 125	120 67 Emistration 107 3 48 196 205 117 All Napon Au 200 67 1 116 27 27 27 28 27 27 28 27 27
177 151 Sample & Pichert 176 42 20 91 44 56 42 120 92 44 56 42 120 93 54 54 54 120 121	94's $20 Connect for $5 $65 \rightarrow $5 $65 \rig	CSON Fibers Manuface CSON CSON CSON First Const. CSON CSON First Const. CSON CSON First Const. CSON
S344 4187 HCr) S354 4187 HCr) S354 4187 HCr) S354 S3	1057 44-Holang Perintenses 1007-1 1 101 64 22's Childrens Group 2's 14 14 Hangyande Gref 14 17 107-18 Rayes 18 5 50 Hange Smith Rd	277 362 Smart (1) 275 46 10.1 1072 72 Sheere 17 81 54 18 18
839 / 75 880; 870 * 6 * 40 18.8 901 275 870 15 * 1 * 40 170 11'; 7' Saure Chem 35 * 1 * 10 170 140; 156 68spen 132 * 28 69 120'; 80- Seed Chems 48 - 2 36 13.7 254 195'; 80 Vist 27 - 7 * 46 10.3 95 656 Bornal Cent 20 - 35 * 47 15.8 23 165 Cory Inchandrog 1 316', 40 295 252 165 Cory Inchandrog 1 316', 40 295 253 165 Cory Inchandrog 1 316', 40 295 254 165' Cory 20 46', 40 295 255 165' Cory 20 46', 40 295 256 165' Cory 20 46', 40 295 257 165' Cory 20 46', 40 295 258 165' Cory 20 46', 40 295 259 165' Cory 20 46', 40 295 250 2	69 42 Larged Hidgs 43 v 165 57 68 77 68 77 68 77 68 77 68 77 68 77 68 77 68 78 78 78 78 78 78 78 78 78 78 78 78 78	12" 96' 10m ESC 112" 25 184 72 25 250 250 72 57 10m Cystel 67 73 109 125 79 125 125 186 125 186 125 186 186 187 580 58
318* 176* Elic 8 Everaid 183* - 3* 74 /4 177, 11 ASW 13* 13* 13* 1 82* 50* Liu Comur 59 - 55 36 107 90 Aluman; 1 105 + 13* 9.6 60 47 22* 56ccm 44 42* - 1 33 17 7 197* 156* Alma 163 + 1 2.5 30 12* 2703* Avents: 3* 62* + 18* 19 257 228* Ascor 257 48	59° 31° Members 47° 45° 256 310 Corpus & Luis 37° 1. 22 56 31° Silveron Adri 30° - 4° 1. 25 31° Corpus & Luis 37° 1. 22 56 31° Silveron Adri 30° - 4° 1. 25 31° Corpus & Luis 37° 1. 22 56 31° Silveron Adri 30° - 4° 1. 25 31° Silveron Adri 30° - 4°	186 139 ASDA Great 150 - 30 144 WATER 183 61 Aldays 70 190 39 69 56 Sudgenst 59 - 33 106 845 696 Angha Water 755 - 8 56 90
191 163 - Victore 186 - 2 33 155 223 165 - Benefitar 21 4.3 7.8 455 355 Witambare R 4.2 - 7.5 7.5 125 10 vole Go 11 - 2 10 9 1 10 vole Go 11 - 2 10 9 1 10 vole Go 11 - 2 10 9 10 10 10 10 10 10	10% 5 Richards 51% 31 52% 541 157 Unit fact 189 4 7 9 133 108 138 Horizon listed 178 1 18 187 477 197	291 231 162
CONSTRUCTION 19 1 Cabo 16 79 79 79 79 79 79 79 7	617 39. Sandameters 551 155 14 178 100 Users Sm Cau 122 1 39. Sandameters 551 155 14 178 100 Users Sm Cau 124 1 37 8 118 93 User Sm Cau 124 1 37 8 118 93 User Sm Cau 124 1 37 8 118 93 User Sm Cau 124 1 37 8 125 1 38 1 38 1 38 1 38 1 38 1 38 1 38 1 3	ALTERNATIVE INV MARKET 10. 10 to Gp 10. 25 300 4 oc South, 25 2 4 9 127 25 107 (Ason 108) 25 2 4 9 127 26 107 (Ason 108) 25 3 3 3 17
15	Fig. 68 - MAGE for Data Do. 55 10 10 10 10 10 10 10	118: 73 Austin Rand 26: - 1 97 62 340 173 5470 Aust Commis 301 13 10 118: 80 Beatlet 100 8 5.3 7.4 91 5.3 800 Technologies 63 7.5 106 180 170 18
199 10 10 10 10 10 10 10	1979 2017 1979 2017 1979 2017	200 201
31 03 304 153 184 154 155 155 165 165 165 165 165 165 165 165	19 12 18 18 18 18 18 18 18	111
130 9: Montent U17 116" 1 4 8 9; 165": 101" Postporter 146" 9 1 145 9; 165": 101" Postporter 146" 9 1 145 115 115 115 115 115 115 115 115 1		95 50 - Rea of Figure 78 79 8 105 527 Figure 7.5 85 12 - Figure 7.5 85
75.7 (11-10-10-10-10-10-10-10-10-10-10-10-10-1	20) 466 Sam Life & Pf 547 - 37 9 100 00 Ect. 17-17-1999 100 00000 17-25 5 2 100 100 100 100 100 100 100 100	10
14 94 Value Cap 125 14 15 16 16 16 16 16 16 16 16 16 16 16 16 16	15.66 1475 Tags 815 307 1898 97 -0 553 544 467 1832 11401 Tags 815 307 1862714 -0 557 547 467 1832 11401 Tags 815 307 1862714 -0 557 547 467 1832 11401 Tags 815 307 1862714 -0 557 547 467 1832 11401 Tags 815 307 1862714 -0 557 547 467 1832 11401 Tags 815 307 1832 11401	3400 1700 30meter 1700 1.5 31 321 31 165 Neth Petal Synth (407 154 109 34meter 1700 1.5 33 556 558 356 558 568 569 557 57 57 57 57 57 57
1: 13 Absorber 1-2: 1-2: 1-2: 1-2: 1-2: 1-2: 1-2: 1-2:	27 27 Accident for this 130 27 27 28 Accident for this 130 28 28 28 28 28 28 28 28 28 28 28 28 28 2	SUPPORT SERVICES 50
72" 16; Lood (EG) 17 179 51 155 70; Advers 151 52 113 150 146 (Ba) Motors 159 7 175 155 154 Aufter Stream 151 87 113 150 167; Dermand 15 167 38 70 600 155 4on Redde 517; 17 44 91 165 11; Appleman 147 12. 63 30; 140* Boston 300* 43 495 221 Rechoverant, 450 1.65 143 121 104* Boston 300* 43 495 221 Rechoverant, 450 1.65 143 121 104* Boston 300* 43 495 221 Rechoverant, 450 1.65 143 124 104* Boston 300* 43 155 156 157 157 157 157 157 157 157 157 157 157	27. 55 fi France Sec. 103 1 3 6 19 127-40 177-40 hear 7-8-2000. 118-8602 - 0.0402 6 51 472 776-50 776-10 176	710 190 Agpetio 2144 21 24 44 11 28 Alpha Japit 50 6 6 3 19 37 Alpha Japit 56 6 6 3 57 38 Antis Go 49 7 06 18 3 57 404 Abore 190 410 2 76 101 accessor 1 for one of a finite section 2 for t times of turmoil - when bombs are falling, homes burning and innocents fleeing - music can seem like a distraction, a frippery, even an immoral luxury. The inclination to lapse into desolate silence in the face of adversity is nothing new. "By the waters of Babylon we sat down and wept," the ancient Israelites la-mented. "As for our harps, we hanged them up upon the trees."

THE

What can music do, what has it ever done, to cure a famine, curb a tyrant, or reverse a terrible wrong? Even worse, is music not obscenely indiscriminate in bestowing its fayours? Didn't Hitler's butchers of-ten have excellent ears for Mozart? If music be the food of love, what went wrong in so many cases?

It's hard to counter such bleak rhetorical questions with hard evidence of music, or any art form, as a force for moral good. But there are two points to be made. The first is that the Israelites didn't hang up their harps; we wouldn't have the Psalms today if they had done. And neither, 25 centuries later, did their descendants who — when herded by the Nazis into the Theresienstadt concentration camp and its smartest missiles were being Closed ears, closed minds, then open war

sadistically deprived of liberty, pos-sessions, hope and life -- responded by creating the most extraordinary operas in musical history.

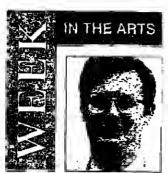

What gave them the strength? The theories are many, but I think they wanted to show, even as they faced imminent execution, that civilisation is stronger than death, stronger than tyranny, stronger even than the Third Reich. If those brave folk could make such music in such a hell, the onus is surely on us never to let the harps fall silent. And the second point? It's simply this. Although music itself may be morally neutral, the social act of making music, of learning to understand the other man's tune, of generously giving of one's talents and receiving equally generous applause - that surely remains one of civilisation's most potent weapons in the eternal fight against the dark side of human nature.

These thoughts struck me this week because, while the world and sucked into the ancient racial hatreds of the Balkans. I was also being drawn into a rather more benign meeting of modern Western technology and ancient tribal emotions. For many years (and doubtless with a wry sense of irony) the German state broadcasting company Westdeutscher Rundfunk has been putting together a priceless recording archive of the world's greatest folk singers and instrumentalists—from Senegal to Syria to the Shedward to Scool by the to the Shetlands to Sindh. In the early 1990s the broadcasters did a deal with the World Network record label to make CDs of this stuff, and 49 revelatory discs have now been issued (distributed in Britain by Harmonia Mundi). I have been catching up with the latest batch, and as I eagerly rip each disc out of its packaging my sense of wonder at the variety of human creativity grows ever stronger. In his great poem Snow Louis MacNeice wrote that the "world is crazier and more of it than we think, incorrigibly plural". He felt, he said, "the drunkenness of things being various" — and so did I as I listened to the Japanese shakuhachi master Tajima Tadashi coaxing infinite gradations of tone and emotion from his 18 inches of bamboo; or the astonishing Greek folk clarinettist Petro-Loukas Chalkias cartwheeling through scales that claiming - with a potent mixture of scholarship and unbridled passion - at least a few of the haunting nubats that all but disappeared from human hearing for five centuries after the Muslims were expelled from Spain in 1492. Only 25 years ago, when I was a music student, "ethnomusicology" was a dusty cranny of academe full of strange bods who disappeared. Bartok-like, for months into "the field" with antique tape recorders, and then wrote impenetrable essays on "the migration of the mixolydian mode". Since then, world music has exploded as a commercial force. But with this admirable expansion of popular musical horizons have come doubts about the validity, the "purity" if you like, of what we are being offered.

RICHARD MORRISON

Are all these new stars from Afri-ca, Cuba and Bangladesh genuinely representative of their country's venerable folk idioms, or is their

Or young singers such as the Tuni-sian chanteuse Sonia M Barek re-down for Western ears and wallets? Will the future of folk music be nothing but a series of glossy hybrids - more well-meaning alburns like Graceland, more zippy shows like Riverdance, more cultural mishmashes like David Fanshawe's African Sanctus?

> he fears are misplaced. Try to fix any language - ver-bal or musical - for all time, try to freeze its "purity", and you kill it. Indeed, what strikes one time and again about the World Network CDs is how "impure" these ostensibly ancient folk music traditions are.

> The fact is that musicians have cheerfully borrowed from other cultures for centuries. Thus, our Greek clarinet virtuoso plays on an instrument introduced to his village by the military bands of the occupying Turkish army in the 19th century. Similarly the Tunisian melodies of M'Barak, the soulful

Sufi glories on a disc from Pakistan, and the fatalistic howl of flamenco singing all derive from the same root: the Moorish empire of the Middle Ages. And the concoction of influences tapped by the Peruvian singer, Carmen Florez, is even stranger: a mixture of pre-Cohumbian sacred dances, harps imported by 16th-century Jesuits, Viennese waitzes brought by exiled 19th-century Europeans, and the ancestral African rhythms of the black slaves on the plantations.

So what conclusions do we draw? That when tribes are receptive to good ideas from abroad, when they relish diversity rather than fearing it, they gain far more than they lose — both in music and in "real life"? That when tribes ruthlessly start to "cleanse" their culture of "alien" influences — as the Nazis signalled by banning the music of Mendelssohn and other Jews - they are on the road to damnation? Such statements seem blatantly obvious. Yet our continent is again at war because these truths are apparently not self-evident to everyone. Stop all the clocks. Can-cel the millennium. Europe is sliding back into the Dark Ages.

The only good game in town

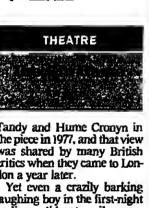

wo consecutive first nights, two revivals plays that triumphed on Broadway in the 1970s. And which of the week's American offerings carries more punch? Not Neil Simon's Prisoner of Second Avenue, an attack on the evils of New York from which the city emerges with a torn fingernail and a slightly bruised earlobe. Surprisingly, the answer is D.L. Coburn's The Gin Game, which involves a series of spats between two 70-yearolds in a retirement home.

Mark you, we are not talking Lennox Lewis here. Nothing more physically awful happens than that Joss Ackland's cranky Weller Martin hurls aside a card table and Dorothy Tutin's Fonsia Dorsey pummels him on the chest. But at the Savoy, as sadly not the Haymarket, two ace performers accept a dramatist's invitation to find the harshness in his piece. The omens at the Savoy seemed decidedly mixed. As the programme tells us. Donald Coburn won a Pulitzer for The Gin Game and saw it performed everywhere from Estonia to Argentina to China. As at fails to add, he has not had a Substantial success since, and when he opens his Oxford Companion to American Theatre, he must read that the play exemplifies "the sorry or peculiar state of playwriting" in an era when soaring costs made two-handers commonplace and dramatic action minimal. "Slight" was the verdict of the critic Harold Clurman When he reviewed Jessica and, though he regards it as a game of skill and himself as an expert, and though she hasn't touched a card for years, she invariably beats him. But with Tutin and Ack-land in command, that raises the stakes and the dramatic tension enough to sustain a

Nor is the play just about male competitiveness. All that remains for Weller, who has mislaid a wife, three children and a once-thriving business. is day after day in a state institution where patronising nurses make him join in choruses of Happy Birthday and other offstage jollities. Since he won't accept responsibility for his predicament, resentment has overwhelmed him. Winning at cards has become compensation for becoming that creature that so scares Americans: a loser. And despite her offhandedness, Fonsia may be 100-minute evening.

Tandy and Hume Cronyn in the piece in 1977, and that view was shared by many British critics when they came to London a year later. laughing boy in the first-night audience did not spoil my enjoyment of Frith Banbury's production. True, not much happens on the dilapidated, junk-packed porch Robin Don has designed. Mostly, Weller and Fonsia play gin rummy.

Retiring but by no means shy: Dorothy Tutin (Fonsia) and Joss Ackland (Weller) square up for a fight over the cards in D.L. Coburn's The Gin Game sublimating something too: hatred of the husband she divorced and anger at the son who refused to reject him.

Coburn does not crack as good jokes as Simon --Weller's remark that he is "suffering from one of the most advanced cases of old age in the US" is about the best — but at least they reflect character. More surprisingly, he resists the temptation to sentimentalise his characters or give them a soft landing. But then he has two performers who can embody vulnerability, insecurity, grief without making themselves gratuitously lovable. Both parts, especially Fonsia. are somewhat underwritten but do you notice, when Tutin is smiling ber pert, annoying smiles or painfully admitting she has lied about her life, or when Ackland is battling what feels to him like a tactical nuclear weapon in his stomach? No. you don't.

> BENEDICT NIGHTINGALE

Appliance of science

t must be that time of the century again. While Tom Stoppard's fractal drama, Arcadia, plays at the Gate, at the other end of O'Connell Street a young Irish playwright is also seeing what post-modern science has to offer the theatre.

Like Stoppard's play, Observatory is set in the same room at two different points in time, and as in Arcadia, there is a historian snooping around, trying to recover all the pieces of a long neglected jigsaw and metaphorically join the past and the present.

Back in 1799, it seems, an Armagh Observatory employee hanged himself for uncertain reasons. Now Nicola Mc-Gloughlin (Mary O'Driscoll), a present-day astronomer, and Jon McKenna (Charlie Bonner), a local historian, are engaged in uncovering the facts, whether they lie in the reams of archive documents or in the realms of funky physics. "Quantum physics? Do you know anything about quan-tum physics?" asks the slightly tetchy Ms McGloughlin, and faster than anyone can say Heisenberg's Uncertainty Principle Schrödinger's Cat is meowing away as the audience is whizzed through a quick tutorial on all things sub-atomic.

While Observatory might possibly have survived as a time travelling sci-fi love story, the author quickly overfills the play's baggage. Soon he is also uncloaking a conspiracy concerning the aftermath of the United Irishmen's rebellion. As Carville attempts to pack all of this into a bule more than 75 minutes (in general a laudable notion), his writhing plotting soon becomes dense enough to give an average black hole a run for its money. With so much plot to cover, relationships tend to be sketchy and there is always a strong the play have come loose. Des Cave pours surly majes ty into the patrician chief astronomer Hamilton, but O'Driscoll and Bonner never really have that option. Director Jason Byrne finds no clever way of leading his audience back-ward and forward in time. A firmer hand with the staging might perhaps have brought

LUKE CLANCY

Spice with the sugar

DID my ears deceive me, or was Jack Jones's name among the list of singers ap-proved for safe, suburban lis-tening in Pleasantville? If so, the choice was less than fair.

Given the right material, he remains as impressive a vocalist as the newly rediscovered Tony Bennett And if Tom Jones can be deemed respectable again, there ought to be hope for his namesake, a nuanced performer who does not have to resort to tight trousers to make an impression.

On the other hand, it is clear why the American veteran now white-haired and prone to cracking jokes about his senior citizen pass - tends to be lumped together with Perry Como. The sugar content in his show rose to dangerous levels at times. He feels duty-bound to reprise Wives and Lovers, one of his earliest hits, yet you don't have to be Andrea Dworkin to squirm at its sentiments. Jones sensibly tacked on humorous lyrics addressing men's problems, but such a lightweight number was hardly worth the trouble.

SHOWBIZ

The same went for the insipid Lollipops and Roses, and the cute video montage of his young daughter that accompa-nied A Child Is Born. After a scorching treatment of Luck, Be A Lady, he made an unintentional comment on the decline of the musical by opting for the cardboard melodrama of the Phantom anthem, The Music Of The Night.

A generation younger than the masters, Jones is heir to some of the more dubious middle-of-the-road products of the Sixties. But when he got the focus right he revealed true class. in The Wee Small Hours burnt on a seductive low light, while Who Can I Turn To? has rarely sounded so affect-ing. Jones's loyal audience followed him every step of the way, but you sense that he still has more to offer than reading out golden wedding anniversary messages between sets. MTV, where are you when we need you?

CLIVE DAVIS

Clown down Mexico way

n 1929, after the success of the film The General Line. Stalin granted the director Sergei Eisenstein permission to travel abroad to study new techniques in cinema. After a frustrating trawl through West Europe and an ill-fated alliance with Hollywood, Eisenstein realised his boyhood dream of visting Mexico where, with the backing of Upton Sinclair, he began to film Que Viva México. The film was never completed - indeed Eisenstein never got to see any of bis footage - and the experience of that journey haunted him until his death 15 years later. Theatre Alibi's 400 Jokes With The Devil finds Eisenstein entering his final illness, where, as is traditional with such things, he feels compelled to educate his ignorant doctor in the story of his life to date, with the assistance of his two cinematic collaborators, Alexan-drov and Tisse. The somewhat lumbering opening in which Eisenstein reels off his ungainly CV. details the making of Battleship Potemkin and The General Line, meets Stalin and tours Europe, is mitigated once the crew arrive in Central America and the inevitable passions start to fly. The Russians' visit to Mexico is an exercise in extremes: the glorious colour pinching Eisenstein's frustration at filming in monochrome, public displays of penitence mocking private anguish, and the flind passion of the Mexican people stirring up the murky blood of their awkward and sober guests.

Alibi tells the story with an attractive blend of song, film and text; the cast's energetic performance style and sparing use of props and scenery ensure that the action moves at a cracking pace, despite a slightly baggy script. While this works well for lighter episodes and occasional bursts of tragedy, the description of Eisenstein's extreme emotional complexity never quite hits the mark. Theoretically there is nothing wrong with portraying Stalin as if he were Captain Haddock on Ketamin, but the decision to play the dictator for laughs then undermines Eisenstein's extraordinary revelation that he cannot belp seeing the man as a scarlet-cheeked clown. Likewise the angst over "inappropriate" feelings towards his colleague Alexandrov does not quite reach the anticipated pitch. While much of the blame for this is due to inappropriate juxtaposition, there is a slightly emotionally re-tentive quality to Henry Hawkes's otherwise convincing portrayal of Eisen-

The didacticism of the unnecessary early scenes is particularly frustrating given the richness of the Mexico material; by focusing on intrigues of sex and passion, they leave little space for the men's complex reaction to the social and political resonance of their visit. In honesty, any complaint about this production stems from the fact that they swing so close to the mark; the cast is superb and the story is so good that it is probably only embarrassment that has saved it from Hollywood.

HETTIE JUDAH

Ben Lee Cigarettes Will Kill You

Available on Ltd. 7" & CD single Released 29th March 1999

"The songs are out of the top drawer and time is on his side. How can be fail?" Nigel Williamson/Times Metro www.grandroyal.com Distributed by Vital

ARTS

THE TIMES FRIDAY APRIL 2 1999

WORLD MUSIC

Chandra's global aim

Orbital limp back to Earth

NEW POP ALBUMS

ORBITAL The Middle of Nowhere (ffrr/London 556 076 £15.99) ARRIVING in the week that a glove puppet called Flat Eric steered a strange, angular and utterly minimalist techno groove in the top of the singles chart. Orbital's fifth album. The Middle of Nowhere, sounds rather conventional. The duo's music remains a marriage of science and symphony, but whereas using synthesizers and drum machine loops to create long, mockorchestral themes once sounded revolutionary, such techniques are now commonplace.

And, after ten years as Orbital, the brothers Paul and Phil Hartnoll have refined their musical approach to the point at which some of these carefully structured electronic suites are now haunted as much by the spectre of Mike Oldfield as by the party spirit of the rave generation. Amusing as it is to hear the voice of Rolf Harris explaining the workings of the stylophone at the start and finish of the current single. Style, his contribution underlines the record's surprisingly quaint sound.

To compound the effect, the three years since Orbital's last album, In Sides, have been one of the most frantic and fertile periods in the history of dance music, and while there is nothing wrong with faster-paced breakbeat numbers such as Know Where to Run and I Don't Know You People, the listener is left with the nagging impression that this has all been done in recent times with greater vigour and pa-: nache by Propellerheads, Prodigy and others.

LINKS

TELEVISION: Top of the Pops: BBC1, tonight 7.30pm

DAWN OF THE

REPLICANTS Wrong Town, Wrong Plonet, Three Hours Late (eastwest 3984-26474 £15.99) AS ON their previous recordings, the second album by Dawn of the Replicants is laid out with all the inelegance and haphazard logic of a scrap-yard. The wobbly rhythmic structures, warped melodies and wandering lyrics of songs such as Sub Erotic Fields and Cabin Fever suggest it is the work of a band from the fringes of the New York under ground or perhaps an inbred Arizona desert community. not five young men from Ga-lashiels, near Edinburgh.

Their influences are so many and mixed that you can pretty well take your pick; anything from the abrasive American garageband ethos of Royal Trux on Big Hefty Hounds to the English chamber-pop tunefulness of the Auteurs. But while their music is impressively unpredictable and eccentric, there are inevitably times when you wonder to what end

Then, just as they are about to lurch over the edge, it somehow falls into place. "You may think that I've sold out/But, hey. I'm just checking in." Paul Vickers sings with a coarse, Jagger-esque sneer in Science Fiction Freak, a tremendous song liberally sprin-kled with cheesy spaceship noises and B-movie imagery. Full of unusual angles and odd ideas to conjure with, this is soll, somewhat against the rock'n'roll heart.

PAUL WESTERBERG Suicaine Gratification (EMI/Chrysalis 7243 4 99145 £15.99)

odds, an album with a hot

IF HEART was all it took then Paul Westerberg would be up there with Madonna and Michael Jackson, As it is, the former frontman of the Replacements remains one of the great neverhasbeens of rock'n' roll (the "Mats" were the critically revered band from Minneapolis whose Best Of compilation goes by the sad title All

"Spot on... an unexpected treat.

"The most charming, funny and loveable comedy of all time."

"Annuses and uplifts... tast moving and assured... a Winner."

"Wit, invention and real, priceless humour."

"A mischievous exuberance."

"A gem... A delightful

"ms got the lotto... fabulous."

diarming room."

you'll have a good time I promise you."

Jonathan Ross - THE MIRROR

"Packed with the feel-good factor... The biggest cheers in the house..."

HOW FAR WOULD YOU GO TO WIN A FORTUNE?

MANNER OF THE FOREST THE PARTY WHICH STREET THE STREET OF LINES STREET HE STREET WHICH WHICH IN SOME WHICH THE STREET HE WAS AND THE WAS AND THE STREET HE WAS AND THE WAS AND THE STREET HE WAS AND THE WAS AND T

MANUFACTOR STATEMENT THE STATEMENT OF TH

Dance and techno have moved on in the three years since Orbital released their last album, leaving Paul and Phil Hartnoll in The Middle of Nowhere

Suicaine Gratification, Westerberg's third solo album, confirms once again his beautiful loser status with sting-in-thetail songs such as Best Thing That Never Happened and It's a Wonderful Lie: "How am I looking? I don't want the truth/ What am I doing? I ain't in my youth/I'm past my prime, or

Although recorded cheaply, it is an album which places a premium on traditional songwriting craft, and its affecting mixture of painfully honest ballads and sparkling, minorkey rockers illustrates why Westerberg remains a potent influence on bands such as Wilco who have come up in

ECHO & THE BUNNYMEN What Are You Going To Do With Your Life? (London 556 080 £15.99)

AFTER the hoopla surrounding their comeback album, Evergreen, in 1997, there is a predictable sense of anticlimax about the new Echo & the Bunnymen record, a collection

ing love songs that finds sing-er lan McCulloch musing over the big questions in life.
There are no songwriting

TOP 10 ALBUMS

COPYRIGHT CIN . • Figure in brackets indicates last week's position credits on the artwork, but with guitarist Will Sergeant reduced to a marginal presence on most of the songs, and bassist Les Pattison replaced by one Guy Pratt on all but the

.Corrs (Atlantic)

... Coms (Atlantic)

Britney Spears UM

of introspective ballads and liltlast track, it seems safe to assume that this is a McCulloch

As such, it reveals a reflec-solo album in all but name.

tive side to his personality that is at odds with the cocksure star of popular legend. "I know the lines are showing/I can't keep them in", he sings in Rust, a song in which he acknowledges not only his own mortality, but his culpability and fallibility too. Despite its low-key approach, the album is made all the more engaging by such insights.

DAVID SINCLAIR

CDs reviewed in The Times can be ordered from the Times Music Shop on 0345 023498

Living off the land

ANTONIO FORCIONE Ghetto Poradise (Naim naimod032)

ALTHOUGH he has been liv-ing in the UK for the best part of two decades now, and has established himself via solo established himself via solo gigs and duo work in Acoustic Mania as a fixture on the London scene, guitarist Antonio Forcione has roots in the Adriatic hill village of Montecilfone. Much of the inspiration for the delicate yet busily virtuatic music on this album has osic music on this album has its source in his early experiences in this farming community, and to help him express his feelings about his ghetto paradise he has enlisted two of azz's most versatile and sensiove sidemen, both well versed in the quicksilver intricacies of guitar music: bassist Kai Eckhardt de Camargo and percussionist supreme Trilok Gurt. Whether backed by them or by an equally surefooted, fleet UK contingent including saxo-phonist Ed Jones, drummer Nic France and percussionist Bosco de Oliveira, Forcione is always nimble and quick-witted. Utilising a variety of in-struments — steel and nylon-stringed, fretless and Spanish guitars - he imbues his bright but intense themes with (to borrow a phrase from one of his chief inspirations, the Guitar Trio) passion, grace and fire.

JAZZ ALBUMS

BRASSERIE TRIO Musique Mecanique (Leo CD LR 209)

THE Brasserie Trio — trum-peter Alberto Mandarini, trombonist Lauro Rossi, baritone/tenor saxophonist and bass-clarinettist Carlo Actis Dato — began life in 1992 as a spinoff from the Instabile Orchestra, and the wit, irreverence and elegance of their music is immediately reminiscent of the larger ensemble.

Like the full orchestra, too, they draw on an extraordinary variety of musical forms for their repertoire — calypso rubs shoulders with Italian tarantella, Dixieland with free jazz, jaunty danceable romps with the most plaintive, affecting airs - but it is their imaginative use of their necessarily limited instrumental resources that really impresses. Each man is able to switch with con summate ease between his rbythmic supporting role and gutsy, cogent soloing, and the resulting album — recorded live in Pisa — is at once informai and assured.

CHRIS PARKER

Clive Davis meets the redoubtable Sheila Chandra, singer of the world

Across the great divide

ccording to Sheila Chandra, the secret lies in "letting the voice fly". Where that inner voice of the subconscious will choose to carry her - to India, Ireland or Andalucia — is the key to creativity. "It's almost like a cellular memory," she says, "When it happens I feel I'm in touch with the place where the very first singer was, millions of years ago."

Over the past 15 years Chandra, a South London-born "world citizen", has charted a distinctive journey across fronders in search of the ancestral roots of song. A photogenic teenage pop star with the band Monsoon in the early 1980s. she has matured into a committed artist who has fused tradition and innovation to make a category all her own. A new compilation assembles some of her most provocaove work for Peter Gabriel's world music label, Real World, in a blend of traditional Indian drones, English folk songs. Celóe laments and a lullaby by Manuel de Falla. Moonsung - A Real World Retrospective is no brash "greatest hits" set of melodic hooks, but an imaginatively sequenced dreamscape of vocal effects and spartan instrumental textures

Meeting Chandra herself is not quite so serene an experience. Self-willed and accustorned to controlling all aspects of her studio work and her business affairs, she gives the impression that, in an ideal world, she would ask all the questions in interviews, too.

But she probably has good reason to be suspicious of the media. Asian culture may be trendy now, but Chandra seems well aware of the dangers of being caught up in mere fashion. Nor does she want to be portrayed as the curator of a museum-like musical culture. Although her parents were born in Kerala, her immersion into Indian traditional music was anything but automatic, "I ignored most of it until I got into Monsoon," she says. "Nobody ever said it was unhip, but it was. We just thought of it as the music of our parents: there was no sense that it was part of a rich heritage." Soul music cast a bigger shadow. She recalls being fascinated by the gospel mannerisms of Deniece Williams. She even admits that the first record she ever bought was the Floaters' kitsch slowdancing epic, Float

Growing up between cultures, Chandra studied at theatre school and landed a longrunning role in the children's TV series Grange Hill. By the time she was 17 her vocal talents (nourished in lonely hours of practising in the stairwell at the family home) had carried her into Monsoon, Although the group's first single. Ever so Lonely, entered the Top Ten, progress thereafter was frustratingly slow.

I handra later turned to solo work. From attenove listening to vocalists from other traditions and continents, she became aware of the common heritage that linked European folk singers with the ornamented vocal styles of Arabia and India. Her trilogy of Real World re-cordings was inaugurated by the enchanting Weaving My Ancestors Voices. Meanwhile she abandoned the city for the countryside, settling in Glastonbury: "The silence around me there enters my work," she says. "I don't think I could live in the city and produce the

After a long period of concen-

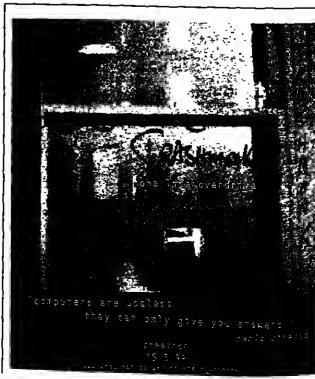

"Let the voice fly" is Sheila Chandra's advice

trating on the studio, she felt ready to venture into live performances, culminating in a Womad tour of America. To-about what the classical pian-ist Glenn Gould called the "non take two-ness" of the concert stage.

"Some artists prefer working live, and the sense of having no safety net." she says.

"To me it's much more of a technical enterprise. I like to have the fiftieth chance to change things. I could eat and sleep in a studio. You can play God there. It seems bland to go on the road and do the same thing over and over, and have to sort out any changes in the running order with the band. Besides, if I'd taken that path. I wouldn't have had time to learn what I had to learn." Moonsung — A Real World Retrospective is released on Monday

AT CINEMAS EVERYWHERE NOW @ ASSETT

clerical garb alongside a tain Father Brian Eno.

"Getting to act opposite Eno was a high point. Between takes we talked about music and I owned up to being a musician. He asked me what my band was called. When I said

Brian, his face lit up. He said:

That's the greatest compli-ment anybody has ever paid me. And I had to say: Well, actually, it's not after you, Brian.

It's named after the bass player in the Blades' - a revered Dublin band of the early

Brian's main man: Ken

Sweeney revisits his past

1980s. There and then I biew any chance of getting him to

While retaining the warmth and lyrical depth of Brian's earlier work, Bring Trouble has a musical breadth that acknowledges the developments of the intervening years. "The early stuff was very emotive and heartfelt, maybe a little too earnest," says Sweeney. "I would like to make that kind of music just a little bit more accessible and build on it. I'm sorry for the people who were expecting jingly jangly guitars on the new album. I got bored with that and I want to try

Monday by Setanta Records. Bri-an play Upstairs at the Garage.

something different."

produce my album."

The names to follow

Ireland has produced many great songwriters, says Nick Kelly, and the latest is Ken Sweeney, aka Brian

The year's first truly great album is upon us. And it's by a band called Brian. A seamless collection of poignant, arresting songs. Bring Trouble traces the steps from the giddy delirium of love's first flourish to the heartbreak of betrayal and disillusionment, before arriving at an eventual reaffirma-tion of life and love.

The author of this song cycle is Ken Sweeney, a London-based Dubliner in his early thirties, who is Brian's hea and soul. He coaxed respected musicians to play on the al-hum, including members of the High Llamas and the Coce-au Twins, while some of the Di-vine Comedy will feature in his touring band.

"It's all about my own memories of growing up in Dublin and falling in love," he explains. "If you look at a writer like Carson McCullers or film-makers like Michael Powell and Emeric Pressburger, they each have this recurring theme throughout their work that in relationships and in love people transcend their own lives. That's pretty much what a song like Wherever We're Going is all about. That contact, that shared experience with other people is where the greatest wealth lies."

There are several potential hit singles on the album, a case in point being the effervescent This Kitchen, 5am. "I was staying in a friend's house in Termonfeckin where I wrote a lot of these songs. It was early in the morning and I was thinking just how weird the in-side of a kitchen looks at that time. So you get these lines about the hardened sugar on a sugar bowl, the humming of the fridge, the blackened dirt

It so happens that the aforementioned friend is one of the ther Ted. Indeed, Sweeney himself had a cameo in the final episode, appearing in full riters of the cult sitcom, Fa-

How to work a pop miracle

Resurrection doesn't have quite the same ring when all it means is hype ne of pop's many functions (along-side making you dance making you cry, making you accelerate dangerously when the chorus happens, and ensuring that therever you are in the world. if you yelp "I see a little silhouetie-o of a man!" someone will unfailingly shrill "Scara-mouche! Scaramouche! Will you do the fandango? back at you) is the taking of biblical nythology and rendering it down into a small greasy pel-let. Take, for instance, the walls of Jericho tumbling down. Roger Waters built one out of polystyrene and kicked it Pink Floyd's The Wall our.

Or making a blind man see: Primal Scream's Bobby Gillespie claims it happened to him on Movin' On Up, alhough the moment of healing may actually have been something as simple as removing his tringe from his eyes. And then there's crucifixion. and resurrection. It's never enough for your average pop gonk to simply get a slagging they are "crucified" by the gutter press they so assiduously courted in their dog days; and when their next single gets bought into the charts and I lands at No 8, then that's "resorrection". Little matter that Jesus Christ hung from nails embedded in his palms and died a prolonged death from a combination of dehydration and shock; when Robbie Wilhains got fat from eating too many pies — and then got so drunk he looked cross-eyed for six months — and the press as bad as the naily-hand death thing. Of course a pop star talking about crucifixions and resurrections has about as much meaning as Kate Moss declaring war on split ends; but there have certainly been occasions when a pop star's utterings have led to them, if not being hung up by their hands until dead, then being poked by centurions' swords until they ernard Summer's musi

but the Mancunian singer has never been busier. Last summer saw him return to the stage with New Order, which is soon due to begin recording new material. Earlier this year, he played with Primal

Scream and contributed vocals to a forthcoming single by the Chemical Brothers. Meanwhile, with former Smiths guitarist Johnny Marr, Sumner has been making his third al-

. There was a period last year when I felt as though I had taken on too much," he says. "Johnny and I were working in the studio in Manchesnight I was taking the train to London to rehearse with New Order. It was like having two demanding jobs at the same

To add to his troubles, Sumner found himself suffering from stage fright. "I have never been comfortable in front of a big audience," he admits.

ter all week, then every Friday bum as Electronic cal career may be into its twenty-first year.

pointed all this out, that was squeaked. The most famous was, obviously, John Lennon's "We're bigger than Jesus" quote, which prompted Chris-tians to burn Beatles records across Middle America. Lennon should have called on Beatles fans to instigate tit-for-tat Bible bonfires in retaliation. Alas, it was left to Ringo to pull "cute" faces until the Christians got distracted by something else.

Jerry Lee Lewis was told he would burn in the furthest reaches of Hell — something he'd probably worked out for himself long before when the press found out he had wed his 13-year-old cousin. And when Boy George was arrested for heroin possession after he ad-mitted to being an addict, and had to hide while the tabloids ran stupid headlines such as "I tried orange juice to save George" and "Only six weeks to live", that was, you know, quite a bad year for him.

op resurrections, on the other hand, are practically non-existent. When, after ten years on the pop dole, Duran appeared to be a resurrection, but turned out to be a mere Baker's Rising — the phenomenon whereby a corpse, on entering the crematorium, appears to sit up and attempt to leave the big flaming oven.

The same icky corpse-curling mistaken for reanimation has also recently occurred with Human League, E17, Pete Wylie, Babylon Zoo and Gene. But it's important to understand that when pop stars talk of a resurrection, what they really mean, in the nonhysterical world, is "a comeback", "a return to making money", "being invited to nice parties again". Deposed pop stars dream of this resumption of services nightly: anyone who makes it from limbo back into the light - such as Cher - is viewed as a magical. glory-wreathed Lazarus; someone lucky, holy and blessed.

The tragedy of this is that a comeback/resurrection is one of the easiest things for a record company to arrange. If the record company likes the band or artist, it simply buys the artist a hit single from a songwriter, and markets it until it bleeds. There's very little miraculous about the process.

Of course, as recently as three years ago this conversation would have been wholly figurative. But now, however, technology has given those who care to use it the ability to make the dead sing: the most meaningful example of resurrection currently available to us. The Beatles, featuring the dead Lennon, scored a Top Ten hit in 1996 with Free as a Bird, and who can forget the uniquely cringe-making duct that Natalie Cole conducted with her dead Dad, Nat "King" Cole, on Unforgettable? The ethos behind these singles is disquietingly reminiscent of accounts of war orphans in 1916 who, in their wildness and boredom, would go out on to the abandoned bat-tlefields and jump on the corpses, to make them "sing". Apparently, they make a squealing, wheezing sound, not unlike bagpipes. And speaking of squealing dead things that sound not unlike bagpipes. I note that Big Country are about to embark on a resurrection tour. Now if anyone turns up for that, that will be worth cracking a few chocolate eggs for.

However, the album is aimed mainly at the discerning dance fans who may have grown out of clubbing but still like their music beat-based.

Much like Electronic, in fact - both Sumner and Marr are reformed party animals. "I no longer buy that myth that you have to be out every night behaving badly to make good music," says Sumner. "I got sick of waking up every morning feeling crap. I chilled out for a week, it felt great and I umner's healthier, happier lifestyle has had its disadvantages, however. "In the past, all of my lyrics were about my problems," he says. "Now, I don't have any problems worth writing about I had to make up a couple of fictitious characters in

The album's final track,

Flicker, was inspired by a comment by Pet Shop Boy Neil

Tennant, while Kraftwerk's

Karl Bartos suggested Summer try his trick of reworking negative comments about the band into lyrics. The first single, the catchy Vivid, is about first single I ever bought was That's probably why it's nothing at all.

wanted more of that."

EXCLUSIVE READER OFFER

THE STATIMES

FREE BBC MAGAZINE

oday, The Times offers readers the chance to read one of these stimulating BBC magazines FREE, saving up to £2.40. Each magazine has an individual flavour and will inspire you with a host of ideas for improving your home environment.

BBC Homes & Antiques (£2.40) offers a unique blend of home ideas and collectables showing you how to mix old and new and add nothing but style. The April issue includes free Monet postcards and the May issue (on sale April 9) has an additional free 24-page magazine on antique-style decorating tips.

BBC Good Homes (£2) is packed with practical, fuss-free tips and advice on how to achieve designer style at an affordable price. The April issue has a free Home Front Bathrooms and Kitchens directory. The May issue (on sale April 1) has a free booklet called Your Home: Essential Guide to Buying and Selling, Moving and Improving.

BBC Gardeners' World (£2.30) is full of inspirational ideas and articles by your favourite television gardeners. Choose the April issue with a free pack of Dutch iris bufbs and a guide to easy garden design by Gay Search; or the May issue (on sale April 9) with three packets of seeds to create a dazzling border display.

HOW TO GET YOUR FREE MAGAZINE

Simply collect three out of the five tokens published in The Times this week and attach them to the voucher below. You can present the voucher and tokens to your newsagent and exchange them for the magazine of your choice. The offer is valid for one week and must be redeemed by Friday, April 9.

THE TIMES BBC FREE MAGAZINE VOUCHER

☐ Gardeners' World (May)

To the reader: Attach three differently numbered tokens from The Times to this voucher to claim your free copy of one of the above magazines. Take into any retailer by April 9, 1999. Not redeemable against any other product or May Issue of either Good Homes, Gardeners World or Homes & Antiques, valid until close of business on April 9, 1999. Make sure customer and retailer details are complete and return for settlement to your head office by

To Head Office: Mease forward settlement claim and coupons to BBC Times

☐ Home & Antiques (April) £2.40 ☐ Home & Antiques (May) £2.40 Good Homes (April) Good Homes (May) Gardeners' World (April) 59.30 or in conjunction with any other offer.

promotion, PO Box 483, Warrington WA4 6XZ by 30th May 1999.

"When New Order were playing stadiums in the 1980s. I coped by hiding behind drink and drugs, but I was constantly ill and incredibly unhappy. terwards, i couldn't face puring again because I Bought I would end up in the gine state." When New Order reformed last year's Reading Festi-(a), Summer resolved to play it Straight, "I felt I needed to conMarr and Sumner:

I walked on stage at Reading. totally straight, the sight of the audience terrified me. For the first time in 17 years I could see all these faces staring back at me. But once I got over the Summer's new-found confidence spilt over into his work with Marr. Rather than taking two years to complete an alburn, as in the past, the pair wrote and recorded the bulk of the new songs in just three months. The result is a fresh record, Twisted Tenderness, packed with the same, instant pop melodies that saw the group's eponymous debut, re-more than a million copies.

in the morning because I was so keen to get into the studio. When I played guitar, it was like I was 16 again. I trusted my instincts. If it rocked, it was OK. We definitely over-

Lisa Verrico meets the happily reformed bad boys of Electronic Life's great when you're straight working hard and loving it shock, I loved it."

leased eight years ago, sell

"We both feit really inspired during recording," recalls Marr "I was getting up at six cooked the last album [Raise the Pressure]. labouring over each song for months. Bernard and I are in an odd position in that we have unlimited time. That was our downfall." To prevent themselves making the same mistake with Twisted Tenderness, the pair employed a producer for the first time. The job fell to veteran New York hip-hop producer Arthur Baker, who had worked with Sumner's band in the early 1980s on singles such as Confusion.

"We wanted Arthur because he is great with beats and rhythm," says Sumner. "It didn't quite work out as planned though. We ended up producing a lot of it ourselves and Johnny did most of the With hindsight. mixing. Arthur was good to have around because he told us when enough was enough." Baker also brought in former Carneo keyboardist Merv De Pyer, who was largely responsible for replacing Electronic's formerly clean-cut synths with the single," says Summer. "The a dirtier, more distorted sound. Add the fact that Marr Ride A White Swan by T. Rex. was persuaded to play more guitar, more loudly, and it is little surprise that new songs such as the album opener Make it Happen have a touch of the Chemical Brothers

To this day, I don't have a clue what that's about, but it's still a great song." ■ Vivid is out on Parlophone on Monday. Twisted Tenderness is out on April 18

To the retailer: Please accept this voucher as full payment against the April 15-24 25-54 35-44 45-54 25-54 35-64 55-64 | Monday | Tuesday | Wednesday | Don't usually buy The Times Which realonal Sunday newspaper(s) do you buy almost sharps (3-4 copies per morth)? Which national Sunday newspaper(s) do you buy quite often (1-2 copies per month)? Please tick box if you do not wish to receive mailings of offers or services from Times Newspapers Einsted or the BBC or companies carefully selected by them 🛚 🔲

RECOMMENDED THIS WEEKEND

LONDON

ST JOHN PASSION: Leeding London choir Polyphony gives a performance of Bach's moving setting of the Gospel. Stephen Layton conducts an impressive line-up of singers accompanied by Barroque orchestra Canzona.

St John's, Scritch Square (0171-222 1061). Today, 2:30pm.

VIENNA BRAHMS TRIO: The award winning piano trio, currently on an international tour, pays London a visit with a programme of Rachmenin Mendelssonn and Pfitzner. Wigmore Hall (0171-935 2141). Tornonow, 7.30pm (2) THE COLONEL BIRD: Bulgarian author Heato Boylichev's award-winning play about an asylum take over by the lunatics, Delimitely a metaphor Rupert Gould directs. Gate (0171-229 0706). Opens longh. 7.30pm.

CITY AT EASTER: Singers Mark Padmore and Matthew Hargreaves join the City of London Sintonia for more Bach, this time the St Matthe Passion. Nicholas Kraemer conduct (biolight, 6pm). Tomorrow the Irish Festival continues with a concert by Festival commues with a concert by Micheel O Súllebhain and the trish Chamber Orchestra (7.30pm). On evoked by a trio of popular musick and storytellers (7.30pm). Barblean (0171-638 8891). (5)

ELSEWHERE

BIRIMINGHAM: Staple Easter fere is also on offer here as the Bach Choir and the English Chamber Orchestra gives the annual Good Friday performance at this venue of Bach's SI Matthew Passion, The choir's new

Lynne Dawson sings

Symphony Hall (0121-212 3333). Today, 2pm. (5)

GLASGOW: Soprano Lynne Dawson joins the Scottish Chamber Orchestra and Charus in Chausson's mountlif Poème de la amour et de la mer, preceded by a Faure suite. A Meridale-sohn finale provides a counterweight to the otherwise all-French program-me. Raymond Leppard conducts. City Half (0141-287 5511). Tomght, 7.30pm.

WOLVERHAMPTON: Tim Brooke-Taylor and Brian Murphy are mem-bers of the hopeless gang outwrited by Dutice Gray in The Ladykilbers. Grand (01902 429212). Tonight,

NEW WEST END SHOWS

Jeremy Kingston's choice of theatre showing in London ■ House full, returns only S Some seats available C Seats at all prices

FILMS ON GENERAL RELEASE

James Christopher's choice of the latest movies

☐ THE GIN GAME: Derothy Tutin and Joss Ackland play old folk in a retirement home whose card-playing styles echo their sad lives. Firth bury directs a surprising Pulitze Prizewinner, See review, page 37. Savoy (0171-836 8888), (Q

N THE PRISONER OF SECOND AVENUE: Richard Dreyfuss and Marsha Mason make their British stage debuts in Neil Simon's play about big city angel.

Theatre Royal, Haymarket (0171-930 8800) (5)

N GOOD. C P,Taylor's best play, tracing a liberal professor's gradual descent into working with the Nazis, Charles Dance heads a strong cast, Michael Grandage directs.

Donmar (0171-369 1732)

€

CARD BOYS: Even the pests who stick sex cards in phone boves have dreams of bettering themselves, Mike Packer's spirited play tells us, Bush (0181-743 3368),

TEA WITH MUSSOLINI (PG): Fleshes

of genius and dry humour Illuminate or general and pry marroup introduce 2 selffell's sentimental injude to the culture-mad English spinisters who read the director in Rorance before Mussolini paled them. With Maggie Smith, Joan Plowight, and Judi Dench.

PLUNKETT & MACLEANE (15): Jake

Scott's 18th-century swashbuckle closer to Butch Cassidy and the Sundance kid than The Flake's

Progress With Robert Carlyle and Ingenious comedy about a man (Brendari Fraser) released after 35 years in a nuclear bunker. His 1950s values make him look mystical, med.

BLAST FROM THE PAST (12):

BEYOND SILENCE (12): Plucky

THE NIGHT OF THE HUNTER (12):

versus Sweeney Todd nightmare. Robert Mitchum's crooked preache

Charles Laughton's one and only stab at directing is a Torn Sawyer

Jonny Lee Miller.

NEW RELEASES

1 400 JOKES WITH THE DEVIL.
This is Theatre Alia's fouring account

ol Eisenstein's file and career, from the Odessa Steps onwards, includes lootage of his firms. See review. p.37, Lyric Studio, W6 (0181-741 8701) THE LION, THE WITCH AND THE WARDROBE: Adrian Noble's speciacular production of the first Namia adventure comes to town, Barblean (0171-638 8891).

SACRED HEART; In Mick Maho ney's new play two second-generation irish lods from NW3, meet again after years estranged, Edward Hall directs, Ambassadors (0171-565 5000).

☐ GROSS INDECENCY: The Three Trials of Oscar Wilde: Michael Pennington plays Wilde, with William Hoyland and Clive Francis as coursel for and against, in Moisea Kaufman's play, Gielgud (0171-494 5065). A LOVELY SUNDAY FOR CREVE COEUR: Late Termessee Williams play where four that yearns play where four that yearns to go for a lakeside picane, Jermy Seeley directs for Grasse Theatre, Drill Half (0171-637 8270),

Grotesque and yet gorgeous chanting, horrifying — in other words all-embracing - production of Humperdinck's fairy-tale for Welsh National Opera was given a warm if somewhat nervous welcome by Hilary Finch when it was new in Cardiff at Christmas. Children, apparently, happity take it in their stride; they probably watch more television than adults. I suspect that the older you are, the more disturbing you may

Anyway, audiences are funny things. When Nigel Robson's dear little old lady of a Witch skewered tmelda Drumm's Hansel on a broomstick, bound hand and foot like a suckling pig complete with an apple gag!- in his mouth, and then force-fed him through a tube, Wednesday's audience was falling about laughing. while this particular member of it was halfway under his seal in sheer terror. That is the Climax of gruesomeness in the staging, unless you count the rescued children enthusiastically settling down to eat the Witch at curtain-fall. But it is balanced by imagery of extraordinary wonder and tenderness: the Dream Pantomime, with angel-chefs and a Max Ernst fish butler serving the children the banquet of a lifetime, is a truly Mahlerian child's vision of heaven. Which, despite the brilliance of the production, leads to perhaps the most riveting aspect of the evening: the musical performance under Vladimir Jurowski. The Russian conductor writes most interestingly in the programme of his initial doubts about the piece, of the technical difficulty in realising the "unbelievably intricate" polyphony, and of the somewhat suffocating Wagnerism. He feels the need somehow to get beyond all that, and indeed does get beyond it, into the world of Mahler.

Hansel and Gretel Sadjer's Wells

He is free with rubato, pulling the tempo of the overture about with gay abandon, and thereafter scarcely a bar goes by without a touch of expressive shading. At first it all seemed a little restless, but Jurowski's patent love of the music soon wins you over: he never hurries, and makes sure that every strand of polyphony is as audible as the voices, in which he is aided by the WNO Orchestra's magnificent playing. Jurowski's initial doubts turn into a love affair of almost embarrassing warmth. He also mentions the gruesome-ness, but not that other Teutonic element, the Gemütlichkeit: Robson's Witch oozes with it, olde-worlde charm as synthetic as the cream on the chocolate cake that lures the children into his/her lair. His singing is musical and unexaggerated, as is that of the whole cast: Linda Kitchen and Imelda Drumm irresisüble as the children, Mary Lloyd-Davies and Robert Poulton hugely sympathetic as the despairing parents, and Mary-Louise Aitken exceptional as Sandman and Dew Fairy, Musically this is a feast as rich as Jones's Dream Pantomime, and in combination with his humane invenove staging makes for an unforgettable evening. Don't miss it as it tours the country.

RODNEY MILNES

Postwar music parade

cently AUGUST IN THE WATER (ICA): YOU could hang Sogo Ishii's surreal Japa-rese science liction in the Tate, it's a

CURRENT GOOS AND MONSTERS (19): Ian McKetten excels as a legendary horror movie director who grooms his gardener (Brendan Fraser) for a role lar darker than that of over-muscled is unlargettable. An absolute classic 1955 fear movie.

heautiful, inscrutable look at a city

AMERICAN HISTORY X (18): Edward Norton is teroclously compelling as a white supremacist skinhead in Tony Kayo's lavish, controversial but doomed attempt to got under the skin doomed attempt to get under the skin of an American tragedy.

PAYBACK (18): Mel Gibson blasts his way through Brian Helgelary's churcky thiller, With Gregg Henry, William Devane, James Coburn and Kns

THE RUGRATS MOVIE (U): Panless, big earloon adventure in which faring toddlers bond in a spooky forest. With enough for actuits, an unevoidable necessity for three to eight year-olds.

BC Radio 3's magnifi-cently resourceful Sounding the Century festival reaches a climax this month with Endless Parade, a four-week-long celebration of postwar British music.

that half-century was well illustrated in the programme for the first concert of the final series at the Festival Hall on Wednesday night. Harrison Birtwistle's Endless Parade. which lent its name to the series, was heard alongside a new commission from Richard Causton, Millennium Scenes, while works by Britten Four Sea interludes from Peter Grimes) and Tippen (The Vision of St Augustine) provided the historical perspective. Previous works by the young and gifted Causton have deeply impressed me, notably The Persistence of Memory with its haunting sonorities and exquisitely realised sense of suspended time. Millennium Scenes is a very different proposition, however: described as an "antidote to the official millennium celebradons", it is a fierce response to the brutality and hearnlessness of our times. To complain that the score, with its sustained shrill whistles, relentless pounding violence and final blaring car horns, is raucous cacophony is to state no more than a truism.

CONCERTS BBCSO/Davis Festival Hall

After that, even a card-carry ing heckler might have found Birtwistle's Endless Parade a tonic to the ears. Its grotesque apparitions and phantasmagorical glimpses seemed civilised by comparison, certainly in a performance as skilfully controlled as this. Hakan Hardenberger made the solo trumpet part a thing of beauty. Andrew Davis and the BBC Symphony Orchestra coped heroically with both Birtwistle and Causton, and delivered the immaculately conceived Sea Interludes of Britten with no less care for their textural detail. Tippett's Vision of St Augustine is very much one for the converted. Yet I did appreciate the literally transcendental virtuosity of soloists Alan Opie and Alison Smart, the BBC Singers and Symphony Chorus and their orchestral coloes anyone call Gustav Leonhardt Gus? It seems unlikely, considering the man's sober demeanour and his almost finicky way with the music he plays or conducts. Since this is Easter week and the score on his stand at St John's, Smith Square, was Bach's St John Passion, he had extra reasons to be well-behaved. This is a work Leonhardt will now only conduct in a church, and he requested no applause, not one So the Evangelist, Jesus, Pilate, the Orchestra of the Age of Enlightenment and their 13-strong choir filed on in silence. The great opening chorus Herr, unser Herscher did not bode well. The sound balance favoured the orchestra. Heavy rhythmic accenting, signalled by Leonhardt's arms rotating in circles, made the piece heave like a boat in a storm. The seasick feeling persisted throughout the chorales: only towards the end. MILLINGTON with Christ nailed to the cross

Barry

Passion without

OAE/Leonhardt Statoon's

and dying, did Leonhardt relax, letting tenderness and anguish flow through the notes. Luckily the soloists escaped the worst of Leonhardt's propellers. He just let them sing. And they sang, by and large, superbly. Mark Padmore's Evangelist button-holed the ears immediately, unfolding his grave and terrible story with perfect clarity and sweet expression. In the arias, Padmore's exquisite tenor solos competition from

Stephen Varcoe's bass and, especially, Michael Chance's counter-tenor (delicately heartbreaking in Es ist vollbracht). Rachet Ellion's soprano flared brightly in the tripping rhythms of Ich folge dir gleichfalls, but only found fake grief in her post-Crucifixion cry, Zerfliesse, mein Herze, As always in church Passion performances it seemed incongruous to find Jesus facing Cruci- fixion in a suit, collar and tie. but Michael George's bass voice resonated with authority. Precision was Leonhardt's watchword; you could tell by his hand movements, as well as the crisp sound. It was achieved, though, at the overall expense of dramatic punch. Soil, by the end Leonhardt's measured approach paid good dividends: the falling phrases of the final chorus, Ruht wohl. flowed with dignity and the deepest sadness. The musice done, the performers left, looking at their feet. No applause.

GEOFF BROWN

OPERA & BALLET THEATRES THEATRES ADELPH oc 24ths (51 trig tes) (117, 344 0051 Grps 413 3321/0500 614 963 YULL POR A TICKET M.O.S. CHICAGO ZURT THE HOLLEST SHOM MOTOWN Incl More-Set 8, Wed 8 Sai Mats 3

FUNNY, PROVOCATIVE REMARKABLY DAILY TELEGRAPS SEE APOLLO, SEUTESBERT WE

ALDWYCH 0171 418 6000 cc 0171 957 4001/420 0000(bitg lee) Grps 0171 416 6073413 3321 Lloyd Webber's best show since Plantique" O.Tel WHISTLE DOWN THE WIND SEST NEW MUSICAL SE TOWN DAM nicly, completely brilland Captal Radio Now booking to March 2000 Mon-Set 7.45 Mate Thur & Set 3.00 Original cast album now on sale

LINESDA AY THE ALBERT 0171 369 1740/344 4444 CATE BLANCHETT as Susan Trabame in David Harets PLENTY Directed by Jonethan Kent FROM 15th APRO. Mon-Sat 7.30pm, Thur & Sat Met 3pm

APOLLO SHAFTEBBURY AVE 0171 404 5509344 4444 MARK LITTLE IN DEFENDING THE CAVEMAN by Rob Becker Upcoariosaly larger D Tel ABSOLUTELY ERILLANT John Gray (Man are from Mars..) Mon-Thurs 8, Fn 8 45, Set 8 & 8.46 Now booking to 2nd October

APOLLO VICTORIA cc 0171 418 0000 Grps 416 6075/413 3321 Andrew Lloyd Wather's STARLIGHT EXPRESS

CAMBREDGE 494 5060/416 6060/344 444/420 0000 |+blog feelGrps 494 5454 418 6075/413 3321/436 5588 DARREN DAY as Deprey GREASE NOW IN IT'S 6TH SENSATIONAL YEAR ster HAT D Mart Mon-Sat 7:30pm, Wed & Sat Mat 3pm BOOKING TO THE MILLENGUM

COMEDY 0171 368 1731 SUDDENLY LAST SUMMER by Tennessee Williams With Sheild Clish and Ritchel Westz Directed by Sear Markins From 8 April, 14 weeks only

CRITERION 369 1737/344 4444 HILARIOUS 4th GREAT YEAR THE REDUCED SHAKESPEARE COMPANY THE COMPLETE WORKS OF WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE (abridged)
Mais Thur at 3pm, Set at 5pm
Sun at 4pm, Even at 9pm Laugh, I nearly ded Times GO NOW S.Times Tuesdays only at 8pm THE COMPLETE HISTORY OF AMERICA (abridged) Boolong 'M. September '99 DOMENTON 0171 (56 1828) 344 4444, Groups (12+) 0171 418 6086/413 3321 Disney's BEAUTY AND THE BEAST

The sneeth fut mulical
A MAGICAL EVENING OF SPECTACULAR SPECIAL EFFECTS, SMAZING COSTINA AND BEAUTIFUL SONGS
Classic FM
Mon-Sut 7:30,
Mais Wed & Sai 2:30

GOOD

DRURY LAKE THEATRE ROYAL SS oc (big) led) 24hr 7 days 01 fl. 494 5000344 4444420 0000 Gros 494 5454413 3311/0870 841 0041 MISS SAIGON THE CLASSIC LOVE STORY OF OUR TIMES NOW IN ITS 10TH

es 7.45 Mats Wed & Sat 3pm and sents small for Wed Hat & some parts - apply 8.0. DUCHESS 0171 494 5075 oc 0171

120 0000 (Dig log) Gips 0171 494 5454 DAVID SARA MATTHEW BURICE KESTELMAN MARSH COPENHAGEN Dr by MICHAEL BLAKEMORE.
Masterly performence in a simplerwork Times
Mon-Set 7.30 Mass Thu & Set 2.30

NOW IN ITS 100 HIT YEAR WELLITELON YOUN THE WOMAN IN BLACK Adapted by Stephen Maliatrati The most thrilling and chilling play for years' D.Mail Ion-Sat 8.00, Mats Tue 3.00 & Sat 4.00

team:

Telephone

0171 680 6222

0171 782 7930

FORTURE BO & CC 0171 836

BO(no bkg lee) 0870 506 3400 cct+bkg leej 420 0000344 4444 Grps 0171 418 6075 Lesie Broxsst's DOCTOR DOLITTLE Entertainments To advertise in this section lease call the Entertainments

Starring PHILLIP SCHOFFELD THIS IS A SURE PIRE HIT ITV PURE PLEASURE Daily Man Book, music & lyncs by Lesia Brousse Directed by Steven Period Sat 7.30. Mais Wed, Sat 2.10 Season ends 28 aug 59

GARPICK 0171 494 5085/344 4444 (big lee) Gps 0171 494 5454/413 3321 701 EPIC FOR OUR EPOCK E.Sid The Royal National Theatre Production William PHILP MARJORE

MILIAN PHILP MARJOR GAUNT WHITCHIRCH VATE JE PRINTIPS AN INSPECTOR CALLS ONE OF THE MOST INTOXICATING EXPERIENCES OF THE 1990S ESIG UNINSSABLET Time Out Mon-Fri 7.45, Sat 5 & 8.15 Mate Wed 2.30

GELGUD 0171 484 5065 (+birg feel 'A NEW OSCAR WROCET Express STRONGLY RECOMMENDED' Ind MICHAEL CROSS INDECENCY The Tiree Trials of Occur tilide by Mobile Radman 'A DRAMATICALLY CHARGED AND DEEPLY MOVING EXPERENCE' D.To Mon-Sat 7.45 mals Wed, Sat 2.30

ARKET, THEATRE ROYAL 0171 930 8800 oz 344 4444 (big lee) RICHARD MARSHA DREYFUSS MASON NEIL SIMONS THE PRISONER OF SECOND AVENUE Mon-Sat 7.45, Wed & Sat Mats 3.00 HER MAJESTYS 241v 494 5400 Mg Imposia44 4444450 00006mg G 494 54544413 231 1456 5566 ANDREW LLOYD WEBBIERS ANARD WINNING MUSICAL

AMERICA LLOYD WERRERS AMARD WHING MUSICAL THE PHANTOM OF THE OPERA Directed by HAROLD PRINCE NOW BIGG TO JUNE 2000
Eves 7.45 Mels Wed & Sat 3.00
Apply to Bin Office delty for resurre and Wed Max availability

LONDON PALLADRIM 0171 484 50/344 4444 (bkg 180) Grps 0171 494 5464/413 3321 SATURDAY NIGHT FEVER SENSATIONAL NIGHT OUT D.Mino HOT STUFF ANY NIGHT OF THE WEEK Times FEVER IS STILL PRECTIOUS D.Tel Mon-Sal 7.30 Wed & Set Mals 2.30

NOW BOOKING TO OCT 1999 SOME SEATS AVAIL FOR WEDS MAT LYCEUM BO+CCENTRIJOR70 606 3440 0171416 2029/344 4444/420 0000 THE SEASON'S SENSATION The Royal Molloger Theore Production OKLAHOMA!

Winner of 4 Laurepte Olivier America Inc Outstanding Monical Production Boot Musical - Eur Standard Award NOT RESIDENT - Each Standard Auder
'OH WHAY A BEAUTHFUL EXEMINE'
D.Mail, Guard, Times, Ind, etc.
Eves 7-30 Mails Wed & Sat 2-30 100 standby neutle @ 15 held
'Bill the day Mare-Time at 80
12 WESIGS ONLY TO 28 JUNE LYCEUM 1870 243 9000 (bkg lee) Groups 0171 418 6093 Disney presents THE LION KING

Performances begin 24 Sep LYRIC 0171 494 5045/344 444 ANIMAL CRACKERS Man: Brothers' Musical Cornect 'DELIRIOUSLY PURRY' D.Med Mon-Sal 7.45, Mats Wed & Sal 3.00 MATIONAL THEATRE BO 0171 452 3000 Grps 0171 452 3010 24hr cc bkg fee 0171 420 0000 LYTTELTON Tomor 2.15 & 7.30

SETRAYAL by Harold Pinter. COTTESLOE Tomor 2.30 & 7.30 GUIDING STAR a new play by Entertainments

> To advertise in this section piease call the Entertainments 0171 680 6222

0171 782 7930

NEW LONDON Druy Lam WC2 DO 0171 405 0072 or 2415. 344 4444 Grps 405 1567/413 8311 THE ANDREW LLOYD WESSERY CATS

Eves 7.45 Mats Tue & Set 3.00 Bars open at 6.45 Good seets evall for Tues Mat OLD VIC 0171 494 5372 (C1 fee) SEASON EXTENDED UNTIL 25 SEPT DAVID SUCHET Unit 17th April

AMADEUS "AMANDOUS"
BY PETER BCHAPPER
MICHOLAS LE PREVOST
as Saient From 18th April Highly Theatrical & superbly Gredard by PETER MALL Got CHACKING MIGHT OUT D.Tel
EVERTYONE MUST GOT MON
Ever MOSS 1 730 Eves Mon-Sal 7:30 Mals Wed & Sat 2:30 PALACE THEATRE 017: 454 0809

x: 24hrs (big fee) 0171, 344 4444 (big fee) grps 0171 413 3311 THE WORLD'S MOST POPULAR LES MISERABLES NOW IN ITS 14TH RECORD BREAKING YEAR 5485 7:30 Mais Thu & Sai 2:30 GOOD SEATS AVAILABLE FOR THURSDAY MATDREE E Listind num of seeks and daily from B.O. for eye perfermances until the interval

PHOENIX 80/CC 0171 369 1733 BEST MUSICAL Olivier(Drame Awards Plays & Playsrativor Novello Award WILLY RUSSELL'S BLOOD BROTHERS

PICCADELLY 0171 359 1734/344 4444
PRIMELLA SCALES TIMOTHY WEST
STEVEN PACEY MIGEL TENETY THE BIRTHDAY PARTY By HARIOLD PINTER FROM 20th APRIL Mon-Sal Spot, Thur Joon, Sal Spot PACCADALLY 0171 389 1734/ SLAVA'S SNOWSHOW

Mon-Sal 7.30, Mais Thurs & Sal 2.30

ACKLAND

SALLY *BUDDY The Buddy Holy Story
SRELLANT Sun
BUDDY
WONDERFUL STUFF Sun Tel
Tues-Thurs S.D Fri 530 & 8.30 DEXTER MACBETH by William Shakespeare Eves 7:30 Mate Sat 2:30 No parts Fn 2 or Mon 5 Apr Extra Mat Thur 8 Apr Sat 5 & 8.30 Sundays 4.00pm, Kids 1/2 price ALL SEATS 1/2 PRICE FRI 5.30 PERF 10th TRIUMPHART YEAR Over 3.520 Performances ROYAL SHAKESPEARE Now booking 'Ill the year 200

COMPANY
COMPANY
STRATFORD D1789 285623/
STRATFORD D1789 285623/
STRATFORD D1789 285623/
RST: A MHDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM TON'T 7.30 & NOTION 1.30 8 7:30 Swan: VOLPONE Tont 7:30, tomor 1:30 & 7:30 LONDON 0171 638 8991 Barblear THE LON 0114 AND THE WARDROBE Tont .15. tomor 1.45 & 7.15 Pk-IOBERTO ZUCCO Tont 7.15 ROYAL COURT Duke of York's 0171 565 5000 cm24hrs 420 0005 Best New Play Othlar Assards 199 THE WEIR

PRINCE OF WALES 0171 839 5967 0171 420 0052 oc 24hs 344 4444 "A WASTERPIECE OF MUSICAL THEATRE! FROM START TO PRISH

WEST SIDE STORY IS A BRILLIANT MUSICAL D.Mai Even 7.45, Mai Thure & Set 3.00 NOW BOOKENG UNITE, SEPT 4TH

PRINCE EDWARD 0171 447 5400 (870 8401111/017) 344 4444 Bently Andersson & Bjorn Uhenus MAMMA MTA!

A new musical based on the songs of ABBA Mow Previousing, Mos-Sat 7.30 mats Thurs & Sat 3.00 p.m

OUEENS 0171 494 5040 (£1 bkg lee) Groups 0171 494 54540870 240 1205

RUPUS

SEWELL

THE WEIK
by Concr No Phinson,
Mon-Sat 7.20 Wed 5 Sut Net 3.30
Upathra (Ambantadors, West St)
TRUST by Cary Mitchell
Last perio Sat 4.00 8 9.00
SACRED MEART by Mick Methoday
Tuss-Fr 7.00, Sat 4.00 8 7.00
No peris of TRUST and SACRED HEART
Tonight or Mon Sin April

TUTIN THE GIN GAME

'AS TURNING PIECE OF THEATHE BOSION GLODE
MONSAT 7.45 Mate Thur & Set 3.00
No ports Tonight or Monday

SHAFTESHURY 07000 21 12 21 0870 840 1111/0171 344 4444 (bkg bos)

TO CELEBRATE Time Out

THE CROSS TABLE EXPLOSIVE SENSATIONAL, SUPERIE Daily Mail Mon-Sat 7:30, Mails Wed, Sat 3:00 NOW BOOKING TO 2000

ST MARTINS 0171 836 1443 Even 8, Tun 245, Set 5 8 8 AGATHA CHRISTTE'S

THE MOUSETRAP

47th YEAR

STRAND THEATRE Box Of & oc

(no fee) 0171 930 8800

oc (Ding lee) 0171 344 4444420 0000 Groups 0171 413 3321/ 0171 436 558

IAUDEVILLE 0171 836 996 0171 344 4444 (+big) iso ALISON STEADAM

THE MEMORY OF WATER By Shelagh Stephenson Oiracled by Terry Johnson WICKEDLY FURBRY Indepen Mon-Sat Spm Main Tru & Sat Spm VICTORIA PALACE 0171 634 1317/344 4444 (no feel Sex, Roge & Rock' a Rok "THE NEW

BOCKY HORROR SHOW JASON DONOVAN & weeks only from 14 April

WINDER! 1998 TONY AWARD BEST PLAY 1997 OLIVIER AWARD BEST COME! A new play by Yasenina Risca Trans by Christopher Hampton Stanningly brilliant and funny Time Eres 8, Mays Wed 3, Sel & Sun 5

٧,

No liability of C

WYNDHAMS 389 1736/344 4444

- 97 - Townhouse Brasserie VOUCHER Eat Out for Lunch / Dinner

0171 636 2731 EASTER WEEKEND BRUNCH (FREE CREAM EGG FOR KIDS) 24 COPTIC ST, LONDON, WCI __67-

ENTERTAINMENTS LISTINGS TO ADVERTISE IN THIS SECTION PLEASE: Telephone:

Anna Chacholiades 0171 680 6224

Heidi Bierer 0171 680 6223 Fax 0171 782 7930

Email: tnl.ents@newsint.co.uk

"YOU'RE IN FOR

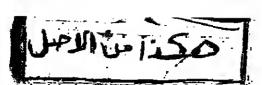

A REAL TREAT

IF I WERE YOU I'D PICK UP

THE PHONE AND BOOK NOW!"

SEE DOMINION THEATRE LISTING FOR DICTARLS

صكد أ من الاصل

swetting seas sadly drowning
e.g. geology graduate (7) Fiece on Communist reported shot (8)
Items of furniture with gold inlay provided for naval officers
(10) | Swelling seas sadly drowning

6 Must one have spelling lessons?

7 Sickness seen in Paradise as exceptional (7) 18 Come back together possibly once? Never! (9)

19 Going wrong first to last in period of opportunity (7)
20 Sellers of War Cry look on, fac-ing obstacle in posh part of pub

21 Sound of feline animal in sandy terrain near Ayr? (5)
22 Feature of dress in which little Mary appears before the Queen (9) 24 Underline number (11)

26 Diligent couple, American, behind fool, initially ignorant (9)
28 Being frivolous, she dated English drunk (5-10)

32 Indian companion brought in for child-minding facility (6) 34 Loiter? Sure could be possibility if ones this (10)

35 Clear and concise dictionary isn't badly laid out inside (8) 38 Humble learner meets wiselooking person by back of acad-39 Financial document shows heap given to debtor getting be-41 Possibly he is achier having caught cold — bacteria responsible (11) 43 Ben may provide me with a challenge (1 l) Inspect learner's room — find research analysis (4.5) Material let out to accommodate bits near Julie's middle! (5) Religious wonder-worker wants nothing Catholic to be carried around (8)

Child who could be one of Fa-mous Five? (10) Boldness shown by heartless sweetheart (6)
Place at which all hope must be abandoned — always Rome?

(3,3,2,3,4) Explorer earns sums after travelling around (9) Rambling screed with no end should be shortened again (11) Outburst when Mrs Mopp comes in to get extra payment

O Racoon-like animal, one hiding behind garment (5) 62 Fresh soup, meat - around end of dinner, cheese (9)

64 Folly making mother return to supposed site of monster (7) 66 Form of script including, primarily, emporium's latest information? (5,4)

67 A mother with energy that's remarkable (7) 68 Following Rapunzel's example and behaving wildly (7,4,4,4) .69 Folk crossing, going in and out of stations? (10)

· 70 Peg. dram, a litre? Wanting none of them! (8) 71 Last stages of battle with only a few left oo board? (3-4)

I A superior street artist, one in short narrow road on a far continent (10)

2 One possibly wounded in the Middle East — hurry into hospital (7) 3 Immortalised bird is diving into rising river (9) 4 It helps one to look at things in different ways (11)

S Teacher in lab's second degree? (6,2,7) 6 Solid figure ousting male involved in true act of retaliation (8)

7 Bad sort, no good, has secure places to hide in (11) 8 Grandma heads north for Scottish location (5) 10 Is article on church support-ing honour and attitude of deference? (9) 11 Gong brings first of diners into dinner maybe (5) 12 Second little woman at home

keeping lady and man apart, separated (9) 13 Enjoy book on train, perhaps, and find writer's hidden meaning (4.7.3.5) 14 Those that are fleeced may see him go off with the spoils (7) 15 One when resting, it seems, may be bent (6)

Controls engineers put on bar-riers around centre of Hull (9) 25 Expertise in home delivery (9) 27 Finds the bottle warder has to drink, wrinkling nose over spirit? (6,2,4,7) Fabric shreds everyone stitched together (10) 30 Placed in difficulty, I ate dust

(8)
31 Vessel out East in a passage heavy with traffic (5,5)
33 Like this puzzle? It could make you weep quietly a short

36 Rogue may be one to sweep through on a path of destruc-

37 Fruit fly possibly bigger than all the others? (8)
39 Edge, something rocky, suits butterfly (9)

40 A concert's organised for singers (9)
42 Board favouring friend, entertaining very big alternative suggestion (7-8) 48 Thin, as office papers may be?

49 A sediment is stirred, becoming diffuse (11) 50 Firmness in little girl, 10, only half nice (10)

52. Is son next? That could be changed, if heredity becomes such (3-6) 53 Experimenter who risks being brought down to earth (4,5) Relation, a left-winger, not ex-onerated (9) 56 This horse may be a joke (8) 57 In anger, a member of the House may show violent behaviour (7) 58 Fabric not bright, it having only minimal yellow (6) Song about unknown old knight getting in a state (7) 63 Fellow, cad, not accepted by nobs, right? (5)

65 Urge production of endless

In our Bank Holiday Jumbo Crossword competition, a prize of £100 will be awarded for the first correct solution to be opened on Thursday, April 22. Entries to Good Friday Jumbo (217), Weekend, The Times, 1 Pennington Street, London El 9XN. The winner and solution will be published in Weekend on Saturday, April 24

WHO FIRM I WAS CHOSEN ON THE WAS A SHORT OF THE WAS

NAME. ADDRESS .

Times Two Good Friday Jumbo

There is no prize for this crossword. The solution will be published on Monday, April 5

ACROSS

1 Cause of annoyance.

fear (7) 5 Laura his muse (8) 9 Glide between notes

(mus.) (10) 16 The Young Pretender (6,6,7)17 Retirement garment (7)

18 Last few job candidates 19 Neptune's weapon (7)

21 Mark -, American author (5)

20 Historical record keep-

22 Repulsive (9) 24 In charming fashion

26 Uncompromising type 28 Indoor climate control

(3-12)32 Blunt needle (6) 34 Ledge by casement (6,4) 35 Capital of Brazil (8)

38 To ooze (5) 39 Improvised (eg road) block (9) 41 Play-mounting activities (11) 43 Sea-depth measurer 44 Causing sweat (9)

45 One fitting into mortise 46 Period of 3 (8)

47 Unglazed earthenware 49 Split apart; stick closely

51 Sets of villains' portraits (6,9) 54 Collarbones (9) 57 Gallantry award; egged morale (anag.) (6,5) 59 Carefully checking (9) 60 Banter; corn husks (5) 62 Is more important than

64 Immuniser against disease (7)

66 Vital (9) 67 Lover of Isolde (7) 68 Unofficial therapies

(11,8)
69 Older man geoerous to young girl (5,5)
70 Tent cover; handbill (8)
71 Lover of Ariadne (7)

DOWN

1 Child minder (10) 2 Venetian craft (7)

3 State of being (9) 4 Creation of copies

5 Go out for great time (5,3,4,3)6 Of few words (8)

7 Island chain (11) 8 Camb. college: Irish county (5) 10 Not using both arms

(3-6) 11 Uniform coat (5) 12 Grandee (9) 13 W London summer festival (7,4.8) 14 In unconcealed way (7) 15 Cheerfully careless (6) 23 Turban-like knot

(5.4)
25 Polar (continent) (9)
27 Surfeit, what "one have"?

(3.4.2.1.4.5) 29 Utterly erase (10) 30 A London legal society (5.3)

31 Cold-weather radiator additive (10)
33 Israeli parliament (7)
36 Pin for knocking down (7)

37 One carousing (8)
39 Cheap, fake (goods) (9)
40 Forthright, boldly coofident (9) 42 Admission to voting rights (15) 48 San José their capital 49 (Police station) case list (6,5) 50 Value, benefit (10) 52 Kitchen whisk (3-6) 53 Personal servant (5,4) 55 Inducement (9) 56 One full of energy, enthusiasm (4,4) 57 Space between vocal cords (7) 58 Privolousness (6) 61 Idiotic (7) 63 A city, a cake; a jib sail

65 Marine animal: Ballantyne's Island

Chancery Division

Law Report April 2 1999

Chancery Division

No right to sue on grape names

Antonio Muñoz Y Cia SA and Another v Frumar Ltd and Another

Before Mr Justice Laddie

[Judgment March 26] No recital in the relevant EEC Council Regulations, relating to the identification of grapes, had the effect of enabling a plainoff, owning property rights in a particular strain, in sue a defendant who marketed that strain under a differ-

Mr Jusoce Laddie so held in the Chancery Division, in dismissing an action by the plaintiffs. Antonio Munoz Y Cia SA and Superior Fruidcola SA, against Frumar Ltd and Redbridge Produce Marketing Ltd, in which Muñoz sought, inte alia, to enjoin Frumar from selling "Superior Seedless" grapes under the names "White Seedless".

"Sult" or "Coryn". Those Council Regulations. made with the objectives set out in article 39 and under articles 42 and 43 of the EC Treaty, were Regulations 1035/72/EEC [OJ 1972 L118/1], 823/87/EEC (OJ 1987 L84/59). 1730/87/EEC (OJ 1987 L163/25). 291/92/EEC (OJ 1992 L31/25). 2081/92/EEC (OJ 1992 L208/1) and 2200/96/EC (OJ 1996 L297/1)

Mr Martin Howe, QC and Miss Charlotte May for Muñoz Mr Mark Platts Mills, QC. for Fru-

MR JUSTICE LADDIE said that Muñoz held exclusive rights to grow and harvest in Spain "Superior Seedless" grapes ("SS"), a strain developed in the 1980s by Superior Parming Inc of USA, under a Spanish patent.

Frumar sold seedless grapes in the United Kingdom under the names "White Seedless". "Sult" and "Coryn". Recent DNA tests on "Coryn" grapes had led Frumar to accept that they were "SS" and af-

"SS" were, that DNA tests were too complicated to be within its reasonable reach, that it wished to crossexamine Muñoz's expert witness, that the regulations were insufficiently transparent to be enforceable and that it had at all times acted with due diligence.

ness was due to give evidence, he and his report had been withdrawn. Two major issues had re-I Did the relevant Council Regulamar's grapes?

lations required that any grape which was put on the market must bear its proper variety name, or its synonym, if that was listed. It followed that the only legitimate name which could have been used on Frumar's strains was "SS".

breached that duty. 2 Had Muñoz any right to sue in respect of those breaches? European Regulations differed ier the first day of the trial it had told Munoz that it was, for the purpose of this action only, willing to accept that both "White Seedless" and "Suli" also were "SS". Nonetheless Frumar contended that nobody could be sure what

Just before Frumar's expert wit-tions make the use of the variety name mandatory in relation to Pru

In his Lordship's view, the regu

Article 3(1) of Regulation 2200/96 imposed upon Frumar, as holders of those products, a duty to label them properly. They had from ordinary English legislation in that recitals, often extensive. were set out, in order to identify the major considerations to be borne in mind and addressed; sometimes giving a much clearer indication of the legislative intent.

Here, the right to sue depended

(a) the extent to which, if at all, these regulations had direct effect: namely, could a private individual rely on them in the courts of member states, even if not implemented into the member's national legisla-

(b) whether that effect was "vertical", creating rights enforceable in the national courts between individuals and the State: or "borizontal", creating enforceable rights be-tween individuals?

Mr Howe's main authorides fell into two groups: (i) Scotch Whisky Association v JD Vintners Ltd [1997] Eu LR 446), Scotch Whisky Association v Glen Kella Distillers Ltd (1997) Eu LR 455) and Marthew Gloag 8 Sons Ltd v Welsh Distillers Ltd (1996) FSR 718), each concerned with EEC Regulation 1576/89 (OJ 1989 L160/1).

(ii) Tairtinger SA v Allbev Ltd (1993] FSR 641), the Elderflower Champagne case, in which the Court of Appeal decided that the purpose of EEC Regulation 823/87, as deduced from its recitals, was to protect the legitimate interests of

Mr Platts-Mills had cited Consorzio del Prosciutto di Parma v Asda Food Stores Ltd (The Times December 4, 1998) which con-cerned an alleged breach of EEC Regulation 2081/92 and an Italian law of 1990, designed to enable the relevant Italian ministry to make use of a consortium of producers to control use of protected designa-

The Court of Appeal did not have to consider whether that regulation was intended to bestow a civil right of action, but had concluded the contrary.

As to the relevant regulations.

defendants where the plaintiff was

A large lump of lead fell off a pal-let while being unloaded from a loremployed as a labourer.

Mr Howe had relied upon the recitals in two each of Regulations Nos 1035/72 and 2200/96, but all were In re the Estale of Marjorie Langdoo Cameron (Deccased) very different from the recitals in Before Mr Justice Lindsay the Whisky and Elderflower Cham pagne cases and none, whether tak-Hudgment March 241 Where a testatrix made a lifetime gift to her son's child it gift could fairly be seen as intended for the substantial benefit of the son, that en alone or in conjunction with othing that one of the legislative ob-jects behind them was the creation of rights enforceable by customers or individual traders. Their objective was not to protect any particular goodwill, but to ensure that grapes reached the market in good condition and that customers were told what they were getting; a conclusion rein forced by analysis of the rest of their provisions. Mr Howe had pointed out that quality standards could be en-forced in the UK by the Horticultural Marketing Inspectorate of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Foods but that missed the

The inspectorate's remit, and doubtless that of equivalent other bodies abroad, was not to advance ate and police suitable customer protection measures. So although Muñoz had acted correctly in complaining about the mis-marking of its products and in asking the inspectorate to intervene, the inspectorate's failure to act could not justify the creadon of any new right enforceable by Munnz In the result, Muñoz's action failed: but since Frumar had lost on every single factual issue fought, his Lordship would order Frumar to pay to Mu$oz 25 per cent of its costs of the action. Solicitors: Hewitson Becke & Shaw, Cambridge, Cheyney Gould-

MR JUSTICE LINDSAY said that in June 1974 Mrs Cameron executed a will in which the whole of her net estate was divided into four equal shares, one each absolutely for her four sons Donald, Iain, Alistair and Hamish.

and fourth defendants.

gift partially revoked the son's share in the testatrix's estate. The lifetime gift to the child, made on the testarrix's behalf pursuant to an enduring power of attorney, was a valid exercise of that power. Mr Justice Lindsay so held in the Chancery Division when determining questions raised by the plaintiff, Peter David Phillips, executor of the estate of Marjorie Lang-don Cameron and the first defendant Donald Cameron, Alistair Cameron, Hamish Cameron and tain Hugh Craig Cam-eron were the second to fourth de-

Attorney Act 1965 provides:

during power ... [may] act under the power so as to benefit himself or other persons other than the donor to the following extent _ (a) he may so act ... if the donor might be expected to provide for his or that person's needs ... and (b) be may do whatever the donor might be expected to do to meet those needs.

Miss Teresa Peacocke for the plaintiff; Miss Nicole Sandells for the first defendant; Mrs Elspeth

Talbot Rice for the second, third ndants respectively.

Section 3 of the Enduring Power

"(4) ... an attorney under an en-

In 1979 Mrs Cameron was diagnosed as having a condition which caused a progressive deterioration in her mental capacity. She executed an enduring power of anomey, under which Alistair, Hamish and lain were jointly appointed to be her attorneys with general authority to act on her behalf in relation to I her property and affairs. In January 1991 an educational trust was established by the attorneys for the benefit of Donald's son

Jamie. It was the intention of the attorneys that that provision would be taken into account against Donald's share in his mothers estate. After Mrs Cameron's death in 1992, Donald contended that a lifetime gift made without his consent or knowledge for Jamie could not be taken into account when calculating his share of the residue. The ary estate was adeemed [partially revoked] by the provisions for Jamie's education. His Lordship said that the case raised the following points: I Were the lifetime gifts made in 1991 by the anorneys made in the valid exercise of the enduring power of anorney granted to them? Miss Sandells argued that in the circumstances Mrs Cameron was not expected to provide for Jamie's education and that it was not a need of either Donald or Jamie. In his Lordship's judgment, Jamie's education was a need with-in section 3(4) (a) and (b). As Mrs Talbot Rice submitted, education for a child was so fundamental that it was provided by the state. In the circumstances, the attorneys reasonably concluded that Mrs

Cameron might have been expected to make provision for Jamie's ed-Moreover, the provision which the attorneys made on her behalf were of a kind which she might have been expected to make both to confer some benefit on Donald and to meet the need to provide an education for Jamie. 2 Was the legacy to Donald in Mrs Cameron's will adeemed by that provision made for his sons educa-

If both a gift by will to a donee and a later lifetime gift by the testa-tor to die same donee were pure bounty then, in the absence of special circumstances, the latter gift would not be taken to be a substitute (adeem) for the former and the donee would thus be able to take both. An example of a special consideration to deny the gift the character of pure bounty was where the

Despite the long use of the term "portion" in law, the word was not a term of art. It seemed that it was something given by the parent to establish the child in life or make provision for him. Where the basic ingredients of a gift was a portion.

possible portion were present, the question of whether or not a gift was in fact a portion depended on the donor's intention. Miss Sandells argued that for a gift to be a portion the donor must be father of the donee or in loco parentis to the donce and that a was proved that she had undertaken the office. There was authority for that view in Exparte Pyc ((1811) 18 Ves & Jun 140) where Lard Eldon spoke of a person in loco parentis being in the situation of the person described as the lawful father of the

However, in his Lordship's judg-

Women's Property Acts, the better view now was that it sufficed for a gift to be capable of being a portion that it was made by either parent for the benefit of the child.

Lifetime gift reduces share

If a portion was a gift intended to set up a child in life it might not he unreasonable in many circumstances to suppose that the parent would have had no intendon to do that twice, thus there was a rebuttable presumption that the donor did not intend to give two portions to the same donce and that where he had made two gifts, both having the characteristics of a portion. then the latter would be presumed

10 adeem the former. Citing Ravenscroft v Jones ((1864) 32 Beav 669) Miss Sandells submitted that it was fundamental to the operation of the rule against double portions that the two gifts must be in favour of the same

His Lordship said that the au-thorities made clear that both adempoon and the issue of whether a gift was a portion depended upon the donor's intent.

Accordingly, so long as both gifts were capable of being porons intended substandally to benefit the same person, there was no reason why they should not be regarded as such and why ademption should not occur by reason of the rule against double portions. That was possible even where the provisions of the two portions differed even to the extent of the recipients being different. According-, where both gifts were potentia ly portions, a legacy to A might in some circumstances adeem by an inter vivos gift the recipient of

At least, that could be so where the difference between A and B in relation to the donor was merely a child and a child of that child and document was split between differmother, such as Mrs Cameron, was not to be taken to be in loco parentis to her children unless it cial bargain it was intended to where, in the circumstances, a gift to the grandchild could fairly be seen as intended for the substan-tial benefit of the child.

There was nothing exceptional in the law recognising that a dispo-sidon could be for a person's beneeven though it did not come to his hands. Thus in the context of statutory or express powers of advancement.

an exercise of the power could be re-garded as for the benefit of the object of the power where his credi-tors were thereby paid off. It was no bar to an exercise of the power that the primary object neither re-quested nor consented to it. uested nor consented to it. Miss Sandells argued that taking such a view in relation to ademption represented an exten-sion of the rule against double portions. There was no reported case in which a lifetime gift to A's child have adeemed a gift to A in the will of A's parent. His Lordship agreed with that proposition, nevertheless the rule against double portions was entirely judge-made and it was thus capaof being reformed in the course of decided cases to coincide with good sense and the ordinary transactions of mankind as they were his education has been held to from time to time seen to be. In the instant case the gift in the will to Donald was a substantial amount and constituted a portion for Donald. As to the inter-lifetime provision, a payment made for Jamie's education would pro tanto discharge Donald's moral or legal obligation to maintain Jamie and see to his education. Accordingly both gifts were portions in favour of Donald and the rule against double portions thus applied.

Solicitors: Mills & Reeve, Norwich: Bell & Howe, Witham: Rad-

Mismatch potential

Summit Financial Group Ltd v Slaoghter & May (a Firm) If the drafting of the two parts of a ent departments of a legal firm, there was a potendal for a mismatch between the two; to avoid which it was essential for someone with sufficiently general legal experience to have overall responsibility for reviewing the document as a whole, with a view to seeing that it worked and achieved the commer-

Mr Justice Rimer so held in the Chancery Division on March 12, the plainoff in failing to advise it of the true effect of an agreement executed on July 17. (987 between it and ATC Property Ltd. (ii) rejecting (a) a claim by the defendant that the plaintiff should have sought rectification of that agreement. (b) a plea of contributory neeligence and (c) a defence under the Limitation Act 1980. (iii) finding that the strong probabilities were, that had the defendant, as the plaintiff's solicitors, not failed in its duty to raise a particular and crucial drafting point with ATC, prior to execution of that agreement, ATC would have agreed to amend it, the plaintiff's Devizes Reclamation Compamy Ltd v Chalk Before Sir Stephen Brown, President and Lord Justice Swinton-Tho-" Judgment February 24] No liability arose where an experienced labourer, acting on his own mitiative, injured his back in per> priately have been given. The Court of Appeal so stated allowing an appeal by the defendant. Devizes Reclamation Company forming a one-off task requiring the use of common sense and for which no instructions could appro-ble for damages for personal injury to the plaintiff. Philip Michael Chalk, and attributing 40 per cent contributory negligence to Mr The court held that the judge had erred in law in concluding that the defendant was in breach of its common law duty to provide a safe system of work while failing to make any finding on what guidance should have been given and how that would have prevented the Mr Simon Freeland for Devizes

Reclamation: Mr Guy Opperman LORD JUSTICE SWINTON-

ry. It was necessary to move the lead so, on his own initiative the plaintiff bent down to slew it round and felt a sudden sharp pain in his In his statement of claim the

No liability over common-sense task plaintiff had alleged that the defendants had failed properly or at all to train him how to move heavy The judge below had found that the plaintiff had been given no instructions on how heavy objects should be moved and on that basis the defendants were in breach of offed what instructions should have been given, nor had the plain-

On the facts it was impossible to find negligence without ascertaining what the instructions should have been and it was difficult to see what possible instruction would have been relevant in a one-off situation where the plaintiff was doing something on his own initiative and when he should have been using his common sense.

tiff been able to suggest any.
It was common ground that this was not a lifting case; nor was it one that involved a system of work.

Accordingly the appeal would Sir Stephen Brown delivered a executors then issued an originat-

The making of a 'broadloid' ust as Posh Spice was about to deliver her son, little Brooklyn. I was involved in a gynaecological challenge of my own -helping to give birth to a Turk-ish daily morning newspaper, The Star.

Its delivery, too, was not without problems, but by 9am the following day a "sell-out" was triumphantly reported good news, of course, but it also meant that we should have printed more than the 600,000 copies that rolled off the presses at seven print

The TV-supported promotion - a free box of Pringles (worth £1.35) for every reader helped, although the switchboard lit up with calls from We've got angry readers who claimed that rea front tailers were refusing to part with their crisps after page. they had paid their 130,000 lire (about Good job I 25p) for their newspaper. fixed that The Star — the bomb'

Turkishlanguage paper with an Eng-lish name published in Istanbul

- was designed as a "broad-sheet tabloid", with all the journalistic aggression of The Sun and The Mirror touched by humour, a distinctive and noisy political view of life and expansive use of great photos. lis daily rivals — Millipet, Hurriyet and Sabah — all broadsheets and each selling just over 200,000 - are weighted down with pages of economic news and "deep news", as it translates for us Brits.

The idea was to break away and create a new market to lure tabloid-type readers, who like a constant, appetising blend of the light and dark, serious and humorous, throughout their newspaper rather than a "signposting" of designated areas that readers might visit and others that they

Former Sun Editor Stuart Higgins helped to launch a new Turkish paper designed to combine the qualities of a broadsheet and tabloid might ignore. I have tried to bring my Sun experience to the process, explaining how important it is that this new daily embrace its readers, luring them with a cocktail of great stories, inspirational writing, irresistible promotions and the best soccer coverage in town. (Given that only three of the editorial staff speak English. I am sure that my enthusiasm lost a little in the translation.) I ventured on with more ideas for attracting readers - sening up ways for them to participate via letters ages, e-mail addresses and fax lines to gauge reaction and provide partisan opinion on key issues. I slipped into stormy waters as I tried to explain to colleagues the principles behind the You The Jury poll, in which readers vote "yes" or "no" on a particu-To illustrate the concept, I used a dummy page of The Star containing a photo of a near-naked lapdancer sliding pro-vocatively down a pole. I then suggested getting an outspoken col-umnist to declare: "This is disgusting and outrageous and should be banned." Then readers would be invited to vote on the issue: "Shall we ban lap dancing in Turkey?" One voice — in English — said: "I have a better idea. The question will be 'Shall we declare war on Greece?'". The Star's pro-prietor. Cem Uzan, was joking, but he had the right idea about how to catch readers' attention. sessed with poliocs. But judging by the low circulations, the nation's 64 million population does not share their view. Turkey has 25 political parties with only subtle differences in their policies. The obsession is reflected in each newspaper. with up to eight columnists

ORADAYDI

PKKya 80 fize

The dramatic first from page of The Star, the new Turkesh language, broadloid, daily, and, eight, the opposition minutiae of the actions of the Prime Minister, Bulent Ecevit, and the Ankara Government. Elections are due to be held on

The country is gripped by its own battles against the PKK (Kurdistan Workers' Party), which is fighting for an inde-car bombs placed indiscriminately in shopping centres and vowing revenge for the incar-ceration of its leader, Abdullah Ocalan, who was brought back from Kenya to Turkey to face trial for the deaths of some 30,000 people during the

Merhaba

Kurdish insurgency.
On the eve of publication we sifted through the various Blue Peter splashes — ones we made earlier that would at least allow The Star to hit its 6.30pm printing deadline but all were discarded when a car bomb exploded at lunchtime in the Carousel shopping

Fatih Cekirge, was ecstatic in the spontaneous way that only a newspaperman can be at such outrages. "We've got a front page," he announced. "Good job I fixed that bomb!" he added with a big smile, una-ware that a man had died but absorbed with the all-consuming passion and decision-making demands that a big story creates in a newsroom, especially on a newspaper's first day of publication. His sense of relief at a breaking story was shared with the staff, who suddenly realised that they were in business and had to compared the front pages the following day and, predicta-bly, concluded that The Star's was by far the best because of the way the car bomb photo was used. The photographer. Kemal Onder, a veteran of 30 years, had quit another job to join The Star that morning and had been passing just as the bomb exploded. That was another cause for celebration.

"It's a lucky day," said Fatih.
The Turkish newspapers are, by British standards, usually a paintbox of bright colours, which makes them difficult to read and sometimes which is the dominant story on the page. But they started using colour years before British newspapers and are often refreshingly unrestrained in their use of it, especially on the sports pages.

They were also swift to recornise the value of linking up with or establishing a partnership with their own television station. In the case of The Star it is Star TV, a perfect ally for cross-promotion and joint use of resources. It is also the growth of television that is blamed for keeping down newspaper circulations.

Price of KO Cleese failure

THREE ad agencies are lick-ing their wounds after losing high-profile clients. Supermar-ket giant Saintsbury's has pun-ished Abbott Mead Vickers BBDO for the failure of the John Cleese TV commercials by appointing M&C Saatchi to work on a new £25 million summer campaign. Marketing Week says AMV could lose another key account, Vol-vo. if the proposed takeover by Ford goes ahead. Bates Donland has frozen directors bonuses worth some £5 million after losing business from Heinz, Texaco and Compaçand Campaign reports that Banks Hoggins O'Shea/FCB has axed 12 staff after losing the £9 million Kimberley-Clark account.

BEING business editor at The Independent and Independent on Sunday is a shortterm business. PR Week reports that Andrew Cornelius, who filled the role on the daily title, is leaving after eight months to return to PR agency Ciogate Dewe Rogerson, while the Sunday paper's Patrick Weever has left after holding the job for less than a

A COMMERCIAL for Emap Metro's new magazine Heat, which showed its readers engulfed in flames, has been banned by the Independent Television Commission. Media Week reports that the ads. devised by Bartle Bogle Hegarty, attracted 318 complaints, including 53 from people who had been involved in fires and did not see the joke.

CHANGING FACES: Marto CHANGING FACES: Martin Runnacles quits as Rover's top marketing man on eve of launch of the crucial 75 model (Marketing). Matt Tee, head of PR at Guy's and St. Thomas's Hospital Trust, to be head of news at Dept of Trade and Industry (PR Week). Kirste Milne, political editor of Sunday Head in Glass. of Sunday Herald in Glasman: Jackie Newcombe steps down as publishing director of IPC's home interest titles (Press Gazette).

GETTING THE BUSI-NESS: Le Fevre Communica-tions wins PR contract for Lloyds TSB credit cards; Sega Europe appoints Bell Pottinger to run corporate press and PR (PR Week). TBWA GGT Simons Palmer wins account for Dr Martens first major advertising campaign (Campaign).

MICHAEL LEAPMAN

THE

An online Feng Shui consultation - FREE

To help you make the most of your home

SEE THE TIMES ON MONDAY FOR DETAILS

TOKEN COLLECTION REQUIRED

CHANGING TIMES

Anyone for the BBC's tennis?

HORRORS! Is the BBC about to lose its exclusive hold over Wimbledon? The television rights expire after this summer's tournament, and tension is

After Easter the All England Lawn Tennis Club will invite potential broadcasters - Sky Television, ITV, Channel 4 - to pitch for a new contract that could run lor up to five years. A nervous BBC has just pledged to extend broadcasts this summer and to provide cameras to an

Two weeks ago its new free digital channel, BBC Choice, gave a demonstración to club executives about how it will screen extra matches and freshen up coverage alongside BBCl and BBC2. Its chiefs are acutely aware that Channel 4 "snatched" Test cricket because the England and Wales Cricket

Board fancied its innovative approach. The Government last year altered the protected "listed events" sporting rules. The Wimble-don finals, an "A" category listed event, could switch to a pay channel, (but not pay-per-view) provided that extended access was also given to a free-to-air service.

The semi-finals are on a less important "B list". The Government seems sanguine about some kind of mixed Sky and BBC deal if it meant the extra broadcasting money was dispensed among the grass roots - the Lawn Tennis Association gained £32 million last year from Wimbledon.

The BBC now screens only 150 hours out of 500 hours covered, but it acts as host broadcaster, sending on footage worldwide. "Although the BBC does a very good job, we can't stand still," says Ian Edwards, the All England TV marketing director.

Quite a few dispassionate observers have told me in the past few weeks that the BBC's hold over Wimbledon is crumbling. A big headache for the new Director-General.

CHARLIE WHELAN. Gordon Brown's fallen spin-doctor, and Tony Banks, the Minister for Sport, have had a bit of a tiff. Banks is exceedingly displeased with last Sunday's front-page story in The Observer - where Whelan has a column - about a scheme to give honours to the overlooked 1966 World Cup football winners Nobby Stiles, Gordon Banks and Martin Peters.

It appears that this was a discreet but behind-the-scenes hobby-horse of Tony Banks. Patrick Wintour, The Ob-server's political editor, was able to share it with the world, allowing the tabloids, led by The Sun, to take up the campaign enthusiastically. How did it turn up in The Observer? Well. Whelan and Wintour went to lunch.

The publicity is seen as a lailsale way to rile 10 Downing Street, where these honours decisions - in new Labour's way — are taken. Perhaps Banks should relax. The Sun can hardly be spurned. Meanwhile, Whelan's media career expands as he joins Radio 5

Live's Sunday Service this weekend. It pitches him bang opposite rival fallen spin-doctor Derek Draper on MUCH discussion about how the Briosh Press Awards can redeem itself from the gutter. Even The Guardian's Hilton Hotel suite for party revels became so noisy that the manager asked them to call it a night at 3.30am. One answer: it always used to be at lunchome, with a finite end. as the next day's deadlines beckoned. At the Press Gazette, the event's organiser, there's been heartsearching but Philippa Kennedy, its new Editor, is understanding: "Nadonal newspaper journalists are thoroughbreds, at the top of their profession and highly compediive."

Kennedy says she has been flooded with apologies. Piers Morgan, the Edi-tor of The Mirror, "sent me the biggest bunch of flowers I've ever had".

My view? Apart from memorial services and awards ceremonies, national journalists rarely gather, outside of their papers, en masse. Unlike broadcasting, there are no regular industry meeting places where ethics or trends are discussed. So throw 700 iournalists, divided into tribal camps. into a hotel room with unlimited amounts of booze and you end up with drunken brawls.

SPOTTED: that svelte public relations doyenne. Julia Hobsbawm, back at work three days a week, showing her baby snaps to Amanda Platell at The Observer's packed-out spring party this week.

"Oh. you're so lucky," says Platell.

who remains completely unfazed by the furore surrounding her new appointment as William Hague's spin-doctor.

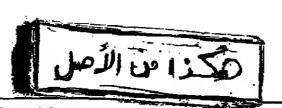

"It's my knowledge of how national newspapers really work that counts," she says.

■ 1 RECENTLY saw Geoffrey Robinson, the fallen Treasury Minister, acting as a commentator for Sky News on the Budget. I hear he's also expending surplus energy running the commer-cial side of his publishing empire, and the New Statesman is assuredly not up for sale. He also has a tendency to burst in with good ideas to the Editor. Peter Wilby — on Wednesdays, just as the magazine goes to press.

CHANNEL 4 rushed to welcome the performance review of its programming by the Independent Television Commission (ITC) this week. But privately I'm told that the ITC is "disappointed" at the slowness of Chan-nel 4's Chief Executive, Michael Jackson, in bringing change. Observers believe he was thrown by Channel 4's lack of an in-house production base to put flesh on his ideas.

SIRJOHN BIRT is planning several high-profile events to remind people how he saved the BBC. One likely forum is a keynote speech to this autumn's Royal Television Society Convention in Cambridge. But surely it's an opportunity for a broadcaster to screen a big interview: Channel 4 ought to jump at it. By the way, Alan Yentob's call for quality BBC programming has gone down very well in political quarters. It's regarded as long overdue.

maggiebrown_media@btinternet.com

Kosovo, this is London calling

Their fellow countrymen may be locked in conflict, but a Serb and an Albanian are working closely at the BBC's Bush House to bring a vital news service to the war zone. Carol Midgley reports

We try to convey that there on both sides

f the hundreds of jour-nalists covering the con-flict in Yugoslavia, few could claim as avid an audience as Julia Goga-Cooke and

While neither can boast the notability of Kate Adie or John Simpson in this war, both are performing what could currently be described as two of the most anonymous but crucial jobs in the BBC.

While the conflict escalates, Goga-Cooke, an Albanian, and Zoric, a Serb. are working side by side in the bowels of Bush House, the London headquarters of the World

In adjacent studios they and their staff now make eight broadcasts a day in Albanian and Serbian, providing for their audiences that most precious commodity of wartime

- information With local media restricted by the Serb authorities (the indeis suffering pendent Belgrade radio station B-92 has been closed down), the World Service is increasingly proving to be the only reliable source of information for all those people caught in the war zone who do not have access to satellite

Unlike the majority of journalists working on the story, however, Goga-Cooke, 42, and Zoric, 53, have a personal stake in the events. Many of their team of World Service journalists have friends and family scattered throughout the cri-

A few days ago, one of the Albanian broadcasters at Bush House found himself having to announce the reported killing and obituary of Fehmi Agani, a Kosovo politician and negotiation whom he had known personally.

the team offered to get someone else to take over his broadcast but he insisted on going ahead with it. "I have cried my tears in private," he told Goga-Cooke, the Editor of the Albanian section. "I want to carry on and do my job." (Reports now indicate that Agani is. in fact, alive.)

The most difficult part of covering the war is worrying about the safety of journalists over there and the fact that some of our team have all their family in the middle of it." Goga-Cooke says. "Managing the emotions and the worry has been our biggest problem. But you just gel on with it."

Since the conflict in Kosovo began, the different sections at the World Service have worked as a team as their output has doubled. Information obtained separately by the Serbian, Albanian, Bulgarian and Macedonian journalists is pooled every day at the morning editorial meeting.

"We have very strong links." Goga-Cooke says. "I work closely with Aleksej. It is very important that we exchange information. We are very close, co-operating round the clock. We were the first to get news of 170 refugees who arrived over the Albanian border on Saturday. Zoric, 53, the Editor of the Serbian section, says: "The tone of our reports may be slightly different - we each put the accent on the interests of our audience but we are sharing information.

We are trying to convey that there is real suffering on both sides. If Albanian babies are crying because they are cold, Serbian babies may be crying because they are woken by the bomb blasts or the sirens. We know that some kids in Belgrade start vomiting when they hear the sirens." Zoric moved with his American wife from Yugoslavia to London to work for the BBC in 1991, when the crisis began. He has a 27-year-old daughter who is a journalist in the United States and a son, 23, who lives in London. But his father, brother and sister-in-law are still living in Belgrade and going through the daily ritual of fleeing to shelters whenever the sirens are oga-Cooke 23-year-old son from her first marriage who lives in Albania and a daughter, 21, who is a student in Britain. A former English teacher and United Nations programme development worker, she moved to London m 1993 to work for the BBC's Albanian-language service. She has remarried and also has a 16-month-old daughter. With such a sudden increase in their workload to contend with,

Albanian children weep as they wait outside the registration centre in Skopje after being expelled from Kosovo. Below: Aleksej Zoric and Julia Goga-Cooke many of the team have found themselves literally working day and night. The broadcasts they produce can be picked up on short wave, on FM and through some local radio stations, such as Radio Prilep in Macedonia, that have agreed to carry the World Service broadcasts. Many people also obtain information about the war from the World Service website. The most difficult thing has been keeping our emotions out of it." Zoric says.

You have shared loyalty to your family, your country and your profession, but you want to present the facts accurately and impartially." Most people in Yugoslavia, he says, have no real idea of what is happening in their country. You know for a fact that they know nothing about what is going on in Kosovo, or that thousands of Albanians are pouring over the border. They do not know about the actions of the Yugoslav Army. So we try to get as much actuality as we can in our reports. You cannot be completely unemotional or you sound artificial you want to be balanced but you don't want to be cold."

There is also the danger of accepting spin as fact. The smallest mistake in a report can mean the difference between hope and utter despair for anxious listeners.

Because of who our audience is and the sensitivity of the situation. we have to be so, so careful that we don't present claims as fact," Zoric

The BBC has the reputation of being a beacon of truth in war situations. So if you make a mistake. you destroy the credibility that has been built up over generations."

Breaks for the Border sounded.

Granada's tiny neighbour still has big plans, says Raymond Snoddy

B order Television has been called "Granada's pet lamb", it has also been pointed out that there are more sheep than people in the television region that covers areas on the border between England and Scotland, with the Isle of Man tacked on. And in an age of communication giants, Border appears to be an anachronism as the smallest independent ITV company apart from tiny Channel TV.

Border has never been able to look in a mirror," says Jim Graham. "We have never understood that we are small. We have always had a bigger voice." Graham was a rugby league reporter for Border when it first went on air 38 years ago, before becoming managing director in 1982 after a spell at the BBC. Even from the beginning, Border was seen as a risky anomaly. After the Granada, Scottish and Tyne Tees ITV licences had been awarded, there was a gap along the border. Sir John Burgess, the chairman of the local Cumbrian Newspapers group, put together a consortium to bid for a licence.

Graham, now o5, believes that the Carlisle-based station makes a lot of social sense. "If you carry a story about a lifeboat in trouble in Berwick they understand that in the Isle of Man and in Dumfries. They are a collection of people with similar interests and they all watch each other's stories." he says. But Border's big neighbour, Granada. is on the move again. It already controlled everything to the south of Border. Now he having the Mirror Group's

Then Granada would control everything from John O'Groats to the Midlands - except for the 680,000 Border viewers. Granada's tanks could cross into Border any time they wanted.
"After the Scottish deal, I took a bottle of border mail to Charles Allen [Granada's Scottish chief executive] and said 'welcome back to Scotland'." says Graham, who has developed a good working relationship with his larger neighbour. He points out that not only does Granada sell Border's advertising time, it also transmits its programmes. The two companies made an unsuccessful bid for the Tyne Tees licence in 1991. In fact, the Independent Television Commission could have wiped Border off the map before the last licence round, by redrawing the geogra-phy of British broadcasting. It did not do so because Border is a quoted public company that also happens to get 60 per cent of the television audience in its region - vying with Ulster for the highest ratings in ITV. There would also have been a huge row if Border had either disappeared as a franchise or lost its licence. Local viewers included Lord Whitelaw and Sir David Steel. Local Cumbrian lad Melvyn Bragg, now Lord Bragg, was chairman at the time. Devolution could also have been the death knell of Border. After all, why not just give the Scottish bits to Scottish Television and the English bits to Granada? In fact. Border has not only defended its territorial integrity but believes that devolution will increase its importance. This month it will intro-

Border TV's Jim Graham: "We have never understood that we are small" about devolution will remain common to both English and Scottish sectors. Border feels increasingly shut out of national programme-making, which is dominated by the big battalions such as Granada, Carlton and United. But religious programming has been developed as a speciality, and Blessed Are They, a television version of the Beatitudes, even won a medal at the International Film and Television Festival of New York. Graham talks in a rather old-fashioned but unselfconscious way of making programmes that "touch men's hearts and move men's minds". Paul Corely, the chief executive, has brought a wider perspective to bear. rock and docusoaps. But the company's biggest breakthrough has been its move into commercial radio, even winning a radio licence in Granada's Manchester heartland.

Tiny Border is now in the top ten of radio companies, with licences in Cumbria, the North East and the East Midlands as well as the North West. It also plans to seek a London digital licence in alliance with Chrysalis, the music and media group.

But can a broadcaster with a turnover of £13.8 million and pre-tax profits of £1.2 million last year manage to keep its independence? "I think it can survive," says Lord Bragg, "It serves its of anim atin and the low

Stott the difference?

After last week's attack by Richard Stott, The Mirror Editor Piers Morgan defends his paper or six years Richard Stott has simmered with rage showered with rage about his sacking from the editorship of The Mirror. Only now has he chosen to make his vicious opinions public. He had absolutely nothing nice to say about anyone or anything except himself. But since he wishes to get personal, forgive me if return the favour. During his second and last term of editorship of The Mirror from March 1991 to No-vember 1992, the sale of the paper collapsed by 256,000 copies, or 8.6 per cent.

Stott is mystified by David Montgomery's decision to fire him, insisting: "The paper was going well." Well? I wouldn't like to see how it sold during a bad period. Is it possible. Richard, that your special brand of supposedly crusading, campaigning, we-love-all-things-Old-Labour journalism was one of the biggest turn-offs to a newspaper readership? I understand his resentment at being fired. It's not happened to me yet, but I'm sure it's unpleasant. I do, though, find his remarks about Mirror managers filling their boots with cash a bit rich coming from a man who has had such large sums in pay-offs. Or did it all go to the miners? His tirade against Montgomery is predictable. I worked with David for three vears and I liked him. He helped us to achieve success on The Mirror by giving me the cash I needed. I didn't agree with some of the things he did, some of the people he fired or some of his allowed his proprietor to turn the paper into a mouthpiece for his own image. Who can forget Stott's touching front page tribute to the "Man who saved the Mirror" when the fat old Czech crook died.

Stott has always wanted his old job back. Kelvin MacKenzie, then deputy chief executive of Mirror Group, politely declined a suggestion to make him editor again in my place. I've no idea why, except that a funny thing has happened to The Mirror recently. We sold more papers in 1998 than in 1997, for instance. Stott is clearly baffled as to how this could have happened. After all, we have no good writers, we have no political nous and our relationship with the Labour leadership is based on "tantrums".

Montgomery: how he ruined The Mirror

Hmmm, I'm sure he's right but does he actually read Anton Antonowicz, who was Foreign Writer of the Year in 1998? Or Brian Reade, whose outstanding work on the Omagh story moved the Press Gazette judging panel to tears? Or Des Kelly, our sports editor last week voted Sports Columnist of the Year. Or Charlie Catchpole, our brilliantly populist TV critic. Or

bag. I could go on, and I will.

Gill Swain, Victor Lewis-

Sue Carroll, whose empathy with real Mirror readers is reflected by her massive mail-believe he helped to rescue The Mirror from the pits of Maxwell — when one Richard Stott talents of James Whitaker. Matthew Wright, our Sorted investigators and the best feature writers and news reporters I've ever worked with.

As for our politics, we don't suck up to Labour so much any more. Stott made an art form out of it.

I know he briefs everyone from Alastair Campbell to Roy Greenslade on my political shortcomings. And I don't care. I have no problem with Labour. I enjoy regular harmonious meetings with Tony Blair and Gordon Brown, and even Campbell seems to be thawing a bit despite his allegiance to Stott.

about politics. I do believe in Tony Blair and did vote Labour at the last election. I also believe The Mirror should be a critical friend and not a PR extension of No 10. Our readers know that our heart and soul still lies behind Labour and always will. Stott ends his article by asking who can make The Mirror sing again. Readers of The Times will have been left in no doubt that there is only one candidate - Richard Stott. But the truth is that The Mirror IS singing again, only to a different song-sheet. Life has moved on, Richard. We are not the bitter, cynical, ranting Labour PR sheet that you put out most days. Nor do ledit the paper from any bar l can find at lunchtime. Nor is The Mirror losing readers any more, the way you lost them.

• According to ABC circulation figures The Mirror sold 0.7 per

The Spice Girls' former Svengali is back with a new group — and they can even act. Chris Ayres reports on the band and their upcoming TV show is in fact a new concept in youth

S Club 7

the pop music supremo has been rather quiet. All that will change next Thursday when Fuller launches his latest act, described as a "21st-century version of The Monkees", complete with their own 13-episode BBCl television series.

The seven-piece act, with the unlikely name of S Club 7, is one of the most ambitious cross-media entertainment projects launched so far in Britain. They even have a mawkish slogan to match that of Girl Power:

"Everybody is a Somebody."
Fuller calls S Club 7 "a new concept in youth culture". What he really means, however, is a new concept in youth marketing: the aim of S Club 7 is 10 capitalise simultaneously on several different markets, taking in television, music.

the Internet and fashion. Those close to Fuller say that he has spent the past two years searching for a collection of mul-ti-talented young people to launch a modern-day version of The Monkees, the American pop group launched in the Sixties with their own TV show. Fuller is said to have become frustrated with the Spice Girls lack of allround ability, in particular their limited acting skills (documented in horrific detail in Spiceworld — The Movie).

in contrast, the members of S Club 7 all have proven acting ability. Given their ages — between 16 and 22 years old they also have impressive CVs. Tina Barrett, for example, is a former Top of the Pops dancer, while Jon Lee played the part of Josh in EostEnders for two years.

After finding the right people to form S Club 7. 37-year-old Fuller teamed up with the BBC and Initial TV — the production company partly owned by Guardian Media Group that makes The Pepsi Chort and The Brit Awards - to help to launch the project. Christopher Filkington, an executive producer at Initial, says: "I was interested to see if S Club 7 could play out a comedy script. I took it for granted that they could perform their music. It soon became clear that they were head and shoulders above the competition. Needless to say, they were all also drop-dead

The TV series starring the band, Miami 7, will go air at S.10pm - peak time for children's viewing. The story follows a naive young band that cannot get gigs in the UK. so their despairing manager sends them to entertain his guests.

It all sounds rather familiar, but Pilkington insists that it will be "a fantastic hit with our target audience". He has certainly taken no chances with the writing team: it includes Fuller's brother kim, whose previous writing credits include Spiceworld — The Movie, Red Dwarf and Spitting Image: and Jenji Cohan, who has written for Friends and The

The series will run for several weeks before the first S Club 7 single — expected to be titled Bring It On Bock — is released in early June. Interestingly, the song will be released on the Polydor label (a British subsidiary of Universal Music in the US) instead of through EMI, the Spice Girls' record company. One music industry source says an album of 12 or 13 songs will be released after two singles. The alburn will "cover a range of styles, underscored by an optimistic, uptempo, Jackson Five gang feel".

Fuller chose the music with Lucien Grainge, the managing director of Polydor.

Ajax Scott, the Editor of Music Week, the industry's main trade magazine in the UK, is one of the marketing few people to have heard the album. He describes it as "contemporary pop of the highest order".

"Without the other elements it would do well," he says, "With them, and backed by the well-oiled, hit-breaking machine that is Polydor, it looks next to impossible that it

Aiready Fuller is planning his S Club 7 me-dia blitz. It is understood that there are already plans for a film, an Internet membership club and, of course, plenty of sponsor-

It is not yet clear what plans S Club 7 have for entering the fashion world, but a range of branded dothing seems an obvious option. And if Fuller's career with the Spice Girls is anything to go by, he can expect to collect a fat royalty from S Club 7's activities for several years - before being fired by the band and collecting a multimillion-pound payoff. By then, of course, various members of S Club 7 could have left the band, become United Nations' special ambassadors, released successful solo singles or have become pregnant.

Well. that's showbusiness.

Tanned band: British pop outfit S Club 7 eke out an existence in a Florida hotel in the TV series Miami 7

reg Dyke. Chairman and Chief Executive of Pearson Television, is pushing ahead with his bid to become Director. General of the BBC-He has allowed his name to go forward to the next stage of the selection process that formally began last week.

Dyke, a multimillionaire as a result of a share scheme from his days as managing director of London Weekend Television, has been encouraged to go ahead with his bid by both Sir Christopher Bland, the BBC Chairman, and Downing Street. If there had been discouraging noises from either quarter he would not have allowed his name to go forward. forward.

The Conservatives have made it clear they will make a Dyke candidacy a political issue because he contributed an estimated £12,000 to pay for the private office of Tony Blair before the last election. Dyke, however, made it clear that he has oever made political contributions as a broadcaster and no payments will be made if he becomes Director-General.

If there is a row, Downing Street will point out that Sir Christopher had his term extended by Mr Blair even though he was chairman of the Conservative Bow Group when first appointed Chairman of the BBC.

If Dyke, who is also a non-executive director uf Manchester United, were to become D-G, it would mean halving his present salary. Pear-son's annual report published two days ago son's annual report published two days ago showed that Dyke had a total pay package of £768,000 last year. This included a one-off bonus of £275,000 in Pearson shares, which have to be held for three years but can be retained if he leaves Pearson.

The hopes of another aspirant for the BBC job, David Elstein. Chief Executive of Channel 5, seem to be fading. Elstein, the former director of programmes at Thames Television and Sky, did not submit a formal application by last Friday's deadline, although he has made it clear in the past that he wanted the job.

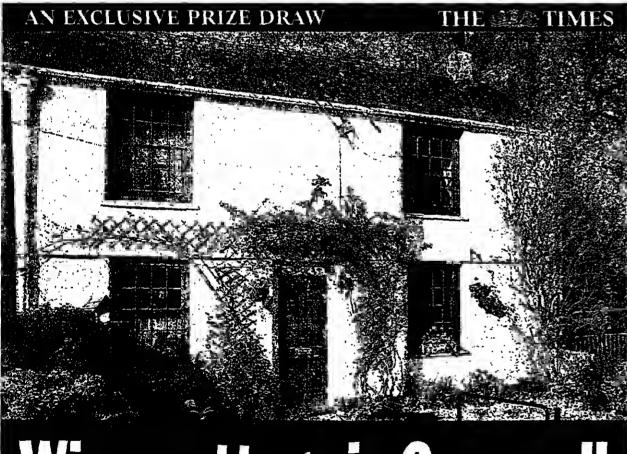

It is believed that Elstein has not yet been contacted by headhunters involved in the selection process. Backers have argued that the BBC desperately needs Elstein's knowledge of multichannel TV for an increasingly competitive age. Industry observers suggest that it might have been better tactics for the Channel 5 Chief Executive to submit a formal application rather than waiting for the phone to ring.

His chances will not have been helped by the Independent Television Commission criticising the "tackiness" of some of Channel 5s late night soft-porn shows and the lack of original drama apart from the soap Family Affairs. Ironically, Dyke is the Chairman of Channel 5. Other candidates for D-G are Mark Byford, Chief Executive of BBC World Service, Mathem Paramieter. Chief Executive of RPC Pro-

thew Bannister. Chief Executive of BBC Production. Tony Hall, Chief Executive of BBC

News, and Richard Eyre, ITV Chief Executive. RAYMOND SNODDY

Win a cottage in Cornwall

 Today The Times, in association with the Virgin One account, offers readers the chance to win a lovely cottage in the typical Cornish village of Perranwell Station. Smithy Cottage, with its two bedrooms and pretty garden, is the ideal holiday home. Close to Truro and an 18-hole golf course, our prize cottage will provide the lucky winner with the perfect place from which to watch the eclipse of the sun on August 11.

HOW TO ENTER Collect 12 Times tokens and two tokens from The Sunday Times and attach them to an entry form which appears again on Tuesday. Tokens will appear up to April 18 and a bonus token is published every Friday. see below. The winner will be chosen at random from all entries received by Friday, April 30, 1999. Normal Times Newspapers prize draw rules apply The terms and conditions will appear again tomorrow

● The One account offers a 94-hour, seven-day telephone banking service and, by brinsing together all your banking and borrowing, gives you the opportunity to save thousands of pounds in interest charges on your mortgage. Even if you are not lucky enough to win our fabulous cottage, you can still gain by finding out how much a Virgin One account could save you by making the most of all your money. li you want your wages to work harder, call the Virgin One account and find out how you could as your income to pay off your mortgage quicker and for less

CHANGING TIMES

ITV runs out of excuses

THE Independent Television Commission (ITC) was rather kind to ITV in its annual review of the performance of the commercial broadcasters this week. Unless there is a considerable improvement this year, the regulatory body should not make that mistake again.

The ITC, which specialises in exhortation rather than censure as long as the terms of licences have not been broken. gave ITV a generous eight out of ten for its output in 1998. ITV's determination to "refresh and revitalise its service in 1998" was praised and no one could complain about such a judgment.

But you don't have to burrow deeply into the text to find disturbing things about how a system that raises around £2.6 billion in annual revenue sets about producing a high-quality, diverse schedule. Year after year, the ITC notes, the apparent ITV belief that The South Bank Show. with its all-inclusive view of the arts from Wayne Sleep's 50th birthday to Will Self — is enough arts thank-you. Last year the ITC criticised ITV — not for the first time - for meeting its commitment on arts programming with undistinguished late-night arts entertain-ment shows. And this year? "Once again the schedule was padded out with cheap, late-night material, this time programmes of movie clips and pop videos. This is not acceptable," says the ITC. Indeed not. But when is the ITC going to do something about such a

How about education? Last year the ITC commented on a further narrowing of the educational agenda with excessive concentration on daytime leisure topics. This year the ITC found no improvement apart from better support material for programmes such as Chef School. It also noted that there had been only one response to its invitation to develop a wider range of science output — the series What Will They Think of Next.

How about health? Apart from a good six-part series on the perils of lat, the only regular health education came in the This Morning strands. Social action programming? "Disappointing." But perhaps the most worrying aspect of ITV's performance is current affairs. As the ITC rather kindly noted 1998 was a year of transition in ITV current affairs. What this meant was that Big Story was not recommissioned. 3-D had only a short run and World in Action came to an end to be replaced by a new magazine programme from Granada. Before it went World in Action left no stone unturned investigating bad hotels, the con-tents of dog food — and a documentary on the Nairobi bombing aftermath.

The ITC says, rather plaintively, that it wishes to see the proportion of interna-tional material higher in 1999. If ITV had not been able to reply on the We Can Work It Out series, which will not flagrant abuse of the system. be accepted under the current affairs classification this year, the average current affairs would have been I hour 25 minutes a week, the lowest on record. If you add up all of ITV's inadequacies and prevarications, it is a disgrace. After giving it the freedom to move News at Ten, the ITC, if it is to retain its credibility, has to insist on a more comprehensive performance from ITV.

THOSE who complained that the BBC was pulling the wool over the eyes of the public and MPs when parliamentary programmes were dropped from Radio 4 FM or moved were right all along. When Yesterday in Parlioment was dropped as a segment of the Today programme and dispatched to longwave, it was in the face of the disquiet from Betty Boothroyd, the Speaker of the House of Commons. The results are in. Accordng to the BBC's own figures, the weekly reach of Yesterday in Parliament has declined from 3.13 million in 1997 to 830,000 in 1998. Parliamentary coverage is also down by 20 per cent. Helpfully, the BBC notes that only 84 per cent of the population has access to longwave.

The loss of reach to Yesterday in Parliament is broadly in line with the BBC's assessment in 1997," the corporation says in its Review of Parliamentory Broadcasting. I can't remember the BBC making that assessment public at the time. The emphasis then was on expansion of parliamentary broadcasting because the programmes that fewer people would hear would last longer. The move of The Week in Westminster from Saturday morning to Thursday evenings has also had predictable, consequences. The reach is now 227,000 compared with 658,000 in its Saturday slot.

LAST year the "outdoors" advertising industry was one of the fastest-growing media in terms of ad expenditure, with a year-on-year growth of 7.8 per cent. This was beaten only by the huge growth of radio advertising and the 8.9 per cent growth of business magazines. Radio expenditure was up by 15.9 per cent between 1997 and 1998, according to Advertising Association figures. However, UK advertisers' spending on "outdoor" last year was greater than that on radio: E543 million, compared with radio's £438 million.

Projections by the Outdoor Advertising Association (OAA) show that outdoor ads will slip back to a growth of 0.7 per cent from 1998 to 1999; the total ad expenditure of the UK is expected to slip into recession this year, down by 0.2 per cent on 1998. All figures for the outdoor market include ads on buses, the Underground, railway sites, taxis and airport sites. Bus and Under-ground advertising in the UK is sold by TDI, which is expecting a 10 per cent growth this year. TDI is bidding for the European outdoor advertising company. Avenir. After its success at last year's Media Week awards. TDI is confident that its performance in Europe will put it in a strong position in the discussions.

All display advertising media will be affected by economic conditions over the next two years, according to the OAA.

YEAR ON YEAR OUT GROWTH EX	(PENDITURE	SING
	A SHARE	1999
OUTDOOR & TRANSPORT		0.7
TV	0.75	1.5
RADIO	2.55 X	6.9
NATIONAL NEWSPAPERS	75 B 31 E	-12
REGIONAL NEWSPAPERS	5.45.65	-1.8
CONSUMER MAGAZINES	CARLES AN	-0.5
BUSINESS & PROFESSIONAL MAGAZINES		-2.5
TOTAL	714	-0.2

All figures at current prices. 1999 data are projections

عكذا فاالاصل

In Kiev they fine a journalist $1m and cut off all the phones

Journalists are facing increasing curbs on press freedom in Russia and its breakaway states — but trying to overcome the system is dangerous. Michael Foley reports side Moscow's Central House of Journalists depicting a Soviet newsman wearing a military uniform, high boots and a cape. He has a camera slung round his neck and holds a notebook with pencil poised. It is dedicated to alt the journalists who owered the Great Patriooc War.

The figure looks ahead as the snow settles on his notebook, military cap and moustache. His role is to bring honour and glory to the motherland and the Communist Party. Today few journalists are certain of a wage, let alone a status. Even the restaurant at the Central House, formerly a meeting place for writers and journalists, has been contracted out. Few members can afford to eat in it now.

None of this gloom is enough to stop a celebrarion, though, and the Russian Union of Journalists recently organised a conference and a number of recepoons to celebrate its 80th anniversary. More than 200 delegates from journalists' unions throughout Russia and central Asia, Ukraine, Belarus and the Baltic countries attended. They came from Tajikistan, Turkmenistan and Uzbekistan, Armenia, Azerbaijan and Georgia. They included the associations that have sprung up to represent journalists who are working in the new and small independent media and who are fighting for press freedom. The leaders of the old unions are survivors. Some were members of the Communist Party; in its new in-The older carnation, the same party is calling for tighter journalists control of the media. are nostalgic for the time when they were cer-tain of their role and of yearn for the time a good income. Now they call for press free-dom and are linked to when they international organisations that were on the had status other side during the Cold War.

But while the leadership was celebrating the survival of its union, even if as a shadow of its former Soviet self — the memberhip is half what it was — there was little else to commend. Seven years after the dissolution of the Soviet Union, there is little press freedom.

From Kazakhstan to Kyrgyzstan and Tajikistan to Belarus and Ukraine, the story is a dismal one: tax laws are used to harass financially; there is a body of laws forbidding insults of those in high places: compulsory registration of the media is common. Many speakers related the appalling state of press freedom in their countries. And just here is a monument out- to show that elections, or what pass- read paper after paper at a seminar es for them, are bad for journalists, several who work with state-run news agencies in Kazakhstan re-ported that they were warned against writing stories critical of President Nursultan Nazarbayev in the campaign leading to the January 10 elections.

1000

In Moscow the Russian union held a ceremony one evening where its president. Vsevolod Bogdanov, pre-sented medals to the children of journalists who had died while reporting: a reminder that journalism is still a dangerous career in Russia.

Meanwhile, in Kiev, a journalist at a reception in a US diplomat's apartment says that he has been fined $1 million by the State. His newspaper is operating without telephones and has had to vacate its newsroom. The harass-has not been paid for six months. Thankfully, his wife has a job. He and other Ukrainian journalists have been invited so that a US visitor can be informed about press freedom. The Ukrainians seem amused at this interest in their media. I can't help wondering if they are thinking of the US media and the Clinton/Lewinsky coverage. Kiev is a wonderful old city. Its stucco, pastel-coloured buildings glow in the light reflected by the snow. The opera house is magnificent and the audience at the ballet cer fans. It is also the Wild West.

A driver taking a group to the airport was not stopped by the many militia along the road. "My car is a good big car. They think I might be mafia," he says. The driver, who looks about 16, produces police identification. If they stop the car he has no intention of handing over a customary bribe. He has masses of other 1Ds, including a card to access the Parliament.

The main school of journalism in Ukraine is the Institute of Journalism at the Kiev Taras Shevchenko University. It is housed in the former Communist Party School. The place is like no other university anywhere: there is no graffiti; the females wear skirts and the males wear ties: there are no books or piles of papers that occupy desks ty ody. Academics and journalists organised as part of an EU pro-gramme to aid journalists. Any questions were responded to with the comment that it would be dealt with later. Later never came.

Outside the insotute journalists take two or more jobs to survive, but the milioa were taking money. and flash foreign cars drove mafia through the city. With elections newsman has not been paid for six months

One

looming, human rights groups and journalists believe that press freedom is getting worse and that President Leonid Kuchma is moving closer to that ground occupied by President Aleksandr Lukashenka of neighbouring Belarus.

Journalists working in Minsk, the Belarus capital, fare worse than any in the former Soviet republics. President Lukashenka, a former collective farm manager, is largely shunned and ment of his paper means that he cannot gain entry into the Council of Europe, a body that will embrace Turkey, Croatia and Ukraine. Independent newspapers are harassed and the biggest, Syoboda, has to be printed in Vilnius, in Lithuania.

There is little or no investment in the independent press. Only I per cent of the economy is in the private sector and in 1997 total foreign investment was only $40 million. The electronic media is almost all stateowned and the print media has to use state-owned printing plants where it is at the mercy of the authorioes, as it is in its dealings with the state run distribution system.

the impression that Lukashenka is playing with the press. There is no doubt he could close it down if he chose; he prefers, instead, simply to make its life a misery.

The most recent case of harassment was of the Belarussian newspaper Nasha Niva, which was warned that it had violated press and media laws by deviating from the accepted form of spelling and punctuation. It was using a form common in the 1920s until it was banned by Stalin. The Sopreme Court ruled in favour of the paper. but the chairman of the Comminee on the Press. Mikhail Padgainy, has filed a comptain; and a request that the court revoke its decision. Back in Russia, the economic crisis has his journalists in different ways. Regional newspapers have had to withdraw Moscow correspondents because of the costs. Some say this has placed them even more firmly under the thumb of the local authorioes. Journalists are easy to be ethical when you're paid a wage," one said when Western journalists expressed horror.

There has, however, been an un-expected benefit from the economic crisis. Alexei Simonov, of the Glas-nost Defence Foundation, which monitors media abuses and provides legal help, says that it has forced the media to be less obsessed with itself. Journalists have begun to understand that survival was not Newspapers are now more relevani and have started to write "how to survive" stories. The number of otles has fallen, but total sales have increased. For the first ome since the end of the Soviet Union people are buying newspapers because they are important to their lives.

The "least bad situation" is in Russia, Kyrgyzstan and Moldova, says Simonov. II is getting worse in Ukraine which, like Kazakhstan.

there is a free press, of sorts, but there are no laws; in Azerbaijan, as

• Michael Foley is a media com-mentator at the Irish Times and a lecturer in journalism at the Dublin Institute of Technology. This is an extract from Word Power, published by Index on Censorship, E8.99; 0171-278 2313.

in Belarus, there is one-man rule and little room for press freedom.

Give the red-tops a sporting chance

as Neil Wallis, the Editor of the Sunday People, right in his rani against the judges of the British Press Awards, protesting forcefully from all accounts, that there was a bias against the journalism of the red-top tabloids?

Almost certainly. Slam-bang, straight-in-your-face, star-burst journalism, no matter how poputar with readers," is less likely to appeal to a panet of distinguished journalists, even one that includes former tabloid editors. than a beaudfully crafted piece presented with clever understatement. Bul before Wallis launches into his next outrage. I ask that he look not too far from under his own nose and consider whether the redtops, including his own, are really that interested in honours.

I have just chaired two panels of judges of the British Sports Journalism Awards, which have been running for 26 years and are supported by the Sports Writers' Association and Sport England, the new title of the English Sports Council.Of the five winners of the BSJA categories open to journalists on national papers, two were from The Mirror, two from The Sunday Telegraph and one from The Times. That clearly reflects where many of the best sports stories appeared last year (in The Mirror and The Sunday Telegraph) and where the best and/or most significant writing occurred (the sports editor of The Mirror was our Columnist of the Year).

We thought The Mirror had an outstanding year with its sports coverage, but where were its redtop rivals? Of the 116 entries, there was not one story from The Sun or the News of the World. not one from the Sunday Mirror and just one from Wallis's own paper.

It was not just a case of national journalists examining the navels of other national journalists. Judges included the publisher of a range of specialist sports magazines, the editor of the football magazine On the Ball, and the sports editor of Time Out — all under 40 years old - as well as active sports journalists on the nationals. We are all people whose first look at the papers in the morning is usually at the sports pages where the stories break - the tabloids, more often than not. We all knew the environment what was touly an exclusive news story, what was a good report filed under pressure, and what was a piece of feature writing that bad genuine impact as well as literary worth.

I think that is our hint to the British Press Awards if they are more fairly to measure the real world of journalism rather than the upper end of it. Get more judges beyond the newspaper establishment, younger judges, and judges who represent the audience. I hope we will have some non-journalists on the sports award panel next year.

And, Neil Wallis, please click on to the internal mail at Canary Wharf and send a message congratulating Des Kelly and his Mirror sports learn and inquire about what happened to the other Mirror Group diles.

TOM CLARKE Tom Clarke was sports editor of the London Evening Standard, the Daily Mail and The Times, and Editor of The Sporting Life.

An ad that costs £1 million should be making waves

It took six weeks of painstaking work to meld the prancing Lipizzaner horses to the surfing footage shot in Hawaii

THE MOST beautifut and powerfut piece of film on our screens is not one of Hollywood's technical epics, a BBC costume drama or even a wildlife series. It's a 60-second commercial for Guinness, and it cost more than £1 million to make.

The black-and-white ad features a surfer on a beach intently anticipating the ulómate wave. He explodes into action when he senses that it has come and rides the perfect curl. As the drama unfurls to the pulsating beat of Leftfield's Phat Planel, the crest becomes a sequence of stampeding white horses before the surfer coasts in 10 celebrate on the beach. "Good things come to those who . . . wait" is the endline, superimposed over a pint of Guinness. It's exhilarating stuff, but how does 60 seconds of film cost more than £1 million?

The commercial took more than a year to develop. The idea was derived from a poster presented by Abbott Mead Vickers BBDO in its pitch for the Guinness account. It featured a surfer looking expectantly out to sea. However. last year Guinness kicked off its "good things" campaign with a beautiful, if confusing, commercial called "swimblack". featuring an elderly Italian swimming a certain distance in the time it takes to pour a pint of Guinness. The problem with the surfing idea was getting around watchdog guidelines that forbid associating alcoholic beverages with enhanced sporting performance. You'll notice that nobody drinks a pint of the black stuff in the ad. So, after three months of Tom Carty and Walter Campbell — the team behind the dramaoc Volvo ads of a couple of years back — tinkering with the script, the crew from AMV and the director. Jonathan Glazer ['swimblack", Nike Parklife, Levi's "Kung-Fu" and many others), went to Hawaii in January.

They had already trawled Los Angeles unsuccessfully for top surfers: they were all of the cliched all-Californian variety. Eventually they cast a handful in Hawaii, with the lead taken by "Rusty". the world champion long-boarder. Over a week. Glazer rigged up cameras to heli-copters and ski-jets and filmed all the waves he needed. Only a couple in the finished commercial were digitally enhanced. There followed three or four days of a waves-and-surfing edit in London. Then he filmed the horses, employing two of the beautiful white Lipizzaners farnously used by the Vienna Riding School. The others are digitally created.

The horses were filmed on a giant blue-screen stage at Pinewood film studios. There was a water-bath for the floor. The trainer persuaded the horses to prance, leap and rise up on their haunches - all the actions matching the Hawaii footage frame by frame. This being adverosing, even the fantastic physiques of the Lipizzaners were embellished by handdrawn sinews and hair extensions.

The horse footage was melded to the Hawaiian footage during six weeks of painstaking work at London's Computer Film Company. It was only then that the soundtrack was agreed - the Velvet Underground had been the original choice. The ad was finished in mid-March and went out on March 16 during Manchester United's game with Internazionale.

Was it worth it? It is too early to say. Having ditched Ogilvy & Mather. its previous agency, because it wanted higher market share built on even more famous advertising. Guinness has seen its share rise from 4½ to 5 per cent, a real achievement in an overall declining beer market. It has also helped to throw off its comparatively sedate image born of years advertising the brand as a restorative pint. The problem is classic: attracting new, younger consumers without disenfranchising existing Guinness drinkers.

The director John Lloyd once told me that while he was at the BBC he had thought the money spent on directing commercials was "madness". When he started spending the Blackadder series budget (£250,000) on each Rowan Atkinson Barclaycard commercial, he thought the BBC mad.

Watch "surfer" and understand that there is method in Guinness's madness.

• Stefano Hatfield is the Editor of Cam-

he Management Centre

BUSINESS COURSES

CALL US TODAY

Freephone (24 hour) 0800 374024 (UK)

Talk To A To

Ydi

Freepost (799) CV2472 Coventry CV4 8BR

EDUCATION

WANTED KEEN

READERS

signound is Irrelevent. Send this advertisem of all the mistakes you can find (or telephon We will send a FRIEE PROSPECTUS of our orrespondence and seminar training course

0171 782 7890

The Leicester

For the Board

It's your move!

Leicester University not the bored!

EASTER REVISION

EXCELLENCE IN INDEPENDENT EDUCATION

> Specialists in University Entrance

One and two year A-Level and GCSE courses

- Small group traition

 - Wide range of subjects Interviewing now for September 1999 entry

Easter revision courses (23 March - 15th April)

31 St Giles 23 Collingham Gardens Oxford OX1 3LF London SW5 OHL Tel: 01865 728280 Tel: 0171 244 7414 www.collingham.co.uk

EASTER REVISION ____ HERTFORD COLLEGE -OXFORD

> GCSE & A-LEVELS CHERWELL COLLEGE

01865 - 242670

DAVIES EASTER REVISION INDEPENDENT COURSES

Small classes focus upon examination practice and technique under the guidance of experienced tutors.

0171 727 2797

We are also interviewing for Sixth Form Entry in September 1999

10 Pembridge Square London W2 4ED

regularly: CIFE is your assurance of the hi

EASTER COURSES HERTFORD COLLEGE OXFORD

A-LEVEL & GCSE Cherwell College's long established Ras Course. Intensive tuition in a demanding sthunlating and friendly environmen

Distance learning offers experienced managers an effective study route to the MBA and Warwick's top-rated Business School has more than 10 years' experience in supporting MBA students through its

Tel: 01865-242670 Fax: 01865-791761

LANGUAGE

EXAM Stater Revision

(01865) 88014124 mm

flexible programme.

COURSES

SPANISH IN SPAIN * SUMMER HOLIDAY

GALA Regional Office cute Hs, $ Leigh Lane Tel/fex. 01252 715319

Fees for courses for 4 weeks ATS 4.500, -- (appr. £230,--) Inclusive change for language courses and soom for 4 weeks ATS 9.900,— (appr. £505,—)

UMirCOURSE...
- oil oges
- all levels

* ALL YEAR ROUND adult intensive courses america oil oge Tel.: p++431) 405 12 54-0 Pac. (++431) 405 12 54-10 E-mail: WIHOK Omiyic.ac.at http://www.mivic.ac.at/WIHOK

WARWICK

"I wanted to take an MBA by Distance Learning so I talked to Warwick. No one else came close."

If you would like to know more then call the number below quoting reference ST288. Tel. +44 (0) | 203 | 524 | 00 Fax. +44 (0) 1203 524411 E-mail: dimbaint@wbs.warwick.ac.uk http://www.wbs.warwickac.uk/mba Warwick Business School, University of Warwick. Coventry CV4 7AL, England.

EDUCATION

Skills Crisis

Right now there's a massive demand for people like you give the right computer skills. More than 188,000 jobs were advertised last year in Information Technology.

craitment Agency receives a constant flow of vaconcies from possertions nationwide desperately searching for staff. Many return time and time again for help, one company alone employs over 20 Compatench trained people?

You do not meet a fantastic IQ, computer know how, fications or to give up work. The do meet commitment and

If you think you have potential, request our Career . svelopment information Fack, call 0800.657.657.

Website: http://www.computeach.co.uk job, with practical training in your holidays.

Grants? You may be eligible for a grant.

149 Bath Road, Maidenhead, St.6 4LA.

Tel: (01628) 621100 (24hrs) Fax: 67

Email No: 196033.3541@compas http://ourworld.compaserve.com/ho

Learn Spanish in Spain

Call today for a FREE

information pack

Tel 0181 786 8081

(Fex 0181 786 8096) e-mail: dquk@dircon.co.uk tb Ske: www.danquijote.org

TUDY GERMAN IN AUSTRIA UNIVERSITY OF VIENNA

GERMAN LANGUAGE COURSES FOR FOREIGNERS

3 sessions from July 4th to September 18th, 1999 (3 starting dates)

Courses for beginners and advanced students

LANGUAGE COURSES

Write for a FREE prospectus to: THE OPEN COLLEGE OF CHIROPODY & PODIATRY

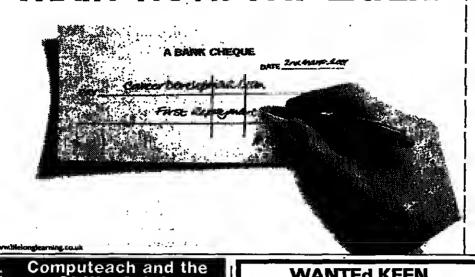

We have continuously trained for 80 years (1919).

Membership of the largest professional body - THE BRITISH CHIR TO BY EXPODIATRY ASSOCIATION.

HAVE YOU CONSIDERED

wards are rocketing - the average salary for a program £21,000 rising to well over £60,000 with experience

TRAIN NOW. PAY LATER.

919-1999 • 1919-1999 • 1919-1999 • 1919-1999 • 1919-1999 • 1919-1999 • 1919-1999 • 1919-1999

CHIROPODY

The demand for chiropody is ever increasing. Most of the training for the private sector can be studied at home without leaving your

With a Career Development Loan you can borrow from £300 to £8,000 and not pay anything back until you finish your education or training. Your course can last up to are Government Sponsored through selected High 0800 58 55 05 or send the coupon to Career Development Loans, Frespost WA 15 21, Warrington WA4 IBR.

Name (Mr/Mrs/Ms/Mas)

Train now, pay later with a Career Development Loan.

0800-542-0181 (Quote Ref: PR1)

Head Of Marketing

SCADIGIG(T)

Clasing dete: 16 April 1999

including media relations, support for student recruitment, liaison with schools publications and our growing alumni and levelopment programme.

Please contact John Craven (Vice-Chancellor: 01705 843190) or Colin Monk (Pro-Vice-Chancellor: 01705 843193, errait: in monk@port.ac.uk) for confidential

GET PAID FOR READING BOOKS

It's tree! You can up to £500 a week as a Freelance Proofmader and Copy Editor. He experience needed. Unique home-study course reveals all you need to loose. For a FREP special report and details of how to claim your FREE trial lesson write to: Maple Publishing. (Dept PR1). FREEPOST HA4446, Southal, Middlesex, US1 38R. Or call FREE:

The University wishes to appoint a Head of Merketing to provide leadership to an innovative and committed team. The department is responsible for a wide range of marketing and public relations activities,

The successful candidate will lead the marketing strategy of the University, working closely with senior menagement and with staff throughout the University. We are looking for someone who is sympathetic to Higher Education, with excellent communication skills and experience in

Alming for equal opportunities

MSc Manufacturing Management by Distance own pace and convenience? Then why not take this unique distance learn Masters course and experience the benefits of one of the UK's leading faculties (recently rated 'Excellent' HEFCE, Quality Assessm

siness & Manufacturing Strategy, Human Re ot, Information Systems, Financial Control, Quality & Quality Systems, Operations Man (MRP/MRP 11, OPT, JIT), Systems Modellin mistion, Statistics, Organisational Eco

Next intake: May 1999 Course duration: 2 years For further details contact: University Admissions Office 01707 284800 (ref. 367 Times) 01707 284256

institut français

Breaking the Language Barriers

Learn French!

French courses: morning, afternoon, evening and week-end start 12 April. GCSE and A Level revision courses start 22, 29 March and 6 April.

Institut français 14: Cromwell Place South Kensington, London SW7

For free brochures please contact: 0171 581 2701.

Ashford School is an Independent School. The 3 to 18 years. We wish to appoint a Bursar and Clerk to the Board of Governors to take up the post of the present holder when he retires in December 1999.

The successful candidate must be a talented ability in financial and general management. Experience in building works and maintenance. human resources and information technology is necessary while an interest or experience in education and estate management is desirable.

> East Hill, Kent TN24 8PB. The closing date is 6th April 1999.

St. George's University is pleased to announce its School of and is taught by an international faculty. Clinical work is completed in affiliated veterinarian programmes in the United States and in the United Kingdom.

Applications are now being accepted. For enrolment information, please contact: St. George's University School of Veterinary Medicine Dept. AVLT do The North American Correspondent: MSSL One East Main Street, Bay Shore, NY 11706-8339 Phone: 1-516-665-8500 Fax: 1-516-665-5590 Email: sgu_info@sgu.edu Internet: http://www.sgu.edu

St. George's University

GERMAN INTENSIVE COURSES 12-30 April + 10 May - 25 June at the German Cultural Centre

GOETHE O LONDON

KINGSTON

Cambridge Centre for

Sixth-form Studies

A Levels and GCSEs

Individual Attention

Day and Boarding Places

Now enrolling for September 1999

Small Classes CIFE

For more information

Alison Lake, CCSS

1 Salisbury Villas

Cambridge CB1 2JF Tel: 01223 716890

Fax: 01223 517530

Email: Cambridge_Centre_Edu@msn.com

CCSS: celebrating its 18th year or vist our website at www.ccss.co.uk

Station Road

FACULTY OF DESIGN

ONE YEAR FULL-TIME

PHOTOGRAPHY

COURSE

Call for an

Places

available

POSTCODE:

interview

A-LEVEL & GCSE EASTER COURSES

LADY MARGARET HALL, OXFORD

OXFORD'S ORLY SCIENCE & MATHS SPECIALISTS

94% PASS RATE . GUARANTEED A-CGRADE

REEFONE 0800 389 6935 (24 HRS, 7 DAYS

0181 547 7066

Career skills for your GAP YEAR

3, 6 or 6 milt intensive cours
 Computer LT. skills training
 DTP, Spreadsbeets, Medium

"HOW WILL I MAKE THE GRADE..?" 0171-035 5452 0161-236 8998

50 Princes Gate (Exhibition Road) London SW7 2PH Tet: 0171 596 4004 Fex: 0171 594 0210

Network Training

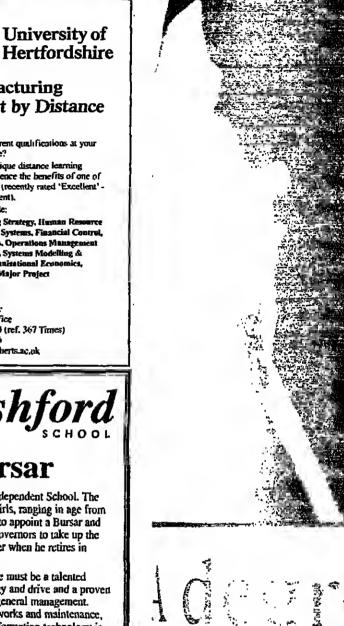

TECH 0181 549 0549

Internetand

ovell NetWare 4 & 5 - CNE Call for details of TECH's OPEN EVENINGS in Surrey, Manchester and Birmingham

James Merrett 0171 680 6297 Patricia Wade 0171 680 6298 Charlie Read 0171 680 6296

صكدآ سالاصل

administrator with energy and drive and a proven Further details for this key post may be obtained from: The Clerk to the Governors Veterinary Medicine. Commencing August 1999 —— Coursework includes the study of large and small animals

THE TIMES EDUCATION

High-tech revision proves a useful tool

∍of hire

ارو

ents and teenagers looking for a magic wand to stave off potential disaster in the face of imminent GCSE and A-level exams. Fortunately for them, the range of revision aids is growing by the year.

Teachers at the Association of Teachers and Lecturers' annual conerence this week were scathing about "infantilely challenged parents" who cram their children from nursery school onwards. But by the time public examinations come around, even the most restrained wonder whether the unfortunate can-

This weekend the shops will didate could be doing more. Every expert will tell you that Easter is too late to start revising, but it is never too late to give a fillip to a process that is perhaps becoming stale. The trick is to find something that will reinforce the work you have done, not simply to provide a diversion.

Increasingly, this will come in the form of a CD-Rom or Internet service, rather than books. More ground can be covered in a limited period, and a new approach may be just what is needed to master aspects of a subject that refused to sink in at school or college.

But how does a parent or student market? The growth in the number of homes with computers has been outpacing virtually all other countries, but research for Encyclopaedia Britannica shows that most are used only for games, putting Britain behind much of Europe in educational usage. Surveys carried out by the Parents Information Network (PIN). which advises families on computer technology, leave little doubt that most computer owners would like to make more constructive use of them. hut lack the knowledge to do so. Despite the wealth of magazines proffer-know where to start when faced with the burgeoning educational software confidence to pick and choose between the grandiose claims of competing producers.

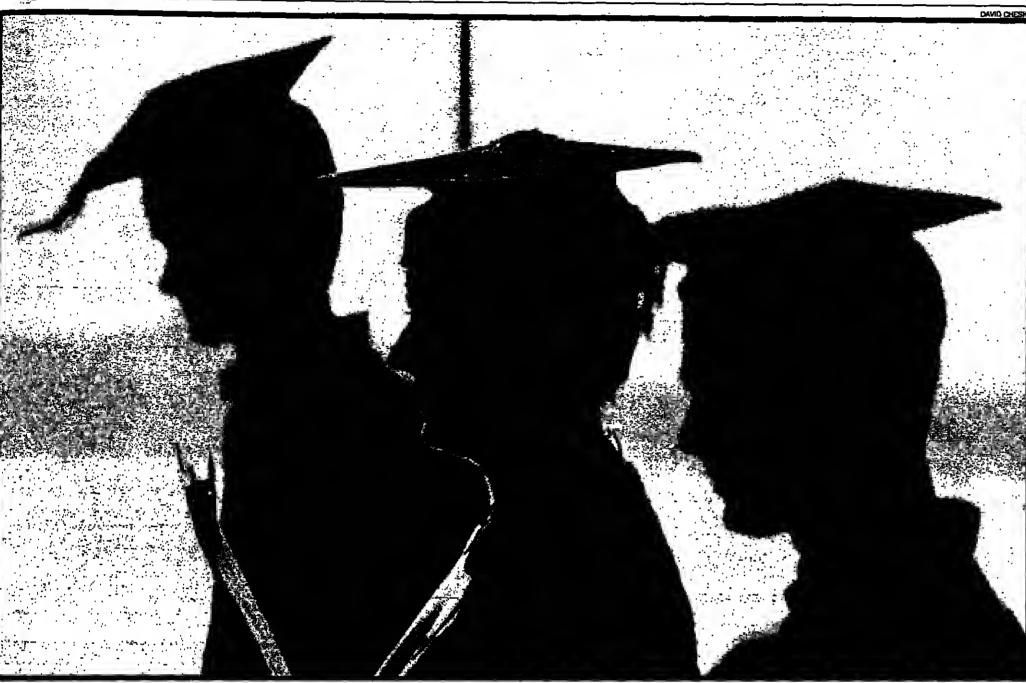

The PIN's recent surveys suggest that parents are right to be cautious. because genuinely useful programs are thin on the ground. At all levels of the education process it found room for improvement and gave especially low marks for revision CD-Roms designed to help children taking national curriculum tests. PIN's complaints about the standard of CD-Roms were not just that they failed to offer the support necessary to enable users to improve, but that they were often inconsistent and inaccurate. Reading aids, too, were unsatisfactory and even the reference packages available for secondary school pupils were deemed "little more than digitised books".

At GCSE level, however, there are worthwhile packages on sale. Perhaps the size of the market and format of the examinations lend themselves to multimedia presentations, but there are CD-Roms and Internet services that meet students' needs in a way still inconceivable for other age groups. The BBC's Bitesize publications are probably the best example. A newly expanded range now covers 13 subjects, from design and technology to religious education, offering revision topics and related questions, as well as various themes likely to be covered in future exams. Books, CD-Roms and websites are integrated with overnight television programmes designed for video.

BT's Home Campus shows that computer technology can be both popular and successful as a selfstanding study aid. The shelves of computer stores are groaning with other examples. The age of the book is by no means over, but high technology is beginning to win the battle for the home revision market.

A mark of distinction? The less academically able may feel pressure to take a university degree but in some cases they may be better advised to head straight for the job market

A degree of career failure

That is the worst career decision you have ever made? Philip Roberts believes that his mistake was going to university. "I'm £9,000 in debt and I've ended up in a job that I could have gone to straight from school," he says. "People should think twice before they do a degree course." Mr Roberts. 24, who left Humberside University last year with a 2.2 in tourism, is one of a growing number of grad-uates emerging from Britain's new universides, most of which were formerly polytechnics. Inevitably these institutions attract a number of less academic students who have failed to achieve the grades demanded by more established universities. But despite poor A levels, many students take up places at university because they think they should.

The outcome, as Mr Roberts and many of his peers are discovering, is that a degree from a low-status university is far from being a passport to a good career. Graduates emerge with enormous debts and find themselves competing with better-qualified contemporaries for limited graduate posicions. The problem stems from the pressure college, thousands of graduates with that pushes even weak A-level pupils to

For students with weak A-level results, it has never been easier to get into university. But can this harm their job prospects? Nick Moore reports on the reluctant graduates go to university. Mr Roberts acknowledges this. "I didn't really want to go to college," he says. "I got poor A levels and wanted a job. But the done thing now is to go to university." He found a place through clearing. But when he graduated, he found that employers were not interested in his degree. Eventually, he took a junior position in a Cardiff bank. at £7,500 a year. "If I had started when I was 18, which I could have. I would be earning twice that amount," he says. "And I would have no loans to pay off."

The situation is likely to worsen. Labour has eagerty adopted its Conservative predecessors' aim of getting a third of school-leavers into higher education. More than 300,000 students will start courses this autumn, often paying their own tuioon fees and with lower than ever grant allowances.

By the time the present intake leaves debts of up to £20,000 will be competing for employment. This could develop into a significant social problem if a large portion of a generation becomes embittered at an education system and Government that failed to direct them properly.

The growth of unusual and highly specific courses is compounding the problem and misleading many students. Subjects such as Boxing or Australian studies (complete with analysis of Neighten and the complete with analysis of Neighborn ana bours) may sound fun but employers are wary of such courses. Degrees in media studies or marketing do not automatically lead to careers at the BBC or Saatchi & Saatchi; graduates in such disciplines often find it hard to find work in these fiercely competitive areas. David Newbold, 24, who left Humberside University with a 2.2 in European marketing last year, and now lives in Ormskirk, Lancashire, confirms this. "I have found it impossible to get into marketing." he says. "Nobody from my course has got beyond sales positions. It's depressing, but these jobs are so in de-mand." Mr Newbold is unemployed.

Matthew Simpson, 23, who has a 2.2 in management studies from Manchester Metropolitan University and two mediocre A levels, also regrets attending college. "I had to get work to fund myself, alongside £5,000 worth of loans," he recalls. "I feel it was an effort made in vain. Because my degree is not so good, I cannot find graduate work, yet 1 am over-qualified for other jobs." He now works in a packing factory in Wrexham.

et the idea that anyone who can get into university should go, remains sacrosanct. Schools herd their pupils to university because it reflects well on their statistics; head teachers boast about their success rates. Parents are understandably flushed with pride that their offspring are bound for a noble seat of learning.

Universides, meanwhile, need to fill places to secure funding. They also produce statistics which suggest that most graduates get jobs. Humberside says that 91 per cent of graduates do so, or go on to further education, and Manchester Metropolitan gives a figure of 85 per cent, although neither institution has a breakdown of the jobs their graduates take up.

The losers? Non-academic sixth-formers. Even if they are not interested in study and have poor results, they are seen as failures if they do not go to univer-sity, and are given little guidance if they opt out at this point. As for those who decide to attend university, record numbers are dropping out - for the same reasons that they shouldn't have gone.

Mr Roberts says: "If you aren't expect-ing good A levels, there is a strong argument for not applying. Unless you really know what you want to do and are determined to work hard, I would be tempted to try another option."

Mr Simpson agrees. "If I could have my time again, f would have done work experience after A levels in an area that interests me. Sixth-formers should be wary of going to university for the sake of it. It can be a costly mistake."

● E-mail: edpage@the-times.co.uk

How rigid courses stop learning

Pupils must stray from the syllabus, says Susan Elkin

onsider the national curriculum. Then consider what you would expect a 17-year-old to know of this century's history: the dates of the two world wars, for instance. Does the national curriculum ensure that the average teenager has the answers? I doo't believe it does.

I was recently horrified by the 17-year-old who was astonished to learn a fact that most people would consider general knowledge. Do you mean there were two world wars this century? she asked.

Our present system, so laudable in intention, is profoundly anti-educational. The utilitarian checklist we call the national curriculum details precisely what every five to 16-year-old must learn. The danger is that once teachers and pupils tick off the specifications on the list, they often stop. That means that not one teenager in a hundred will be able to show you on a map where Cambridge or Southampton is because neither city is listed.

Standards of general knowledge — that which is useful and interesting but is nowhere enshrined in a syllabus — get ever worse. How am I to teach the poetry and philosophy of Wordsworth to an A-level group, not one of whom can tell me the date of, or anything about, the French Revolutioo? Much of this ignorance and inability to reason stems from a lethat mixture of over-exposure to the lowest grade of television and a lack of wider reading. The prevailing view is that if something is not in the syllabus, reading it is a waste of time.

How many young people would visit an art gallery or museum voluntarily? One of my former pupils, now a law student, wrote recently with her news, which included the informadon that she'd visited a "great" sex museum in Amsterdam - so much more interesting than all the British museums to which she had been dragged in the past, she said. Most youngsters are attuned to the ootion that learning can be kept to a minimum. What happened to a thirst for knowledge and a love of learning for itself? Of course, we all want pupils to pass their exams, but they are not the totality of education. Real education is infinite. It is oot hacked down to fit some blinkered syllahus compiler's cardboard file. A curriculum should be a beginning, not an end. We lose sight of that at our peril.

The author is a teacher of secondary English.

When lessons interrupt an important call

Nokia and Ericsson are the names to have

By the end of her teaching practice at a West London secondary, Debbie Colgen thought that she had seen it all - then a mobile phone rang at the back of her class. "If that wasn't bad enough." she recalls. "a student answered the phone by saying 'James Enterprises, how may I help you? I didn't know whether to laugh, cry or shout." Mrs Colgen is not the only teacher who has to cope with the explosive increase in mobile-phone activity among London secondary students. Usage is estimated at 30 per cent and teachers have reported phones ringing in examination halls, pupils calling from one classroom to another during lessons and even legal disputes over students using mobiles.

Mobile phones are unlike previous fads because they undermine tradioon and authority. There is no way to monitor the wide social circle oughly, several older students admit-teachers. John Elderkin on the latest trend for distraction within which a student might phone at school. Students sense this, hence One student said: "I told them I Forget yo-yos, mobile phones are now a serious problem for the attraction of the mobile. Justine, 15, who goes to school in Central London, says: "When I have my phone, I can do what I want."

With phone prices in free fall and special payment plans designed to entice teenagers, the mobile's presence in schools seems certain to increase. At one London comprehensive 40 per cent of a class of II-yearolds admitted having bleepers or mobile phones. Chatting to friends is why they want them, but when asked why they should have them. all cited parental concern for their safety. But questioned more thorwould be safer, but really I just wanted one because everyone else has them." He went on to boast about his phone's special features - such as a Union Jack cover (cost £30). Mobiles represent the high point of technology as fashion. Nokia and Ericsson are the names to have and students compete to own the most compact or colourful version. Multicoloured antennae that flash with incoming calls and unusual "rings" (from a Spice Girls tune to The Godfather theme) are de rigueur. One student even confesses that she leaves her older phone at home because she is embarrassed by it. "It's ringey, accepts that emotions can a big, clunky one," she explains. "I use my friend's instead." Aylward School in North London.

where Mrs Colgen teaches, has reacted swiftly to the influx. Parents have been notified that mobile phones will be confiscated and kept in the school safe if they are discovered. Karen Reilly, a teacher, says: "We don't have much trouble with phones in the classrooms, although we realise that some are being carried around discreetly."

But teachers at other schools report continuing difficulties in controlling personal phones. Confiscation often leads to further disruptions, David Powell, a teacher in Harun high, "Some of these phones are expensive," he adds. "It's not like taking away a baseball cap."

And because parents own the phones and have been sold on the mobile's safety attributes, they often endorse their child's decision to carry it. Some even insist on it. The most common strategy appears to be one of containmentlain Haresign, who teaches at Crofton Park School in Lewisham, believes that common sense must be used. "You cannot," he says, "check every bag in every lesson," Teenagers with pay-as-you-go plans often find themselves in serious debt. Some borrow money, others take afternoon jobs just to pay for their phone habit. And owners of particularly flashy mobiles are subject to threats and robbery - which makes nonsense of the protection supposedly offered by a mobile phone.

Chris McGrath sees Richard Hills flourish in Dubai

A reputation built on sand

the green carpet for Richard Hills, who flies bome today after his annual migration to the desert. But the verdant spring that greets him can offer no blossom, no promise of new life, more invigorating than the unforgettable flowering he enjoyed in the arid sands of Dubai last Sunday. His achievement in winning the Dubai World Cup on Almutawakel will be easily measured when he receives his cut of the sport's richest ever prize. Yet he would begin his season at Kempton Park tomorrow with no less exuberance had his reward been restricted to the astonishing instant carnival that greeted him at Nad al Sheba.

It was a moment of radiant fulfilment. On dismounting. in a touching conclusion to his rites of passage, he warmly embraced Tom Jones, the retired trainer who was his mentor for 17 of his 36 years.

From this peak of his career so far. Hills can acknowledge the problems he endured after succeeding Willie Carson as retained jockey to Sheikh Hamdan al-Maktoum. His relative anonymity, with both the public and inveterate sceptics in the press, extended even to a detailed resemblance to his twin and fellow jockey, Michael.

In fairness, Almutawakel was only sealing the breakthroughs of last season, when Hills grew in self-belief and rode several big winners. Even so, their success repre-ngland has rolled out sented an awakening every bit as stunning as the glistening towers surging from the desert horizon beyond.

Hills was on such a high that he could not sleep for two nights afterwards, and joy still consumed him when he interrupted his packing to reflect on what had happened. "You know, they were pretty big shoes I stepped into," he said. "But Sheikh Hamdan showed faith in me and to pay him back like this is a dream. I felt everything had started coming together from last July.

You take a while to get your confidence. Everyone makes mistakes. You need the horses to bring you out. But I was delighted with the way things went then, and winning the Dewhurst on Mujahid really crowned it."

If Hills found his feet in that second season because he was riding better horses, equally the confidence such horses give a jockey was reflected in his own performance. "It's a mental thing, really," Hills said. "The same as any sport. You read how Alan Shearer can't score a goal and the next minute he won't be able to stop.

"I could name 20 jockeys equally capable of winning on a given horse. But you need luck to get on the horse. You do put yourself under pres-sure. Things go wrong sometimes. Racing isn't all pre-planned. Mind you, riding these horses is a lot easier than riding in a Nottingham

Be that as it may, Hills certainly gave Almutawakel a fine ride, seizing a decisive advantage in the straight and preserving it against the American rivals who harried him to the line. "It was one of those rare occasions when everything worked out as planned," he said.

"Being drawn six was a help. You've three furlongs before a turn and, when a horse has never had a race on dirt before, that helps build their confidence. They can become disoriented with dirt kicked in their faces. I never horses or into gaps. I was a bit worried about Central Park because I knew he'd kick, so I was pleased to stay within a length.

"But that last half-furlong. I thought it would never end. I could feel them coming down on me, all f could do was try to keep him balanced and hope. He's so courageous. First I just felt relief that we held on, but then the thrill kicked in. To win this race for Sheikh Hamdan - and the reception was unbelievable. It's my seventh season here and they follow racing very closely. It's different back at home, because often people are cheering because they've won money. Here it's just their love of

Now he hopes to sustain the momentum on home soil. notably with Mujahid in the Sagitta 2,000 Guineas. "He's a lovely horse with a turn of foot. I'm very confident he'll stay the mile and I know Mr Dunlop is very pleased with

Hills would be entitled to brash ambitions for the coming months - to claim centre stage in big races and show he belongs there. That he offers no such bluster is perhaps the most positive augur for his prospects of doing so. "I tell you what I'm going to do this year," he said quietly. "I'm going to keep my head down, keep pedalling. Keep enjoying it. Because every day, when I pick up the paper and see the horses I have to ride - well, it's a joy. Such a joy."

Hills acknowledges the enthusiastic crowd at Nad al Sheba after the Dubai World Cup

RESULTS FROM YESTERDAY'S THREE MEETINGS

Leicester

Corp.: good to soft, soft in places
2.10 (I'm Bydl I, TIMME IN TIDE (W J O'Connor, 40-1); 2. Tarriswan (K Fallon, 6-11 lav);
3. Lamente (Danc Orvel), 14-1), LLSO RAN
3-1 Loop The Loup (Shi), 14 My Pleasture, 16
Salatiy, 25 Jef Age (4th), 33 Apins Red.
Hound Venture, 50 Bed Me Welcome (6th),
100 Stormin, 11 ran. 3, 13, 14, 14, B Meshan at Lamboum. Tote: 248-20; 6130, 51.20, 51.80, OF E38.90, CSF 825.54. C1.20, C1.80, DF: C38.90, CSF E82.54.

2.40 (71 3yd) 1, ADBRPOUR: (P M Quirm, 50-11), 2 Bestron (R Hughes, 3-1 fur), 3, Heliceway Melody (D Kacourse, 14-1), ALSO RAN, 5-1 Ambitous (Shi), 5 Birchwood Sun, 10 Boffey Spiriney, 12 Foxie Lady, 14 locress Fity, 25 Comeoutofitielog (6th), Sandy Shore, 33 Ayersome Venture, Goldiner Goselo, Johnny Staccelo (4th), Mustrif Grumble, Overcome, 40 Chestra (Groom, 50 My Kind, 66 Docklands Merc, 16 ran, NR Magic Powers, Scattenbury, 2-9, Hg, 2-9, B), Hd. Hollinshead at Upper Longdon Toke (23.20, C4.80, E2.70, E5.76 Df. E57.80, CSF: £159.01. 22.70, ES.70 bit S57.80, USP; $159,01.
3.10 (Im 31.183yd) 1, TherComePi (C. Cogan, 8-1); 2, Andieligh Chanser (F. French, 4-1 brit), 3, Klanbury (Martin Dwyer, 25-1), ALSO RAN, 5-1 Fliver Capitan (Bth), 6 Count de Money, 8 Flying Flip (5th), 12 Childreis, Choce, Kintaw, 14 Cadnex, Moonasiang, Rear Window (4th), 18 Sharr-bles, State Approval, 33 Mingara, 14 can NR; Petuniso, 14J, 21J, 9J, 6J, 11J, S Brookshew at

DF: £26.90. CSF: £38.05. Tolcast: £728.44.
3.40 (Im 11 21 byd.) 1, TOP JEBB (P MCCabe.
13-2): 2, Pautheny Might (Pal Eddery, 100-30 fay): 3, Zehne (A Poll, 16-1). ALSO FANt. 6-1
Haydh, James, 7 Swinging The Blues, 8
Respond, 9 Polser School (Siri), 10 Swillech, 14 Be My Wish, 20 Neachwood Mysilic (6th), Pegal Bardget (4th). 11 ran. 2, 114, 6, 23, 23 M Ryen at Nowmentol. Tote: £280: 53.70. £1.40, £3.40. OF: £16.60. CSF: £25.33. Tricast: £298.59, $25.33. Tricast $296.59.

4.10 (7) Syd) 1. CAPTAIN MILLER (A Mackey, 11-1); 2. Retailator (M Fonton,
6-1); 3. Pizzysig (M Henry, 6-1); ALSO RAN;
7-2 tav Zuke (USA) (4nl), 4 Rex is Okay, 9-2
Bound For Plenssure, 6 Toss Les Jours 5th), 18-16-16 Tige; 40, April Ace (8n) 9 ran.
NR; Pal Of Mine. 2, 41, 23. M Chemion et Upper Lambourn. Tote; $15.60; $2.40,
$2.00, $2.70. $DF; $57.90. Tritects;
$1.066.80, CSF; $287.65, Tricast; $534.03. 2.1.00 BU, CSP 187.05, Incises 2534.05.

4.40 (77 Syd) 1. ARCTIC CHAR (W.) O'Connot, 18-11; 2. Penrybout (M. Fanton, 9-4 girsy); 3. Karosens (J. Reid, 25-1). ALSO RAN: 9-4 girsy Lowndes Court (4th), 9-2 Way Worry Now (RE) (5th), 5 Terrepeed (6th), 8 Lysts, 25 Elent, 50 Sheer Gyrs, 9 ran. Nr. 3, 1 B. Meehant at Lambourt, Tota, 214.10, 22.70, 21.10, 23.90. DF; 257.10 CSP, 250.07. Musselburgh Going: good, good to firm in places 2.20 (fm 1) 1, Equarry (F Lynch, 20-1), 2, Anonym (5-1); 3, Dr Weodelook (12-1), 4, Gerdina John (8-1), 18 ran, 1-4, 3, M Dode, Tolse E37-20; 24-70, E1 30, 54-80, 62-10, DF 5113-30, CSF, C17,87, Tricest; E1,215-44, 25 Central Charlest Cartesian Control Contr 2.50 (51) 1, Blackpool alammar's (P Fessey, 6-1), 2, Lond Benkes (evens law); 3, Desert Salar (4-1), 9 ran. NR: (drich, Hd, 3vi. J Berry Toler 58:30; £1.80, £1.10, £1.80, DF, £4.90 CSF, £18.97.

Hills drives the game Almutawakel to victory over Malek. Photograph: B K Bangash

$4.90 CSF, E16.97,
3.20 (2m) 1, Batoutoffinablus (I. Charnock, 10-1); 2, Kiarans Bridge (13-2); 3, Linea-G
(3-1) 4-84, 8 ran, 1-4, 1-4. W Heigh, Tote:
89 70; E-220, C280, E1.50. DF, E728.90,
CSF, E86.79, Tricest; E221.83,
3.50 (3) 1, Swynford Dreasen (P Flobinson, 10-1); 2, Palancepais Jack (10-1); 3, Lord
High Admirat (3-1 lav), 12 ran, Hd, 4, T
Etherington, Toter E120; E330, E1.80, E1.40, DF; E38.10, CSF, E80.97, Tricest, E345.82,
4.20 (1m 3) 1, High Teitrat (B Duffield, 3-1);
2, Suave Frankle (11-4 tav), 3, Shapp Ending
(10-1), 8 ran, 81, 21, S Woods, Toter E4.80, £1.90, £1.90. DF; £3.90. CSF; 9.33,
4.80 (10) 1, Fallachen (P Bobreson, 11-4) A.50 (1m) 1, Fallischen (P Roberson, 11-4 lav); 2, Col-Woody (10-1); 3, Diesto (6-1), 14 rsr., 21, Ind. M. Jarvis, Tote; 52.90; £1,10, 55.40, 52.30 DF: £21.10, CSF; £29.98, Tricusc £149.23. Jackpot: not won (pool of £14,709.09 carried forward to homorrow). Placepot: 2416.70. Quadpot: 989.90. Placepot: 9126.00. Quadpot: 281.00.

Lingfield Park

2.80 (1m 2) 1, Sassedo (3 Bartwell, 25-1); 2, Jubiles Scholer (9-4 fav); 3, Wadi (11-4), 10 tan. 1'-4, nk. J Bridger, Toles £21.70; £3.50, £1.10, £1.40. DF; £28.60, CSF; £88.63. 2.30 [1m 2]; 1, Gracious Planty (K Sked, 1-14 lay); 2, Rooks (16-1); 3, Surviva Verbus (20-1), 4-rat. NF; Barrettskown, Saina. 16, 48, 8 | Ma., Tote: £1.10. DF; £2.50, CSF; £2.28. 3.00 (7) 1, Renditin (P Doe, 10-1); 2, Compton Akis (7-2); 3, Done And Dusted (4-1) Dream On Me (5th) 94 lav. 10 run, Nft. Nicholas Mistress 58, 2-8, D Haydin Jones. Tota: $9.50; £1.90, £1.70, £1.30, DF, £21.00. CSF; £39.24, Tricrest: £153.99, 3.30 (1m 4f) 1, Taflulah Belle (T G McLauchin, 6-5 tev); 2, Benbury (13-8); 3, Opera Buff (8-1), 4 ran, 3l, 10l, N Lusmoden, Tote, £1.80, DF: £1.50, CSF, £3.27, 108, 21.00, DF; 21.50, CSF; C3.27, 4.00 (SP, 1, Bettchworth Bellin (S. Carson, 7-2), 2, Antonia's Double (9-1); 3, Aljez (8-1), Tear White 2-1 fav 6 fan, ½, ½, E Wheeler, Tote; £4.50; £2.00, £3.90, £2.90, DF; £37.90 CSF; £32.73, Tricest; £218.70

Coral offers long-term investment By CHRIS McGrath

AFTER being prised free of a Ladbrokes takeover, Coral vowed to celebrate its renewed independence by showing a spirit of innovation in ante-post betting. Yesterday it proved as good as its word. At this stage of the Flat season, ante-post betting is traditionally confined to the first classics, but Coral has opened books on three of the summer's allaged championships: the Darley July Cup, the King George VI and Queen Elizabeth Diamond Stakes, and the Gold Cup at Royal Ascot. There will no doubt be interest in 10-1 against Stravinsky for the July Cup after the Irish colt again faltered off the bridle at the Curragh last weekend, Lujain, another Sagitta 2,000 Guineas candidate umproven stamina. with shares 8-1 favouritism with Diktat, Stravinsky's stablemate, Bianconi, is also quoted 10-1; Coral then offers 12-1 about Arkadian Hero and Lochangel, and 14-1 Sainte Marine.

Kayf Tara is 5-1 favourite to retain the Gold Cup. Spirit Of Love, runaway winner of the Cesarewitch, heads the young pretenders on 8-1, followed by mark, and 14-1 Persian Punch, Much the most nebulous territory must be the King George, as Vodafone Derby ting is duly dominated by the seniors, with Royal Anthem favourite at 6-1, followed on 8-1 by two Godolphin horses in Daylami and High-Rise. Another, Almutawakel, would appear most unlikely stored to 7-1 favouritism by William Hill.

SHEEHAN on BRIDGE

By ROBERT SHEEHAN, BRIDGE CORRESPONDENT Begin Bridge with The Times: Lesson 50 -Putting it into Practice

Enough of bidding theory. Next week I will start a series of lessons that ignore bidding (more or less) and focus on cardplay and defence. Today I present you with a full hand: You pick up as South (with opponents silent throughout):

4 K2 ♥ QJ10972 ♦ 32 4 AK5

You open One Heart, your partner, North, bids Two Diamonds and you rebid Two Hearts, limiting your hand to a maximum of 14 HCP. He now bids Two Spades. What do you call?

Your partner has shown five diamonds and four spades and at least invitational values. You have already described your hand as minimum and, within that limitation, it is quite strong. You have 13 HCP, good controls in the black suits and a nice solid heart suit. If your partner issues an invitation you should accept. Since you have already shown a six-card heart suit, it is time to show your good club stoppers so you rebid Three No-Trumps and everybody passes. West leads the queen of clubs.

> Q 8 O AKJ54 A 843 4976 ♣ Q1025 V K53 C A24 Q Q 1096 S 4 QJ 1097 ♠ K2 ♥ QJ 10972 032 #AK5

Contract: Three No-Trumps by South. Lead: queen of clubs.

You have plenty of tricks; your problem on this hand is that your opponents may set up three club winners before you have established your hearts. You could play on diamonds but your prospects are not nearly as good in that suit as in hearts. Your only real problem is when the opposing clubs are divid-ed 5-2. Say you win the club and play a heart; the opponent with the club shortage (East, say) will win and clear the suit while his partner still has another entry.

The solution is to duck the first club, win the second and play a heart. If East wins and has a club to play the suit is 4-3; if he has no club to play he can't clear the suit. Set the hand and play it through for yourself.

Of course if West has both heart honours you will go down. Then you will have to explain to partner why you are not in Four Hearts. Bridge is not a perfect game even the experts sometimes bid to the wrong contract, but they still try to make it.

WORD-WATCHING

By Philip Howard

PLUTON a. A mattress b. Radioactive gas c. Rock mass

LOOSE SILKY BENT a. A young woman b. A tie knot c. Grass

SHAKEHOLE a. A depression b. Golfers' fear c. A dice box

> TAMBOUR a. A shutter b. Cymbals c. A town crier Answers on page 50

BY RAYMOND KEENE CHESS CORRESPONDENT

Monaco result

The Melody Amber tournament in Monaco, in which the games are alternately played blindfold or rapid speed rates. has resulted in victory for Vladimir Kramnik, the talented Russian grandmaster. The top placings were as follows (out of 22 possible):

1. Vacinir Kramnik 14/ptr; 2 equal, Vase-in Topdov, Alexas Sturov 14; 4 equal, Vasva-neflhan Anand, Joel Lauter 11½ 6, Anatoly Karpov 11.

White: Viswanathan Anand Black: Vladimir Kramnik Monte Carlo Blindfold 1999 Sicilian Defence

7	64	123
2	Nf3	Nc6
3	d4	cxd4
4	Nod4	Nf6
5	Nc3	d6
6	ß	e5
7	Ed/A	Be7
8	Be3	0-0
9	Qd2	a 5
LO	Bb5	Na7
11	Be2	Nc6
12	Bb5	Na7
L3	Ba4	Be6
4	Bxa7	Roa7
15	Q(2	RaS
L6	0-0-0	Qb8
L7	Bb5	Rc8
L6	Na4	d5
9	Nb6	a4
90	Bxa4	Qa7
7	ext5	BdB
2	doe6	Bxb6
23	ex7+	Kxf7
24	Nc5	Qrea4
	o rocione

White: Joel Lautier Black: Veselin Topalov Monte Carlo Blindfold 1999

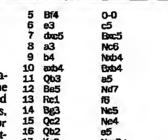

Queen's Gambit Declined

1 d4 Nf5
2 c4 e6
3 Nf3 d5
4 Nc3 Be7

By Raymond Keene

Black to play. This position is from the game Olbrich -Oberst, Germany 1999. Both players have gone all out for an attack against the opposing king. However, Black now got in first. Can you

Solution on page 50

Bg3 Qc2 Qb2 Ke2 Ne4 e5 Nxc3+ Bg4 Bh5 Qc8 dxc4 Br7 h3 Rd3 Qa2 e4 Re3 Qc2 Nxe5 Bxe5 Bc4+ Bb3 Ke1

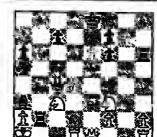

Oc1 c2+

Times book

The Times Winning Moves 2 contains 240 chess puzzles from international grandmaster Raymond Keene's daily column in The Times, and is available now from bookshops or from B. T. Batsford Ltd (tel: 01797 369966 at £6.99 plus post-

Raymond Keene writes on chess Monday to Friday in Sport and in the Weekend section on age and packing).

WINNING MOVE

BASKETBALL NATIONAL ASSOCIATION (NBA): Boston 72 Detroil 87; Washington 84 Orlando 73; Charlotte 94 Milwaukee 102; Phoenix 93 Gold-en State 78; Portland 100 Secremento 86.

Wednesday's late result BUDWEISER LEAGUE: Tharnes Valley Tigers 98 Leicester Riders 80.

BOWLS

BLACKPOOL: Greenells Spring Water-too: Second round: MRyding (Wigert) bt C litingworth (feltwook) 21-20; S Bennett (Nuneston) bt D Hope (Whitchurch) 21-18; H Merriey (Whitchurch) bt M Lynch (Bootle) 21-20; M Bennett (Leigh) bt L Markhern (Whitchurch) 21-18; D Lawton (Thorrton) bt C Wesver (Whitchurch) 21-12; J Bottom (Barneley) bt E Ferguson (Blackpool) 21-16.

International match Lahore Gymkhana v England

LAHORE (England won toss): England bea Lahore Gymkhana by 137 runs ENGLAND V Knight c Adeel b Khurshid. A J Stewart retired...... G A Hick retired....... G P Thorpe b Asm...

Total (5 wids, 50 overs) 375 A O Multiply did not bet. FALL OF WICKETS: 1-46, 2-179, 3-335, 4-340, 5-371.

4-340, 5-371. BOMLING: Ata-ur-Rehmen 9-0-57-1; Khus-shid Bhinder 9-0-68-1, Imram Bucher 4-0-37-0; Asim Sheikh 10-0-57-2; Flintoff 5-0-19-0; Zaber Deutri 6-0-37-0; Amin Khan 4-0-39-0; Sohal Hussain 1-0-12-0; Beder Zamen 2-0-23-0 LAHORE GYMICHANA

LAHORE GYBROHAMA
Bader Zemen b Gough
V J Wells c and b Austin
Adeel Akhtar c Steven b Mullally
A Frintid b Holloolee
Zeben Cadn c Hick b Croft
Imran Bucher c Austin b Holloolee
Aerner Gulf c Croft b Hick
Aerner Stellt c Croft b Hick Arms Stellt c Holloolee b Fraser
Khushid Binnder not dut Arms Khan the b Fraser
Ednas (b 2, b 6, w 3, nb 5)

Total (9 wide, 50 overs) 238 Ala-ut-Rehman, Sohall Hussain did not bet FALL OF WICKETS: 1-16, 2-21, 3-84, 4-141, 5-198, 6-206, 7-206, 6-224, 9-238 BOWLING. Gough 6-1-27-1; Multally 6-0-19-1, Fraser 10-0-68-2, Austin 5-0-31-1; Croft 5-1-15-1; Ealham 5-0-37-0, Hollioske 5-1-23-2, Hick 6-2-12-1 Umpres. M lobel and J Ashral.

One-day international India v Pakistan MOHALI (india won toss). Pakistan beet in-dia by seven wickels

THEN

BOWLING, Washin Akram 10-0-42-0; Shoab Akhtar 10-1-18-2; Azhar Mahmood 10-1-31-2; Innan Nazir 10-0-45-1; Seqlain Mushleq 9 5-0-49-3

PAKISTAN

the favourite's stablemate, Sea Wave, on 10-L Other prices include 12-1 against Inverlez Ahmed not out... frizament-ul Harq not out Extras (b 4, fb 2, w 14, nb 5)... Total (3 wids, 42 overs). Azher Mahmood, "Washin Akram, †Moin Khert, Saofain Musheng, Shahid Nazir, Shoelb Akher did not bet.

Wodgeplay's late remits

ST CLOUD, France: French junior women's open champlonship: Leading finat-round scores (England unless stated) 71: M Monnet (Fr), 72 Valifiet (Fr), M Beautet (So), 74: O Sarron (Ger), K Frisher, K Icher (Fra), K Taylor, V Larry (Soot), L Watters, Friovano (II), A Arquero (So), N Clau (So), 75: C Gaul (Ger), R Pozza (II), M Coserzz (II). M Ebert (Ger), Other scores: 77: A Keigriey, C Court, L Kerry (Soot) 78: L Wright 78: S Heath, S Garbutt. 80: R Adby, C Risson. 81: O Briggs

HOCKEY mant: Soum Amea o crysta to 5, 200 Argentine B 1.
ANTWERP: European youth tropby: Under-16: Boys: England 3 Ireland 1, Belgrum 3 Scotland 0. Girls: Belgrum 5 Scotland 1;

ICE HOCKEY NATIONAL LEAGUE (NHL): Detroit 2 Los Angeles 1; Florida 3 New York Islanders 5, New Jersey 7 Anahem 1; Chicago 2 Buffalo 1; Dalka 6 Tampe Bay 4; Vancouver 5 To-ronto 6, San Jose 2 Colorado 3

RUGBY UNION WELSH LEAGUE: Premier division; New-

SNOOKER

TELFORD: Embassy world champlon-shipe Eighab quelifying round (England unless stated). C Scanlon of P Swerny 10-5: S James bt C MacGillivray (Scot) 10-5: G Greene bt A Burden 10-8. J Burch bi S O'Connor (ine) 10-7: M Fu (Fish bit R Millins 10-4: M Judge (ine) bt M Geutens (Bell 10-8: L Griffin bit M Davis 10-5; E Handerson (Scot) bi P Wykes 10-8; I McCalloch bt P Lines 10-8: J Landner (Scot) bi O Harn (Aus) 10-8: O Finbow bt D Harny (Scot) 10-8; L Famandsc bt B Jones 10-9: J Pemy bt N Gilbert 10-6: N Pearce bt G Ponting 10-7

STORIO ARTHRO CO THO DBI.
FALL OF WICKETS: 1-0, 2-14, 3-24.
BOWLING: Present 10-2-27-3; Shuldo, 10-0-37-0; Singh 7-0-24-0; Genguly, 5-0-28-0, Pandoy, 3-0-21-0; Kambian 4-0-21-0; Sehwag 3-0-35-0.

FOOTBALL

Wedgesday's late results

BUTIOPEAN CHAMERIONSHIP: Qualitying group once taly 1 Belanus 1; Swizerlend 2 Wales 0. Group throe Larke 0

Groce 0 Pestponed: Screen are Larke 0

Groce 0 Pestponed: Screen are Albertia.
Group three: Germany 2 Pirkand 0; Moldove 0 N Iroland 0 Group four: Prace 2 Amenta 0; Russia 6 Andorra 1; Ukrains 1 Iceland 1. Group size: San Marino 0 Spain 6. Group severe: Austrasjen 0

Romaria 1; Liectenstein 0 Portugal 5: Siovalue 0 Hungary 0. Group etght: Postpowed: Crocks v Netta. Yuposiavia v FYR Macedonia. Group size: Uthusnia 1 Estonia 2: Scotland 1 Czech Republic 2.

NATIONWIDE CONFERENCE: Forest
Green 1 Hedresford 0

UNBBOND LEAGUE: Brist division: Congleton 0 Notherfield Kendel 0

DR MARTENS LEAGUE: Middand division: PC Werwick 1 Redditch 3; Sofihul
Boro 1 Conderlord 2. Southern division: St Leonards 3 Andover 1. League eug: Semititud, second leg: Sutten Coldfield 1 Boelon 0 (Sutten wn 3-2 on aggregate), PONTIN'S LEAGUE: Premier division: Britishon 3 Biactotum 1. Flest division:
Britishman 3 Biactotum 1. Flest division:

port 13 Pontypridd 16 CLUB MATCH: Bieckheath 17 Royal

Mawared and Maridnour. fancies first have to rise above their own generation. The bet-to step up in trip but is quoted 10-1 along with Sagamix.

While these temptations foster interest in the new Flat season, National Hunt is not yet ready to forfeit its right to the headlines. Richard Dun-woody, on the cusp of Peter Scudamore's all-time record for career wins, heads to Newton Abbot tomorrow in his quest for the three he still requires. He will doubtless add to the gate at Wincanton on Monday, too, if remaining on the brink.

Jumping highlight of the Easter holiday programme is the Jameson Irish National at Fairyhouse. Len Lungo, trainer of Celtic Giant, has been persuaded that the ground will not be loo soft for his Cheltenham winner, who was re-

FOR THE RECORD

PALMA, Spain: Olympic Chreses.
Regetta (efter day one): 49er chaes (efter 4 races): 1, M Hestbek and J Persson (Den) 11pts; 2, F Bruni and G Bruni (t) 13; 3, M Audineau and J Festiner and S Historices; 15; 5, T Robinson and J Estor and S Historices; 15; 5, T Robinson and J Estor (17; 31, A and t Budgen 59, Finar chaes, cales 3 races): 1, I Amelia (SA) 8; 2, M Kusneierwicz (Fo) 11; 3, F Lod (Swe) 17, British Fischings: 5, I Percy 19; 11, D Mellor 36; 12, J Les 58, Tormado class (efter 3 races): 1, O Bundock and J Fottes (Aus) 10; 2, F O Torne and P G Serventi (II) 12; 3, J Mouriac and P Mourioc (Fr) 16, British Pacchage: 7, H Syles and S Roche 42; 20, R Wiston and W Howden 61, Mishrat Itemate (after 2 races); 1, M del Carmen Vaz Parda (Sp) 3; 2, A Lux (Gar) 3; 3, A Galtecta (Po) flots. Printish Plachages; 7, C Johnston 16; 23; J Cague 55, Silishrat Malle (efter 2 races); 1, F Duthi (Fr) 3, 2, M Meleck (Po) 3; 3, N Beachdou (Fr) 4, British Plachage; 17, D Ticley 19; 23, N Demposy 29; 28, G Rogors 31; 46, G Monck 48; 61, 2 Profitta 6; Europe chaes (after 3 races); 1, H Montific (Sp) 8; 2, A Mason (NZ) 9; 3, C Brouwer (Neith) 10. British Plachage; 23, J Singleton 43.

HONG KONG: World short-course champlonships: Men: 200m freestyle: 1. I Thorpe (Aus.) 1min 43.28sec (world record); 2. M Klm (Aus.) 1:43.76; 3, P van der Hoogenband (Neth) 1:44.39. 50m beckstroke: 1, R. Falcon (Cube) 24.34sec; 2, M Sternbids (Pol) 24.41: 3, M Welsh (Aus.) 24.70. 50m breatstroke: 1, O Kraevski (Un) 27.40sec; 2, P Issinson (Swe) 27.57, 3, R Lutoli (Swetz) 27.59. 400m mediley: 1, M Durn (Aus.) 4min 06.05sec; 2. M Woulde (Neth) 4:09.29; 3, F Hvild (Sp.) 4:10.92, 4 x 100m threestyle: 1, Australia 3min 11.21sec (Commonwealth record): 2, Netherlands 3:11.57; (European record): 3,11.57; 3, Sweden 4:12.69; 4, Great Britain 4:14.49 (national record). Women: 200m butterfly: 1, M Jacobsen (Den) 2min 05.52sec; 2, P Thomes (Aus) 2:06.53; 3, S Skou (Den) 2:06.25; 3, S Skou (Den) 2:06.26; 7, M Peoder (GB) 2:10.76 (reat, 2:10.21, British record). 50m breest-strotes: 1, M Tarelio, (Japen) 30.05sec; 2, P heyns (SA) 30.98; 3, Hen Xue (China) 31.24; 7, Z Beller (GB) 31.55, 400kn mod-ley: 1, Y (Moortkova (Uro) 4min 32.32sec; 2, J Meter (Cen) 4:34.90; 3, L Becera (Sp) 4:38.44, 4 x 200m treestyle: 1, Sweden 7min 51.70sec (world record); 2, Greet Britain 7:53.96 (Commonwealth record); 3, Australia 7:55.81.

SUNDERLAND: Girobank Tour: Men: Second round: N Gould (Acon) br J Cairs (S Wales) 6-0, 6-2, J Fox (Jinos) br M Trudgeon (Corrwal) 7-5, 6-2; J Smith (Northernis) bit R Matheson (W Scotland) 7-6, 1-0 net; O Crawley (Norfolk) bit V Snyman (SA) 6-2, 6-3. Guarter-finels: Gould bit S Harston (Esset) 6-4, 6-4, P Hand (Berks) bit J Mannay (Yorks) 6-3, 6-3, Smith bit Fox 6-3, 6-2; R Hanger (Dorset) bit Crawley 6-2, 6-0. Semil-finals: Gould bit Hand 6-0, 6-3; Harnger bit J Smith 6-3, 6-3. Final: Gould bit Hanger 6-0, 6-3; Women: Quester-finals: L Perkins (Durham and Cleveland) bit C Udote (Nigorie) 6-3, 6-0, J Osman (Sussed) bit N Trander (Northumberland) 6-2, 6-3; Y Doyle (Ire) bit A Blow (Leics) 6-0, 6-1; M Berry (Sudok) bit G Atherion (Lancs) 6-3, 6-3. Semi-finals: Oeman bit Perkins 6-3, 6-3. Doyle bit Berry 0-3, 6-0. Finals: Doyle bit Osman 6-3, 6-2. SOUTH CAROLINA: WITA Family 6-3, 6-0. Final: Doyle bt Osman 6-3, 6-2. SOUTH CAROLINA: WTA Pamily Circle Cup: Second round: M Seles (US) bt O Barabanchikova (Bela) 6-3, 6-0; P Schnyder (Switz) bt I. Raymond (US) 8-4, 8-2; E Lithon/seva (Russ) bt A-G S-dot (Fr) 6-1, 6-1; H Nagyova (Slovakia) bt R Grande (II) 6-1, 6-2; M Hingts (Switz) bt S Pischie (Austra) 6-3, 7-5, C Martines (Spi bt A Decheume-Belteret (Fr) 6-3, 6-0; S Fairins (II) bt V Rusno Pascuel (Sp) 7-5, 4-6, 6-3; A Gless (Ger) bt R Drágomir (Rom) 6-3, 6-4; 1 Mejoli (Cro) bt I Spirtes (Rom) 1-6, 6-4, 6-2.

SNOW REPORTS

SKI STOW Andorra Soldeu Austria Obergurdi Soll St Anton 70 80 Good Stustry Heavy Sun 28/3 40 265 Good Open Verled 40 140 Good Slustry Verled 70 470 Good Open Varied Canada Lake Louise France Alpe d'Huez Avoriaz La Clusaz La Plagne La Tania Les Arcs 150 162 Good 31/3 149 340 Good Open Varied 225 245 Fair Susty Started 30 280 Good Starty Varied 150 230 Starty Starty Varied
161 239 Good Open Varied
18 230 Good Open Varied
120 230 Good Open Varied
120 230 Good Open Varied
120 230 Good Open Varied
25 100 Good Open Varied
50 198 Good Open Varied 28/3 27/3 28/3 28/3 27/3 27/3 27/3 27/3 Tignes Val Thorens Valmorel Italy Cervinia viend

10 110 Good Open Spring Sun 11

110 110 Good Open Spring Sun 12

125 230 Good Sustry Herry Sun 1 1 27,

70 300 Good Hard Spring Sun 11 27,

70 300 Good Open Spring Sun 1 27,

50 100 Good Open Spring Sun 1 27,

70 300 Good Hard Spring Sun 9 22,

70 300 Good Open Spring Sun 9 22,

70 300 Good Open Varied Sun 8 27/3

50 100 Good Open Varied Sun 10

125 145 Good Open Spring Sun 125 145 Open Sun 125 Contina Livigno M di Campiglio Crans Montana http://www.ektchrorco.nk

مكذا سالاصل

مكذا من الأصل Tour of Flanders disrupted as fallout from 'Festina Affair' continues

Cycling in chaos as police act

By JEREMY WHITTLE

enveloped the 1998 Tour de France erupted again yesterday, threatening the Tour of Flanders World Cup race that is due to take place this weekend. Daniel Baal, the president of the French Cycling Federation and vice-president of the International Cycling Un-ion (UCI), and riders and management from Mapei, the world's No I professional team, were formally investigated by Belgian and French au-

Baal was formally charged by the French judiciary in Lille yesterday morning with doping offences as the fallout from the "Festina Affair" last July continued to devastate professional cycling's administrative hierarchy.

Meanwhile, in Belgium, the Three Days of De Panne stage race was thrown into chaos as Patrick Léfevère, the Mapei team manager, was taken into custody, along with Tom Steels, his team's former Tour de France stage winner, who was leading the race. Under Belgian law, they can be kept in custody for up to 24 hours. The police action outraged Hein Verbruggen, the UCI president, who described the detendon of Léfevère and his riders as "an attack on cycling". Verbruggen also defended Baal, his deputy. "I'm sure that the French Federation have done everything in their power in the war against doping," Verbruggen said. "I have complete confidence in Daniel Baal." Léfevère and his team were

A ...

Tarriot 🛊 :

" in his g

 $_{1},_{2},_{3},_{6},$

 $\{a_i, a_i\}_{i=1}^n$ prevented from starting the third stage of the race after a package found at the Courtrai depot of the DHL courier company, addressed to the Mapei team hotel, was passed on to police amid allegations that it contained a range of doping products. The Belgian authori-ties have so far confirmed only that amphetamines were found in the package.

Lefevere was being questioned by Belgian police as the stage got under way, al-though, on hearing of his detention, several team manag-ers and riders refused to continue and the stage was cancelled. After Léfevére had been detained, all the Mapei riders, including Johan Museeuw, the former world champion, and Michele Bartoli, the world No l, were also taken in for questioning.

"We're trying to establish whether there was a link between the destination of this package and the Mapei team." Louis Deneckere, the Belgian prosecutor, said. "The inquiry is only in its preliminary stages, but it may yet affect the smooth running of the Tour of Flanders."

At the same time, in Lille, Baal was protesting his innocence after spending four hours being interviewed and then charged by Judge Patrick Keil, who has led the French investigation since last summer. "All the charges against me have no foundation." Baal, one of the most voluble recent critics of the ethical decay in professional cycling, said.

Museeuw, centre, and fellow members of the Mapei team were taken for questioning by Belgian police yesterday

Earlier this week, Richard Virenque, the leader of the Festina team that was expelled from the Tour de France last year, and Roger Legeay, team manager of the Credit Agricole team that includes Chris Boardman, of Great Britain, were also formally charged by the French authorioes under 1989 anti-doping legislation. Virenque was charged with conspiracy to make available and use doping products and with conspiracy to import, purchase and make available poisonous substances.

According to the "ethical code" introduced by the Société du Tour de France last autumn, riders facing investigation for doping offences are liable to be excluded from the race. The possible exclusion of Virengue, still a French national hero, will provide a stern test of the Tour organisation's resolve.

Late yesterday afternoon, Jean-Marie Leblanc, the director-general of the Tour, arrived at the Palais de Justice in Lille to meet Judge Keil after eight hours of interviews with the French police, during which he was placed in custody but not charged. An hour later, Leblanc emerged and declared that Judge Keil had been "satisfied" with his answers. In total, 13 people, including riders, team managers, masseurs, pharmacists, administrators and team doctors have been charged since the investireaching its final stages.

ifax front row.

Museeuw and Bartoli are both past winners of the Tour of Flanders and are favourites for the race this year, which starts in Bruges on Sunday morning and is scheduled to pass through Museeuw's home town of Gistel. However, the participation of the Mapei team, if not the event itself, is now thought to be gaoons began last July. The inquiry is now thought to be

Andrade and Goydos contin-

"You can play it if you want to or drop it if you want to," Carmen said. Faldo, whose in-

Misty-eyed Faldo seeks rule clarity

FROM JOHN HOPKINS, GOLF CORRESPONDENT

FOG delayed the start of the BellSouth Classic here yesierday morning. A visitor from Great Britain would have found a familiar scene had he been at this sprawling venue just before 7am, when the Tournament Players' Club at Sugarloaf in Duluth, a suburb of Atlanta, was wreathed in a light fog. The visibility was poor and there was damp-ness and cold hanging in the Play was delayed for two hours for the fog 10 lift and, when it did, Nick Faldo was one of the first to start. He, Billy Andrade and Paul Goydos were playing in the group immediately behind David Duval, the man of the moment in golf in the United States.

Faldo birdied the 2nd hole, a short par three, to move to one under par and was proceeding steadily until he nearly got caught in another rules tangle. rather like the one that saw him disqualified from the Players Championship last Sun-

On the 6th, Faldo's second shot, a lay-up, ended in casual water, from which he dropped out. His ball rolled into ground under repair and he was about to play it when Andrade urged caution, as Corey Pavin had not in Jacksonville. Florida, on Sunday, "If you're not sure Nick, you'd better get a rules official," Andrade ued with the hole while Faldo waited for Steve Carmen, a rules official, to come and give his ruling.

stinct had been to play the ball

A feature of this course is the enormous distances between greens and tees. The 8th tee is 225 yards from the 7th green. for example. This adds many minutes to a round. In fact. Greg Norman, the designer, may have put the cause of walking around a golf course, rather than riding in a buggy, back ten years by the way he has laid out this course, which does not so much sit on rolling land as sprawl all over it.

It is said that you walk nine miles when you play one round which is clearly silly because it means that almost everyone is going to have to take a buggy. I suspect that the distances between greens and tees, when added together. would total a 5.000-plus yard course.

Faldo dropped a stroke on the 7th when his second shot ran over the back of the green and he could not chip back on to the putting surface, but then birdied the 9th to go out in 35. one under par. By his standards, this was an encouraging lan Woosnam who had reed off on the 10th at much the same time as Faldo had begun from the Ist, reached his turn in 36, level par. He was six strokes behind Grant Waite. the leader, who had played! holes, and five behind David Frost, who had six holes of his first round still to play. Duval, who had birdied the 4th hole, then added a string of three consecutive birdies starting at the 10th to be four

Hanley has no Central reservations

THERE is no forgefting Ellery" ers after the last JJB Super Hanley at Wigan Warriors. League home match against even though the St Helens coach, who amassed 17 winner's medals in six seasons at Central Park, is playing down his long-awaited return today in charge of the sworn enemy. "I've no idea what kind of reception I'll receive from the Wigan fans," he said, "but l'il be blanking everything out apart from the game."

Even though Hanley left Wigan for Leeds in 1991, his image still adorns the place. where he ruled through his force of personality and phenomenal talent. It is a mark of his achievements there that taking the coaching job at St Helens has not diminished his standing in the eyes of most Wigan supporters. Never one for sentiment. Hanley said: "I enjoyed my days as a Wigan player, but that's history now. My only concern is to ensure my squad is mentally and physically prepared for an enormous game." Hanley extended lus clearsighted objectives to his play-

Gateshead Thunder by imposing an alcohol ban over their Easter programme of three matches in eight days. After Wigan, they face Bradford Bulls on Monday and then travel south to play London Broncos next Friday. "I believe alcohol impairs judgment and we have three difficult games." Hanley said.

John Monie, the Wigan coach, believes that St Helens are a tougher prospect under Hanley than they were last year. "We had three fairly easy wins against them, but they're paying much more attention to their defensive game." Monie said. They have unpredicta-bility in the halves, two of the biggest centres in the game in Iro and Newlove, and Ellery's

The stark truth is that St Helens have a miserable record at Central Park, winning just once in 15 visits. On the occasion of their last victory there. Good Friday two years ago, Sean Long, now the ing that leadership. The Australian Cricket Board was finally forced to admit something it had known, and covered up, since February 1995." Mark Waugh and Shane Warne who had made the original allegations of attempted match-fixing against Salim

On a busy day of rugby league,

"It was a weird feeling at first to be playing against Wigan and I took plenty of stick," Long said. "I still live in Wigan and I feel I've some-toughened the pack up."

The only name in the Wigan

Christopher Irvine focuses on a hero's return to Wigan

St Helens scrum half, was a substitute in a below-par Warriors side, who were beaten 22-10. Since changing allegiances, Long, a born-andbred Wiganer, has lost in all four games against his home-thing to prove."

Should it come down to a place-kicking duel, Long is trusting that work on his technique with Dave Alred, the multi-code kicking guru, can give him the edge over the prolific Andy Farrell, who has scored for Wigan in 50 successive cup, league and play-off

17 familiar from Hanley's days is West - Dwayne West, the teenage son of Graeme, the former Wigan forward and of Castleford Tigers, undergo coach, who is expected to make his debut from the late fitness tests.

restored to the second row and there is encouraging news on Denis Betts, who could make his comeback from an injury sustained last August at Wakefield Trinity on Monday. St Helens, who need to cut down on their errors, are disadvantaged in the forwards, with Chris Joynt still injured and Paul Davidson suspended. Chris Smith comes into contenion on the wing after a two-match ban, along with Anthony Sullivan, who has been largely overlooked by Hanley after his spell in rugby bench. Simon Haughton is

With demands for Chal-lenge Cup final ockets high. the attendance at the Stoop Memorial Ground for the visit this afternoon of Hull Sharks, in bottom place, will be watched for an upsurge in interest, as London seek to extend a six-malch winning sequence. Shaun Edwards and Robbie Beazley, who both scored in the semi-final defeat

The threads by which Andy Gregory is holding his job as coach of Salford Reds could snap with another defeat at the Willows. Gregory is already subject to an internal disciplinary procedure after public criticisms of his players, who face a Warrington Wolves side in confident mood after two opening league victo-

Gateshead have their best chance to break their duck at the Gateshead International Stadium tonight, although Wakefield, their fellow Super League newcomers, have had the better start by upsetting where they have not lost in the Super League. Lee Harland. the former Halifax player. takes his place in the Castleford second row after an Achilles' tendon injury, while Kelvin Skerrett returns to the Hal-

Faldo is hoping to find some return to form in Allanta

CRICKET

ICC hits back after attack on Dalmiya

By OUR SPORTS STAFF

THE Internacional Cricket Council (ICC) has responded to criticism of Jagmohan Dalmiya, its chairman, by Matthew Engel, the editor of Wisden Cricketers' Almanack. Engel called for the resignation of Dalmiya over the sport's match-fixing scandal. but David Richards, the ICC chief execuove, praised Dalmiya yesterday for his efforts to tackle the allegations.

tries of the need for a united international response to the allegations of match-fixing." In his notes to launch the 1999 edition of Wisden. Engel described the scandal as the worst crisis since the Bodyline tour. "It is earing away at cricket's most vital asset: its said. "Bodyline was easily solved by amending the Laws. This one is far harder to control. Cricket's response so far has been pathetic, almost frivolous. "Dalmiya almost split world cricket trying to take charge of the ICC. Having succeeded, he has given the game should resign and be replaced

Malik, the former Pakistan captain, themselves accepted thousands of dollars from an Indian bookmaker for providing innocuous informacion. Richards said: "One of Mr However, speaking about Dalmiya's main achievements the criocism. Richards said: has been persuading the coun-"In January, countries established the ICC Code of Conduct Commission. "Its role is to oversee and coordinate the investigation by member countries. The Australian Cricket Board recently conducted a thorough investigaoon arising from the Waugh-Warne allegations. reputation for fair play," he while the Pakistan govern-ment judicial inquiry is nearing completion." Richards also rejected allegations of a lack of leadership from Dalmiya, adding: "Mr Dalmiva masterminded the commercial success of the 1998 Wills International Cup. which has generated significant funds for the ambioous no leadership whatever. He ICC development programme

CANOEING

Marathon tests the toughest

CONCEIVED in a pub, the Greyhound in Pewsey, the Devizes to Westminster canoe race has developed into a great test of resilience and en-durance. The fastest boats aim to complete the 125-mile course in less than 18 hours. the record being 15hr 34min. but the majority of competitors aim merely to finish.

One such competitor, Sir Ranulph Fiennes, the Arctic explorer, will be competing with Steven Seaton, the editor of Runners World, and will be looking to better his 1998 time of 30 hours. The favourites in the blue riband K2 class for men will be Dierckx and Verduyckt, of Belgium, who came first and second in the singles category last year. However, they will need to beat Elliott and Wibrew, of Maidstone. and Morrissey and O'Meara, of Ireland, over the course that takes competitors from Devizes, along the Kennet and Avon Canal to Reading and then on to the River Thames to London. Adrian Hemery, the son of David Hemery, the Olympic 400 metres hurdles gold medal-winner, will represent Dauntseys School in a junior

SPORT IN BRIEF

Bronson suspended ATHLETICS: Bryan Bronson, of the United States, the world's leading 400 metres hurdler, has been suspended after it was revealed that he failed a drugs test in Rome on July 14 last year. Bronson, 26, the bronze medal-winner at the 1997 world championships in Athens, clocked the third-fastest time ever -47.03sec — when winning the United States ofle last June. However, after winning in Rome in the following month, a laboratory analysis of Bronson's urine sample was found to have "abnormal steroid concentrations". The delay followed a medical report that took six months to reach the IAAF.

Hingis faces tough task

TENNIS: Martina Hingis needed five match points before defeating Sylvia Plischke, of Austria, 6-3, 7-5 in the second round of the Family Circle Cup women's tournament in South Carolina, Hingis meets Conchita Martinez, of Spain, in the third round. Martinez, the No 10 seed, beat Alexia Dechaume-Balleret of France 6-3, 6-0, and has lost only three games in the previous two rounds.

Warren loses Woodhall

BOXING: Richie Woodhall, the World Boxing Association super-middleweight champion, has followed Naseem Hamed and severed all links with Frank Warren. He has terminated two agreements he had with Warren, clong irreconcilable differences. The 30-year-old, who joined Warren in May 1997, will now be self-managed, although it is unclear who will promote his next contest.

Pakistan cruise to victory

■ CRICKET: Jiaz Ahmed and Inzamam-ul-Hag hit unbeaten half-centuries as Pakistan cruised to a seven-wicket victory over India in the the Pepsi Cup tournament in Mohali. Both sides had already qualified for the final on Sunday in Bangalore, having beaten Sri Lanka. Chasing a modest victory target of 197. Pakistan reached the target in 42 overs.

A car with 7 seats that's fun to drive, I wonder what that looks like? Call now to find out. 0345 400 800

ZAFIRA. A work of genius.

'It cannot be good to look overseas'

he present Five Nations Championship might be highlighting a dilemma. What is to happen to the Lions? This may appear to be a premature question, seeing that they are not due to embark on their next tour, to Australia and New Zealand. for another two years yet, but, in fact, time is short.

Debates about the future of British Isles tours have arisen largely at home, hardly ever in the countries that the Lions visit. The home nations can travel individually to the southern hemisphere as often as and that' they like, but they stir a mere ripple of interest in comparison to the tidal wave that consumes these courtries whenever their territory is entered by the Lions. Their reputation and charisma cannot be replaced. There may be some romantic notion attached to their presence, the old collective kinship, perhaps, or the idea that the Lions represent a cavalier style of rugby that is not so obvious a

'Rules can be bent this way

The visit of the Lions represents a good pay day. The revenue from such a tour far exceeds that which a visit from any one of the separate home im-ions might bring. It is oot the actual existence of the Lions that is in question - that matter has been resolved, for the time being at any rate - it is more a question of who characteristic of their own national teams — even if such a statement is not true to the same extent these days - or, simply and less charitably, they present the oppor-tunity for the colonials to give the old country a good thumping. However varied the reasons may be, a clamorous welcome awaits

There is also an eminently practical reason, too, one which is unavoidably impor-tant. The host unions know on which side

their bread is buttered.

will play for the Lions in future, and who will coach them. These queries were the subject of debate over a cosy lunch recentconvivial watering holes. Around the table were players who, in a previous incarnation, had been Li-

Former players of a certain vinage find, to a combination of fun and concern, that it is time for a re-union. Troublingly, however en-joyable, these anniversaries appear to come around at a somewhat faster rate than they once did and point to a more solemn truth. tt was all such a long time ago.

It was Tom Kiernan, chairman of the European Rugby Cup, but who less stressfully once held the more agreeable positions of captain of Ireland and the Lions, who prompted the debate about the future constitution of British tales touring teams. This was at the time when the argument arose about the possibility that Joel Stransky might qualify, on residential grounds, to play fly half for England. If this were to be the case, might he then not also qualify to play for the Lions? Thus, having once been a Springbok who dropped the famous goal that sent his country into the history books

GERALD DAVIES

Rugby Union Commentary

by winning the World Cup, the possibility could arise that he might return to his homeland to play against them. Shane Howarth and Brett Sinkinson are playing for Wales this season and John Leslie for Scotland. The trio are all originally from New Zealand, but, on the form that they have shown in recent internationals, they would be automatic Lions candidates. What change of flavour might this represent in the louring par-ty? There are others in this sea-soo's championship who bave similar qualifications. todeed, as Kiernan observed whimsically. what will be the mood of future re-There was no mistaking the alleiances of those around our table. Bob Hiller. Peter Larter and Tony Horton, all of firm English pedi-gree: Roger Arneil. a pure Scot. John Taylor and Gareth Ed-

The rules can be bent this way and that, we can be of a tolerant nature about who can and cannot qualify, but, in the final analysis. it cannot surely be for the good of British and Irish rugby that we have to look overseas for players to salvage our international repu-

wards, of Wales, and Kiernan himself. Future conversations, for sure, might ring to different ac-

Let us take another step. Who would coach the Lions? Two of the present national coaches are not home-grown. Both Warren Gatland, the Ireland coach, and Graham Henry, who acts in a similar capacity for Wales, are from New Zealand. Before Clive Woodward took over his responsibilioes, there was a well-publicised search by England for a coach from overseas. Henry was approached at the time. After Woodward was appointed. John Mitcheil, also a New Zealander, became his assistant. The field of choice is limited. The candidates narrow further. Scotland might try this man and hat, but when lan Mc-Geechan decided to stay out of the international fray, they turned, as ever, to the transcendant figure of Jim Telfer, a nonpareil in Scottish

If he could be persuaded. through his deep sense of his own Scottishness, to do his bit once more for Scotland, it seems doubtful whether he might be persuad-

the Lions again. He has been down that route often enough. He has given freely of his services already. There is, therefore, a short-age of indigenous coaching tal-

Clearly, coaches from New Zealand are capable of raising standards in a way others cannot, but praising them serves only to highlight, at the same time, the dearth of coaches of top calibre in this country. For all the increasing profile of rugby and for all the money that has been spent on its development, there is, in having to turn to tbe talents of outsiders, an admission of failure. A formal coaching structure with training, teaching and assessment courses was the brainchild of a Welshman, Ray Williams, yet Wales have benefited least. The story is hardly better elsewhere in these islands. It is a deficiency that requires urgent at-

David Hands looks at two England outsiders duelling for attention

Forgotten men vie for centre stage

WHILE the great fly half debate has raged in England — should it be Mike Can or Paul Grayson? is Jonny Wilkinson ready yet? - two men stand just outside the circle. Mark Mapletoft and Alex King could be forgiven for thinking that they lie beyond even the peripheral vision of the England management, despite their selection this season in A-ream squads.

Both have been capped, though King has played for a total of less than 50 minutes in his two games for England. the first against Argentina in 1997, when his appearance allowed an out-of-sorts Mapletoft to move to full back, the second against South Africa last year. They have kept each other company for the successful England A side this year. though King has been limited to one appearance, as a replacement.

They will be together again at Loftus Road on Sunday, though on opposing sides. Mapletoft will be part of the Gloucester squad, but Gloucester are too coy to say that he will play in his favoured No 10 challenge Wasps for a place in the Tetley's Bitter Cup final. Injuries are rife in the Kingsholm camp at the moment and Mapletoft could be on duty at full back, centre or even among the replacements. All things being equal, King will be in his usual, pivotal role during a season in which his powers of recuperation have been tested to the limit. There were few sadder figures than the 24-year-old during England's depleted tour of the southern hemisphere last summer: he made two appearances, one against a New Zealand Academy XV, the other against New Zealand Maoris. The Academy scored 50 points against England, the Maoris 62 and King was one of those dispatched home from New Zealand rather than see out the final week of the tour in South Africa. Ironically, it was against South Africa in December that King indicated his emergence from the depths into which he had plunged in the summer. Required among the replacements after Grayson sustained a knee injury, he played the last quarter of the match and displayed a confidence that many had thought was beyond him. He has always been prepared to work hard, be it oo his tactical kicking, his goal-kicking or his reading of the game. Perhaps, in some ways. his approach has been too selfeffacing: fly halves need to be arrogani but King is a more unobtrusive type of player. When he is on song, he makes space for others, so his return to form is testimony not only to the repair work done by his club, but also to his own

King, left, and Mapletoft will hope to press their World Cup claims when they meet in the Tetley's Bitter Cup semi-final at Loftus Road on Sunday

King emerged, almost fully formed, as a first-class player from Bristol University, a composed footballer capable of running a game, though without the flamboyance of Maple-

NOBODY will ever be able to accuse Warren Gatland, the Ireland coach, of over-use of the panic button. After the now customary defeat at Murrayfield last month, many new faces were anticipated for the match against Italy at

Lansdowne Road on April 10,

Seven changes and two posi-tional switches have been made, but, with one exception, all the personnel are Gat-land men, tried and true. Brian O'Driscoll, the replacement back, who is uncapped, is the only genuine newcomer

The alterations to the team that started against Scotland placing Jonathan Bell, Eric Elwood for David Humphreys, to the senior squad.

but not a bit of it.

ter, now 27, basks in the limelight and has the pace which King does not - to score tries from deep positions, as his tally of six in the Premiership this season con-

Ciaran Scally for Conor

McGuinness. Justin Fitz-patrick for Paul Wallace, Ross

Nesdale for Keith Wood. Trevor Brennan for Andy

Ward and Victor Costello for

Eric Miller. Peter Clohessy

moves from loose to tight-head prop. his original posi-tion, and Dion O'Cuinneagain switches from blind to open-side flanker. Henderson. Scally, Brennan and Costello came on as replacements

Matt Mostyn. 23, an Australian with Irisb grandparents, Mike Mullins, 28, a New Zealander with a father born in Ireland, and Shane Mc-Donald, 27, another New Zealander, are in the Ireland A

There was a time when King might have become a Gloucester player. There were talks at Kingsholm in 1996. when he was the Rugby Football Union's young player of the season, but his roots lie in team to play their Italy coun-

Gareth Davies, who, as Cardiff chief executive, has been at the forefront of the club's fight with the Welsh Rugby

Union this season, is to succeed Ossie Wheatley as chairman of the Sports Council for Wales. The appointment, worth £30,000 a year for a three-day week, means that Davies has had to give up his position at Cardiff. who.

to find a formula for returning to the union that has fined them heavily for playing in the Anglo-Welsh series.

Paul Turner, another former Wales fly half, who joined Saracens from Bedford along with Swansea, have still terparts on April 9.

Gatland indulges in reshuffle

By Karl Johnston and David Hands

Sussex and Wasps was his eventual choice. Nevertheless, he will sympathise with Ma-

"My old man reckoned you have to take your chances backs, has been released by the Watford-based club.

which put ten players on the

Paul's ability and commitment," Mark Evans, the director of rugby, said. "We hope his skills will shortly be enjoyed by another top side." Yesterday, however, Turner was being linked with Basing-

Stoke.

IRELAND: C O'Shea (London Irish); J Bishop (London Irish), K Magge (Baim), R Henderson (Wasps), G Dempsey (Terenue College). E Elwood (Galwegans), C Scally (UCD). J Ritzpatrick (Dunganson), R Nesdale (Newzasile), P Cloheasy (Young Munster), P Johns (Saracers, captan), J Davidson (Castres), T Brennen (St Mary's College), O O'Culmineagain (Sale), V Costello (St Mary's College), B Contest (St Mary's College), D Cortesty (Cork Consplution), A Ward (Ballynahnch), P Wallace (Saracers), K Wood (Harlequins)

This does not reflect upon transfer list last month.

there's few enough of them, Mapletoft said, with the feelmg of one who, even when England were scraping for players to tour last summer. found that he was not one of

Nor has this season been particularly easy. Mapletoft scored two of his tries at Richmond last September, which remains Gloucester's only away victory of the Premiership season. He has had to accept the presence of Simon Mannix in competition for the No 10 shirt, he has learnt to suffer periods on the bench but still he bounces back, as a runner and goalkicker. Against Ireland A, he scored two tries and four conversions in a match-winning display. He now stands third in the list of all-time scorers in A internarionals, with 109 from only

Both players still harbour fantasies about playing in a World Cup. There are precious few stages now upon which to impress Clive Wood-ward, the England coach, but Sunday is one of them and the winner will have a Twickenham occasion on which to England decide to put Best foot forward

the Rugby Football towards the sevens game is changing. England. who rejected an invitation to compete in Hong Kong last week, are to take part in the new International Rugby Board Sevens Grand Prix, which starts in December. with Dick Best as coach. The final event will be held either at Twickenham or the Madejski Stadium, Reading in May.

Best is looking forward to the challenge, "When I look at the England team, I see the likes of Lawrence Dallaglio, Tim Rodber, Matt Dawson and Nick Beal, who hadn't been heard of in 1993 [when England won the World Sevens," he said. "That is the value of Sevens. In 1993. Lawrence was plucked from there is a chance for a rapid rise to fame for these boys."

Nose for trouble

Rupert Moon, the Llanelli and former Wales scrum half? An oncoming lock forward or a hospital pass perhaps? No, the player who, on his own admission, does not possess the smallest oose in the world, lists drunken girls as his greatest dread.
"When I'm out on the town, they always want to grab hold of my nose to see whether it is real or not," he said. "When there's a lot of them, it can be really scary."

Ali cleans up

Claim to fame . . . Dan Lyle, the Bath and United States No 8. grew up in Louisville. Kentucky, where he was renowned as a sportsman. Not the best-known, however: his mother can recall a time when she was a girl in high school and her classroom cleaner was a teenage Cassius Clay, working overtime to earn some pocket-money.

Kick starters Jonny Wilkinson is England's latest kicking wonderkid, but the hunt is already on for the his successor. As part of his testimonial year, Jon Callard is launching a nationwide tour this summer in a bid to unearth the next generation of goalkickers.

Shorts shrift Dave Lougheed, the Leicester and Canada wing, tried to get into the casino at Monte Carlo recently, but was turned away shorts. No problem: Lougheed, a strapping oft Zin and 14st, borrowed some trousers from a woman in his group and tried again.

"Perfect sir." the doorman said. The cut was a little tight, but Lougheed enjoyed the experience, by all accounts.

Sefton appeal Sefton Rugby Club has launched appeals to help two stalwarts who were paralysed last year. Dave Hawkyard sustained a serious neck injury in a game at Southport and is still in the spinal injuries unil at Southport Hospital. He has A second tragedy occurred when Alan Pennington, 51. a former coach, chairman and president, fell from a riverbank while fishing and was also paralysed below the neck. Donations can be made to the Hon. Secretary, Sefton RUFC, Thornhead Lane, Upper crust "England have a good balance. As well as some crusty old players, like Liverpool, L12.

Leyfield Road, West Derby,

Martin Johnson and Jason Leonard, they've also got some younger players, like Jonny Wilkinson." Says who: Says Wayne Shelford, the former New Zealand No 8 and captain, who, as a "crusty" player himself, set Northampton on the upward path in the early 1990s. He also comments on the "uncomplicated" nature of the Five Nations Championship. "Super 12 teams try to be too clever and do too much with the ball close in, when they should move it wide at pace."

he says. Praise indeed. Beached Wales Life's a beach. Or at least it will be in London in June with the launch of beach rugby. The event is sponsored by Fuller's Brewery, which is bringing 750 tonnes of white sand to Hurlingham Park. Some of the world's top former stars will captain the eight international teams, which include England (Peter Winterbottom), Scotland (Gavin Hastings), Wales (Jonathan Davies) and Ireland (Jim Staples).

MARK SOUSTER

WORD-WATCHING

(c) A mass of rock which has solidified under ground from an intrusion of magma. Plutons have varying shapes, sizes and rela-tionships with the invaded rock surrounding them.

LOOSE SILKY BENT (c) An annual weed which flowers in early summer, and grows up to 1 metre high, ti has broadly opening spreading pannicles, with one-flowered, awned spikelets.

(a) A roughly circular depression in the landscape, from which water drains into an underground limestone cave system. The term should be used only for a depression formed by the collapse of underlying limestone strata. TAMBOUR

(a) A flexible shutter used as a closure for cabinets, desks, bedside cupboards, etc. It is made by glueing strips, inserted at either end, into a groove, to strips of linen or canvas.
SOLUTION TO WINNING MOVE

1 ... Qxa2+! 2 Nxa2 Nb3 checkmate

Beeston prepare for Spanish threat

BEESTON venture into Europe over the Easter weekend for the A division of the Cup Winners' Cup in Amsterdam where their ability will be tested during the next four days. Encouraged by their progress in the National League premier division, Beeston begin their challenge today with a match against Atletic Terrassa, of Spain. Thereafter, they will face oppo-sition in pool B from Dinamo Ekalerinburg, of Russia, and Lille, the French club.

The Spanish side will field several internationals and present the toughest opposi-

HOCKEY

By Sydney Friskin and Janet Ruff

tion in a pool that Beeston must win to qualify for the fi-nal on Easter Monday. Three Rock Rovers, of Ireland, are in the other pool, along with Amsterdam, the hosts, Poctowiec, of Poland. and Minsk, from England made a flying start

Belarus. Beeston's main hopes rest with Keegan, the short-corner expert, who has scored 15 goals in the league, ten from open play. Supplementary firepower can be provided by Cordon. Hammond and Huckle. However, Beeston will be without West and Sully, who are both representing England at under-18 level in Belfast.

to a quadrangular tournament in Buenos Aires when they trounced South Africa 6-0 on Wednesday thanks largely to a hat-trick from Giles.

Slough will endeavour to in the women's European Cup for the first time this weekend in The Netherlands. The English champions have by far the best record in Europe of any British club, but have only five runners-up trophies Ray Burd, the coach, will field an all-international lineup, with the defence marshalled by Karen Brown and strike power supplied by Jane Smith and Mandy Nicholson, of England, and Sue MacDonald, of Scotland. Edinburgh. the Scottish champions, are without Rhona Simpson, their injured Great Britain striker. In the Cup Winners' Cup in Terrassa, Spain, British hopes rest with Clifton and Glasgow

CURLING

Scotland in fine form

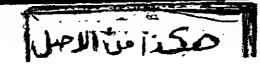

THE Ford world championships get under way tomor-row at St John, New Brunswick and the Scotland men's squad, skipped by Hammy McMillan, with Peter Loudon and Euan MacDonald, is essentially the Warwick Smith team of earlier this season, with Smith oow playing at No 3. They are in fine fettle.

They were one of two teams to beat the Canada squad led by Jeff Stoughton, the former world champion, in the recent World Tour final Scotland round-robin Sunday night.

By then, McMillan will hope to have had wins against States behind him.

The new Scotland women's squad of Debbie Knox. Wendy Bell, Judith Stobbie and Isabel Hannen face Germany, the European champions, in the first of nine preliminary rounds tomorrow morning. followed by Canada in

Rob Hughes gives a warning to the Great Britain Davis Cup team

Beware Americans bearing praise

f Einstein was right and nationalism really is an infantile disease, then stay clear of National Indoor Arena in Birmingham this weekend. There is going to be an epidemic of the stuff. a fehrile, contagious explosion of Britishness as the majority in a packed arena try to transmit to Tim Henman and Greg Rusedski the will to bring back to these shores the Davis Cup last won in the days of fred Perry almost 70 years

The first-round tie, against the original enemy, the United States, where the competition was invented a century ago, suggests, on the computer rankings, that our boys have the ascendancy. Indeed, with America's finest declining to take the challenge, with Ameri-can tennis uncharacteristically talking up the Britons and talking down their own secondstring squad, led by Jim Couri-er and Todd Martin, there is another disease we need to inoculate against: complacen-

Beware the sting of Americans. Beware those who bemoan the absence of Pete Sampras, who said: "My country? No thanks". Beware the double-talk of Andre Agassi, who in December purred on about the Davis Cup giving some kind of special energy above the call of dollars on the ATP circuit, hut who has now recoiled with the excuse that he cannot play in a team that drops his favourite doctor.

And be careful of the statistics that place Henman and Rusedski in the top II, Martin at No IO and "old" Courier down at No 52. Courier is not so old that, at 28, he has forgotten the relentless hunter that made him, in 1993 and 1994, the most warrior-like tennis player on any surface anywhere in the world.

This has been a week of historic comebacks. In the United States, Wayne Gretzky has defied disc trouble in his neck to put beyond doubt that he is the most amazing gather-er of scoring records in ice hockey. In the Caribbean, Brian Lara has reinvented his mastery at the crease. So how much would it take for Couri-

Courier, Agassi, Tom Gullikson, the coach, Sampras and Martin celebrate winning the Davis Cup in 1995; only Courier and Martin will be in Birmingham er, who stands among only six tennis players to reach the fi-nals of all four grand slam 'At 28, Courier is not so old that his game cannot become inspired by patriotism' tournaments, to become inspired by patriotism? Mar-week's newspapers, the more powerful) sex did not compete a century ago.

play that is the core of Davis What began on the lawns of Longwood Cricket Cluh in Boston now spreads indoors, Dwight Davis, the Harvard scholar, politician and philanwhere Britain has chosen a thropist, when he commissurface that might suit the serve-and-volley styles of Hen-man and Rusedski. And what sioned the most handsome of silver bowls in 1899, could not have envisioned that ap-proaching 150 nations would was once, apparently, nationalism cloaked in gentility could well be decided by the unity between two leading now seek to hold it. He may have sensed the compulsion, between the United States and Brits - one born and bred here, the other gratefully adopted — and the baying what was then the British Isles, would become an engrossing annual affair, crowd.

David Lloyd, the British Davis Cup captain, has mildly resembled Don King in calling out the patriots to take every available seat in the near-9,000 capacity hall. Lloyd went to town on this after witnessing the fanaticism in the Forum of Milan last December. There, in the final of the Davis Cup last season, 12,600 Italian tifosi chorused for 4hr 57min while Andrea Gaudenzi played above his status against Magnus

Norman, of Sweden. It was valour to the point of foolhardiness. Gaudenzi, his right shoulder injured months before, performed like a man obsessed until, at 6-6 in the final set, be could no longer lift a glass, much less swing a racket. The 1998 Davis Cup. and possibly Gaudenzi career, were lost in that muscle-tearing moment, but those who were there, including Boris Becker, Stefan Edberg, Yan-nick Noah and Vijay Amritraj - Davis Cup fighters from different cultures - all knew why Gaudenzi had to try. His was the courage of the jump jockey returning to Aintree after crushing his bones there in a fall, the effort of boxers, the will of marathon runners, the desire of a competitive man driven beyond reason by the intoxicating hour of playing for, and with.

the people. Money, which Davis never needed, came into it because, although, like most sporting ideals, the Davis Cup was born in Corinthian times, tennis is now among the elite, arguably the sport that places the dollar highest. And yet, Noah, the captain when France beat all odds to capture the prize in 1991 and capture the prize in 1991 and 1996, articulates the special affinity of the Davis Cup. "It takes individual character to win the grand slams," he has said, "but what you do in the Davis Cup is sacrifice for others. It's about sharing, it's respecting team-mates. The bonds that you have in a team and the way the crowd share and the way the crowd share and sense that are feelings above the norm in tennis." Nationalism a disease? In the right time and the right

BASKETBALL

Giants meet Sharks in classic finale

By Nicholas Harling

THE closest title race for years — how often is that phrase used? Probably every season, at a rough guess, oot just in basketball but in every sport. However, this year British basketball really does have its closest race, not just for years, but ever.

Two years ago, five clubs went into the final month with a chance of the Budweiser League title, but the Leopards eventually won with a game to spare. Last season, the Leopards and Birmingham Bullets took their dispute to the very last day. They both won their respective fixtures to finish level on points, but the Leopards retained the title on the countback of games between the clubs.

Yet when Manchester Giants and Sheffield Sharks meet this afternoon in the Nynex Arena, it will be the classic finale, with the winner taking all. Never before have the two contenders met on the last day with everything at

A week ago, the game had looked to be of no more than academic interest. Last weekend, when the Giants won away to Birmingham, the Sharks seemed certain to repeat their league and cup double of 1985. The first game against Newcastle Eagles went without hlips, but the fol-lowing day, Chester Jets, who had fallen way short of reaching the play-offs, staged the upset of the season to hring about the title showdown. Psychologically, the advantage is with the Giants, even though they lost both league fixtures between the clubs this season, the second one a fortnight ago when, after his team's controversial double overtime defeat in the Shef-field arena. Nick Nurse abused the referees. For that misdemeanour, the Giants coach was fined £300 and received a two-game ban that will not start until the quarterplace, nobody ever died of it. final play-offs next week.

The Giants, who reversed their two league losses against the Sharks in both legs of the Uni-Ball Tropby semi-final en route to winning that competi-tion, are, thanks to the resources provided by the American-based Cooke Organisation, the most expensively-built squad in the league.

Under Nurse, formerly coach of the Bullets, the Giants acquired four of the Leopards' title-winners. They were Ronnie Baker, John White, Makeeba Perry and Mike Defoe. Throw in Tony Holley, from Thames Valley Tigers, and Tony Dorsey, who joined from the Bullets, and it was easy to see why the joke pre-season was: "With egos like that, the Giants will oeed more than one ball." Somehow, Nurse found a solution.

At 29, Chris Finch, the Sharks' coach and a member of their victorious squad in 1995, has performed wonders. tf he can raise the morale of a squad thet looked demoralised on its way out of Chester. he will be worth every accolade. Uoder Finch, the Sharks are less flamboyant, but, until last weekend at least, more consistent.

That was hardly surprising since Terrell Myers, Todd Cauthorn and Wil Johnson. the core of the squad last season, all remained. The departure of Matt Gaudio, with a cruciate ligament injury. deprived the Sharks of one outstanding new recruit, but another, Travis Conlan, had already provided an extra spark, as did Peter Scantlebury, the former Eogland of all the emotions the respective casts have endured this season, nothing will compare with the torment of today. There may be no more than a point in it.

INFIE SEAS LIMIES

CONSTRUCTORS

GROUP C GROUP D

LINKS

A £40.000

MAKE THREE SELECTIONS FROM EACH OF THE FOUR GROUPS BELOW

DRIVERS

The column of figure hames below, shows the Farnasy Formula One race scores for the Australian Grand Prix

GROUP B

131] 18 J Truff

35 20 P Dirkz

138 19 R Barrichello

124 21 P de la Rose tin, while never such a winner on tour, is the most consistent

American on the circuit and has the mentality for team exclusively male because the fairer (or, according to this

Plus £15,000 in cash prizes and Grand Prix trips for runners-up The Fantasy Formula One results of the Australian Grand Prix appear below with Eddie Irvine leading the drivers on 158 points and Arrows heading the constructors with 21 points. J Kilmartin of Maidenhead, Berks, wins a pair of

GROUP A

-41 | 07 € Invine

10 J Alexi

22 41 J Horber

106 08 D Park

Benetton, Williams, Arrows, BAR and Stewart for the constructors. The winner of our fantasy title will drive away at the end of the season in a TVR Cerbera, valued at over £40,000. Second prize is £10,000 plus a trip for two to the 2000 Monaco Grand Prix. Third prize is £5,000 plus a pair of four-day passes to the 2000 British Grand Prix. To enter a team for the Brazilian GP, which offers up to 600 bonus points, or to make transfers, see details below

PARTASY FORMULA

AUSTRALIAN GRAND PRIX RESULTS

DRIVERS: Qualifying points (scored by qualifying for the start of each grand prix within the first 20 positions on the grid): Pole M Hakkinen 30 points; 2nd D Coulthard 25; 3rd M Schumacher 24: 4th R Barrichello 23; 5th H-H Frentzen 22; 6th E Irvine 21; 7th G Fisichella 20; 8th R Schumacher 19; 9th D Hill 18; 10th A Wurz 17; 11th J Villeneuve 16; 12th J Truili 15; 13th J Herbert 14; 14th P Diniz 13; 15th A Zanardi 12; 16th J Alesi 11; 17th T Takagi 10; 18th P de la Rosa 9; 19th R Zonta 8; 20th O Panis 7. Finishing points (scored for the top 20 classified positions at the end of every grand prix): 1st E Irvine 60 points; 2nd HH Frentzen 50; 3rd R Schumacher 40; 4th G Fisichella 30; 5th R Barrichello 29; 6th P de la Rosa 28; 7th T Takagi 27; 8th M Schumacher 26. (Only 8 were classified.) Lap points (one point for each lap completed): E irvine 57 points; HHH Frentzen 57; R Schumacher 57; G Fisichella 57; R Barrichello 57; P de la Rosa 57; T Takagi 57; M Schumacher 56; R Zonta 48; L Badoer 42; A Wurz 28; P Diniz 27; M Gene 25; J Trutti 25; O Panis 23; M Hakkinen 21; A Zanardi 20; D Coulthard 13; J Villeneuve 13. Improvement from starting grid to finishing position (3 points for each improved place): P de la Rosa 36 points; T Takagi 30; E Irvine 15; R Schumacher 15; H-H Frentzen 9; G Fisichella 9. Fastest lap time of grand prix M Schumacher 10 points. Penalty points Incident resulting in e driver being made to start from back of grid or pit lane (10 points deducted): M Schumacher -10 points; R Barrichello -10. Did not finish the race (10 points deducted): R Zonta -10 points; L Badoer -10; A Wurz -10; P Diniz -10; M Gene -10; J Trulli -10; O Panis -10; M Hakkinen -10; A Zanardi -10; D Coulthard -10; J Villeneuve -10; D Hill -10; J Alesi -10. Not starting after qualifying (10 points deducted): J Herbert -10 points. Speeding in the pit lane (5 points deducted): nona. CONSTRUCTORS: Finishing points (scored for the first car only in the top 20 positions at the end of every grand prix): Ferrari 30 points; Jordan 25; Williams 24; Benetion 23; Stewart 22; Arrows 21. Penalty points Incident resulting in e car being made to start from back of grid or pit lane (10 points deducted): Ferrari -10 points; Stewart -10. Elimination of a car during the race (10 points deducted): McLaren -20 points; Prost -20; Sauber -20; Minardi -20; BAR -20; Jordan -10; Williams -10; Benetton -10. Not starting after

In the pit lane (5 points deducted): none. BONUS POINTS apply to six grands prix during the 1999 Formula One championship, the first of which is the Brazilian GP. Correctly predicting winning driver: 100 points; second place: 200 points; third place: 300 points qualifying (10 points deducted): Stewart -10 points. Speeding

THE PRIZES

STAR PRIZE The manager with the top score on our fantasy leaderboard after the final race of the season will vin e £41,100 TVR Cerbera, plus e VIP trip for two to any GP next season 2ND PRIZE £10,000 plus a VIP trip for two to the 2000 Monaco GP 3RD PRIZE £5,000 plus e pair of four-day passes to the 2000 British GP INDIVIDUAL RACE WINNERS The manager of the team that scores the most points in each GP will win e pair of four-day passes, with centre transfer, for the 1999 or 2000 British Grands Prix, courtesy of Silverstone

Silverstone

TO ENTER BY PHONE

Readers in the UK and Republic of Ireland must call 0640 67 88 88 (+44 870 901 4206 from Rol). Calls last about seven minutes and must be made by Touch-tone telephone. Follow tha instructions and tap in your 12 two-digit selections in turn. The order in which you register your first three drivers will be your predictions for the 1st, 2nd and 3rd finishing places for the grands prix where bonus points apply. Then give your team name (up to 16 characters) and details. You can enter until noon on Thursday, April 8, 1999 to qualify for the Brazilian Grand Prix

TO ENTER BY POST

Complete the form, right, with your 12 two-digit selections. The order in which you register your first three drivers will be your predictions for the 1st, 2nd and 3rd finishing places for the grands prix where bonus points apply

FANTASY FORMULA ONE 24-HOUR ENTRY LINE: 0640 67 88 88 +44 870 901 4206 from the Irish Republic 0640 calls cost 60p per minute (standard tariffs apply to +44 870 calls)

Of M Halddoo

04 D Coulther 05 A Zenamii

02 M Schu

four-day passes to this year's British Grand Prix. His team, Prancers 9, scored 818 points in Melbourne and comprised M Schumacher, Irvine, Fisichella, R Schumacher, Frentzen and Takagi for the drivers and Ferrari,

> You can make a total of 12 transfers. Each transfer allows you to change one selection. You can make up to four transfers with each call. For the Brazilian GP call 0640 678 801 (+44 870 901 4240 ex UK) before noon on Thursday April 8 with your 10-digit PIN to hand. Your new team must have three selections from each of groups A, B, C and D. RESULTS SERVICE

TRANSFERS

BY PHONE: check the score and position of your team(s) after the Australian race by calling 0640 622 178 (+44 870 901 4278 ex UK) with your 10-digit PIN. BY FAX: have your 10-digit PIN ready, pick up the handset on your fax, or press the on-hook or telephone button, and dial 0991 123 714. Follow the instructions. You will receive details of your race score, the points for your drivers and constructors and your position on our leaderboard. Calls cost £1 per minute and are available in the UK only. If you have any problems, call the helpline on 0171-412 3795

THE TIMES NATWEST FANTASY FORMULA ONE ENTRY FORM

Complete this form with your credit-card details, or enclose a sterling cheque for £3 payable to Fantasy Formula One. (For readers resident outside the UK end Republic of Ireland the fee is £15.) Post it to: The Times NatWest Fantasy Formula One, Abacus House, Dudley Street, Luton LU1 1ZZ. Your entry must be received by Wednesday, April 7, 1999 to qualify for the Brazilian GP

GROUP A	AND GROUP B	DRIVERS 3rd	Mr/Mrs/Miss/Ms BLOCK CAPITALS PLEASE Surmame
			Address
ROUP C AND	GROUP D CON	STRUCTORS	Postcode
			Credit Card Pays
n Name (maximu	m of 16 characters)		Expiry date

I have read end accept the rules and wish to enter the Fantasy Formula One game.

Tean

t. On which days do you usually buy The Times? Monday Tueeday Thursday Friday Thursday Friday Times Times 2. Which other National Daily Newspaper(s) do you buy at least once a week?

Supply address of registered cardholder on a separate sheet of paper if different from that above Which National Sunday Newspaper(s) do you buy almost always (3-4 copies per month)?

quite often (1-2 copies per month)?

With NatWest MasterCard, it doesn't have to be a fantasy.

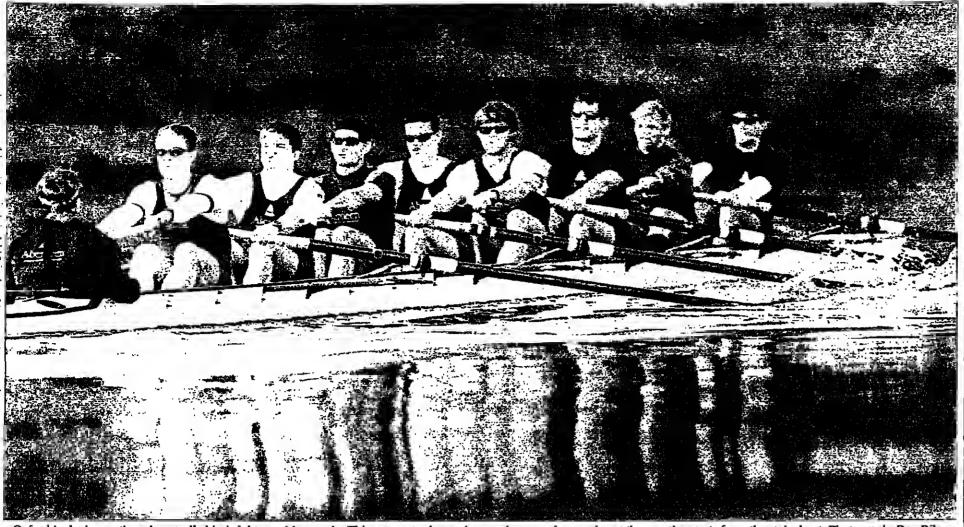

If you would prefer not to receive information and offers from organisations carefully selected by The Times, please tick

NatWest

NatWest MasterCard, the preferred card of Jordan Grand Prix.

Credit is only available to persons over the age at majority and subject to status and conditions. Written quotations are available on request from National Westminster Bank Pic, 41 Lothbury, London EC2P 2BP, or from any branch.

Boat Race: Canadian umpire lays down the law at rehearsals

Oxford looked smooth and controlled in bright sunshine on the Tideway vesterday and were also more impressive at the practice starts from the stake boat. Photograph: Roy Riley

Oxford are starting to impress

Evans: flagged intentions for the 1999 Boat Race, held rehearsals yesterday for the starting procedure for the event proper tomorrow. Evans, who changed the start pattern in

In 1993, Evans, who is from Canada, told the crews that he would be prepared to hold them for up to ten seconds between saying "set" and "go". Consternation about a possibility of such a long gap was not limited to the crews and coaches and Bob Hastings, one of the stake-boat men, whose job is to hold the racing shell in the strong tide, said: "We will let them go if we feel we are go-ing to be pulled out of the boat."

MARK EVANS, the umpire

both his previous years as um-pire, in 1991 and 1993, did so

The usual procedure of crews turning their blades in

BY MIKE ROSEWELL, ROWING CORRESPONDENT

considerable drag and Evans stipulated yesterday that the blades should not be turned in the water until he says: "Go." Both Oxford and Cambridge have been preparing for the new procedure, although not on such a strong tide as they experienced yesterday and that will be duplicated tomorrow. On their showing yesterday. Oxford seem to have mastered it better.

Oxford did three starts, one of ten strokes, and two oneminute rows at full blast in which they set off at at rate of 43½ strokes per minute and kept at 40 for half a minute with good cover. They settled the water before "go" produces 10 36 in the first and 38 in the second. It was a powerful. well-controlled exhibition that took them nearly to the end of the boathouses. Cambridge had two ten-stroke efforts and one 50-second row, less than a minute in all, presumably to avoid comparison with covered by Ox-bridge some problems looked quicker away. Both the coxes

— Neil O'Donnell, of Oxford, and Vian Sharif, of Cambridge — recorded one failure to attach to the stake boat at their first attempt but recovered quickly.

Both coaches intend to schedule some more starting practice today and were noncommittal about the new method. "I'm happy as long as both crews abide by it," Robin Williams, of Cambridge, said. Sean Bowden, of Oxford, was more cavalier. "Go is when Evans, whose starts in 1991 and 1993 were both clean ones. also made his thoughts known to the crews on steering the course. When asked about the clashes that occurred in the tight races of 1997 and 1998, he said: "I have not commented on the last two years to either crew. I was fortunate in my last two appearances and have told them my only goal is a fair race and they know that. I have made it clear to the two stroke men they must help. They are as important as the you start races. I'm happy."

coxes, since they can see me." Both coaches are keen to have a clean, fair race. "There has been no deliberate intention over the last few years to do otherwise," Williams said, "but the races have been close and the crews are looking for every edge - and that includes the steering."

In quiet outings before the start rehearsals. Oxford still look favourites, even though Cambridge had a cleaner and more controlled look than earlier in the week. Perhaps a dinner on Wednesday evening al which members of the 1939 and 1949 crews were present had an inspiring influence.

LINKS

The 1999 Boat Race will be rowed tomorrow at 3,30pm and covered live on BBC1

TODAY'S OUTB Oxford Sam and 2.15pm, Cambridge 9.30am and 2.30pm.

Baseball in fine fettle to enjoy life after Joe

Keith Blackmore senses optimism unbounded for a national pastime oe DiMaggio kept his sense of timing to the end. When he died, aged 84, last month, the Yankee Clipper had lasted just long enough to see the sport that made him famous restored to the nation's

The Major League Baseball season, which begins on Sunday, has a hard act to follow. The 1998 campaign was perhaps the greatest, finally dispersing the clouds of public suspicion and resentment that had gathered after the infamous players' strike that forced the cancellation of the 1994 World Series.

DiMaggio witnessed something that many baseball fans never expected to see: a successful assault on the single-season home-run record of 61 set by Roger Maris. another New York Yankee. in 1961. Mark McGwire, of the St Louis Cardinals, with 70, and Sammy Sosa, of the Chicago Cubs, with 66, did not so much break the record as

He also lived long enough to see his beloved Yankees complete a season of unprecedented success, winning 125 games and losing only 50 on their way to winning the World Series, a record that gives them a claim to be the best team of all time.

DiMaggio also saw the end of a sequence that had seemed interminable - Cal Ripken's incredible endurance record of 2,632 consecutive games for the Baltimore Orioles. For more than 16 years, Ripken had not missed a game until September 20, when, at last, the ageing warrior chose to sidestep a meaningless fixture against the Yankees.

All in all the 1998 season was enough to bring a gleam to the eye of even the most disenchanted fan and, by season's end, baseball had been restored to its historie place as the nation's pastime.

Certainly there was enough goodwill for the paying public to turn a blind eve to the mighty McGwire's open use of androstenedione, a body-building drug banned by the International Olympic Committee but oddly permitted by Major League Baseball. Had McGwire come from another part of the world, had he not been such an eminently likeable man, had baseball not needed him so badly to be a superman, he may not have had so easy a ride into the history books.

The spirit of goodwill also obscured an even more threatening problem, one familiar to followers of club football in England and Scotland — baseball is fast dividing into the haves and have-nots. Last year there were 12 teams with player wage bills

The state of the s of more than $48 million (about £30 million). Eight of those occupied all the end-ofseason play-off places and all but one of the 12 won more games than they lost. Of the remaining 18 teams, only three had winning records. As the rich get richer, the chances of one of the poorer teams competing for the big prize diminish. It does not take a crystal ball to see that once again the Yankees, the Orioles, the Cleveland Indians, the Anaheim Angels and perhaps the Boston Red Sox will dominate the American League, while the Atlanta Braves, the New York Mets, the Houston Astros and the Los Angeles Dodgers do the same in the National League.

Yet there just might be room for surprises. Several of the big clubs have had unexpected setbacks. The Braves lost Andreas Gallaraga, their power hitter, for at least the season as he is treated for cancer, then saw Kerry Ligten-

PREDICTIONS

AMERICAN LEAGUE: East: New York Yankees; Central: Cleveland Indians; West: Anaheim Angels; Wildcard: Baltimore Orioles.

NATIONAL LEAGUE: East: Atlanta Braves; Central: Cincinnati Reds; West: Los Angeles Dodg-ers; Wildcard: New York Mets. WORLD SERIES: The Yankees to beat the Dodgers.

berg, their promising closer. seriously injure his shoulder. The Astros will have to do without Moises Alou, their excellent outfielder, who is also injured for the season. George Steinbrenner, the Yankees' outrageous owner. has tried to improve an already outstanding learn by trading David Wells and prospects to the Toronto Blue Jays for Roger Clemens.

On paper, this makes the Yankees unbeatable, for Clemens is arguably the best righthanded pitcher of the modern era. But Wells fitted well in New York, not just because he was a Yankees fan and a colourful personality, but because he was left-handed. Yankee Stadium, where Clemens must pitch half of his games, favours left-handers.

Few will bet against the Yankees, though, nor on this season matching the last ooe for drama and excitement, but baseball at least begins life after Johin' Joe in good heart.

www.major official site TELEVESION

Channel 5 and Sky Sports will both be showing matches

Clemens, now with the Yankees, warms up for the new season

ROWING

Champions line up for scull challenge

By MIKE ROSEWELL

THE Boat Race tomorrow has a supreme curtain-raiser today when ten world champions, five men and five women. will race the 44-mile course from Putney to Mortlake in single sculls for the Thames World Sculling Challenge.

Disappointingly, Greg Sear-le, the title-holder and the only Briton entered in the men's race, has withdrawn due to illness. This still leaves Jamie Koven, the 1997 world champion, from the United States. Derek Porter, the 1993 world champion and Olympic silver medal-winner from Canada, Giovanni Calabrese and Stefano Basalini, the heavyweight and lightweight Italian champions, and Iztok Cop, the 1995 world champion, who has been given special dispensarion from the Slovenian Army to race during his national service. The tortuous Tideway course will be new to all except Cala-knows the course intimately. but so does her elder sister. Miriam, who qualified as the world double sculls champion. Their three opponents are formidable. Pieta van Dishoeck, from The Netherlands, finished second behind Miriam in the 1998 world doubles championship. Sarah Garner. from the United States, is the world lightweight champion. and Ekaterina Khodotovitch, the Olympic and 1997 world champion from Belarus, will be having her first big race since having a baby. This is the sixth staging of the race and the most impressive field so far assembled. Peter Haining, the triple world lightweight sculling champi-on, was the guiding force behind the reintroduction of the challenge over the championship course in 1993. He has twice won the title, but, as organiser, will act as umpire for the men. Steve Redgrave will be the race starter and Martin Levy, an international umpire, will control the women.

Guin Batten, the British holder of the women's title.

TO MANY, the scoring of the world heavyweight championship bout between Lennox Lewis and Evander Holyfield brought into question the integrity of those who run world boxing. Eugenia Williams made Holyfield the winner while Larry O'Connell, the British judge, made it a draw. Williams's scoring gave cause can be no impuning the integri-ty of O Connell. Scoring it as you see it is the only way of doing the job hon-estly. That is what O'Connell did. It is significant that many respected British and American boxing writers at ringside also made the bout a draw. Roy Goodman, the New York senator involved in investigating boxing, told O'Connell that he did not have to come back to the city for the inquiry into the bout. "Your reputation pre-for grave concern, but there ceded you." Goodman's secre-tary told him. The British Boxing Board of Control's faith in O'Connell is reflected in the decision to put him in charge of the British heavyweight championship between Julius Francis, the champion, and Danny Williams at

By Srikumar Sen, boxing correspondent

BOXING: BRITISH REFEREE WHO GAVE HOLYFIELD A DRAW RETURNS TO RING

Board shows faith in O'Connell the Albert Hall tomorrow. Francis is with Frank Maloney, Lewis's manager, who swore that O'Connell would never again be allowed to judge contests involving his boxers: Williams is with Frank ing to Maloney, put O'Connell

O'Connell was due to referee the British light-middleweight championship on the under-card, but John Morris, the secretary of the Board, after talk-

O'Connell: high reputation in charge of the heavyweights. Far from being nervous. O'Connell, who has recovered fully from his ordeal by media. is looking forward to tomor-A referee for 23 years and world championship contests. Maloney's hand."

had a winner. When I put in my score, I one who has officiated in 49 The week that followed the Lewis v Holyfield bout was the

he said yesterday: "You have to be able to handle criticism. I made an honest decision. If that was a mistake. I have no problem with that. I am looking forward to shaking All the same, O'Connell was a little concerned about how the public would receive him. I don't know what sort of reception 111 get," he said. "11 be booed into the ring, or whatever. A lot of people paid a lot of money to go to America. I un-derstand their passion. I can understand them expecting a winner and they thought they thought Lennox had just nicked it. When they called out a draw I said: 'Oh hell, not me! The last thing we needed in a fight for the undisputed championship was a draw."

Tomorrow, as it is a British championship, O'Connell will be refereeing and judging as well. The dual job does not worry him. "Referees should always score," he said. " They are right there. next to the fighters. You see the punches more, you feel them more."

He had no sleep for two days because he was answering telephones. He would have retired if his wife had wanted him to. but, with her support and that of fellow referees, he rode out the storm. Looking back on that night at Madison Square Garden. O'Connell takes comfort from worst of O'Conneil's career.

an incident as he left the stadium. An Irishman came up to him, shook his hand and wished him well. "But you know," the man said, "I didn't agree with you at all."
"No?" said O'Connell. "How did you score it then?" I had it four rounds to Holy field," the man said. "I had to smile," O'Connell

THE AUTO TRADER BRITISH TOURING CAR CHAMPIONSHIP - ROUNDS 1 & 2 THE LINK TROPHY MEETING' EASTER SUNDAY/MONDAY, APRIL 4TH & 5TH.

Featuring defending champion Rickard Rydell Booking Hotline: 0115 912 9124.

REACTION-PACKED ENTERTAINMENT Internet Sales: www.ticketweb.co.uk. 5 mins from J.23e M1.

European championship: Substituted Scotland captain could retire

McAllister may find his number up at last

By Kevin McCarra

DEFEAT is always slow to fade, but the reverberations will linger, above all, in the ears of Gary McAllister. He can surely still hear the boos aimed at him by Scotland supporters during their 2-1 defeat by the Czech Republic in the European championship quali-fying match at Celtic Park on Wednesday.

The visitors might have gone 3-0 ahead when Mc-Allister lost possession to Patrik Berger. That moment was enough to galvanise the latent bostility of the crowd and every touch by the Scotland captain was jeered thereafter until he was taken off.

McAllister, who refused to comment yesterday, looked dazed upon seeing that it was his number being held up on the substitutes' board. There is now a strong possibility that the poignant scene will constitute the last image of him in his country's colours.

In the wake of cruciate ligament surgery, McAllister, 34. had laboured to reclaim a place in the Scotland side after an absence of 16 months. He returned, however, only to encounter a familiar animosity. Many Scotland fans have long been disgruntled over an individual who has a great gift for knitting play together but who rarely attempts flamboyant deeds.

He is the sort of performer best appreciated when watching a side failing to cope without him. Those who condemned him at Celtic Park will soon have the chance to see for themselves the effect of his absence. Despite sincere expressions of admiration for McAllister, Craig Brown, the manager, must gauge the potential harm if the derision shown lowards his captain begins to sour the atmosphere surrounding Scotland.

"The individual is impor-tant and I have always been loyal." Brown said, "but it is a team game and in the interests of the team I have to take harsh decisions. I have done that in the past, but, out of respect, I would not make that decision without consulting the player.

Brown is to discuss the issue with McAllister over the weekend, but his retirement from international football seems likely. "McAllister is not a quit-ter, but he would not be the first to say enough is enough."

Brown said. "I am conscious of the fact that he has a family who will be very burt by the criticism."

Although the unpopularity of McAllister possesses little rationality, a few contributory factors can be identified. The penalty that he missed in the 2-0 defeat by England at Euro 96 may have increased the intolerance and, as a man who left Motherwell to join Leicester City while still young, he does not have the natural constituency in his own country enjoyed by those employed in the Scottish Premier

McAllister. with 57 caps. also risks the deprecation that comes to those who have given

McAllister, vilified by supporters, may have made his last appearance for his country in the defeat by the Czech Republic long service and so become undervalued. He joins a distinguished fraternity of Scotland players who bave been maligned virulently, In 1992, Brian McClair was hectored as he waited to come on as a substitute against Portugal at Ibrox. "He got booed before he even touched the ball," Brown said yester-mentality."

The vilification may have to be accepted as an element of the passion that supporters display when caught up with concern over Scotland's for-tunes. They have much to worry them now. Scotland are eight points behind the Czech Republic, who lead group day. "I can't understand that nine, and have to regard a place in the play-offs as their strongest chance of qualifying for the finals.

Despite being spirited on Wednesday, Scotland wobbled in defence and were ineffectual in the opposition goalmouth. Brown admitted that he may speak to Duncan Ferguson, the injured Newcastle United forward, to find out whether he is willing to rescind his retirement from international football. Were the manager's lack of resources not so acute, it would be risible to contemplate a rapprochement with a player who failed to score in any of his seven appearances for his

Desperate Villa seek backdoor entry to Europe

By Chris Moore

THE DECLINE and fall of ham Forest have won sitting Aston Villa, who led the FA Carling Premiership for 14 weeks until Christmas, was further underlined last night with confirmation of a pending application to enter the InterToto Cup this summer.

The much-maligned competition provides the winners with a backdoor way into the Uefa Cup, which John Gregory, the Villa manager, concedes is probably the club's most realistic route into Europe next season. Villa have collected only one point from their past eight games and are ten points adrift of the fourth-place finish needed to guarantee Uefa Cup qualification via the Premiership.

"Up until a few weeks ago. could never have envisaged us thinking seriously about playing in the InterToto tournament," Gregory said. "For the first half of the season, all our aspirations were oo playing in the Champions' League. Even after we lost our place in the top three, we felt the least we could achieve was qualifying for the Uefa Cup."

However, Uefa's ruling this week, effectively to award Newcastle United automatic entry into the competition for reaching the semi-finals of the FA Cup, has forced Villa's hand. "Ideally, we would rather not have to compete in the InterToto, but needs must,"

Gregory said.
"It still depends on dates and how the remainder of our season pans out, but playing in Europe is a minimum requirement for Aston Villa and if we can't qualify via the Premiership, we have to take in the alternatives."

Both Gregory and Doug Ellis, the Villa chairman, were outspoken in their indignation over Newcastle's surprise good fortune. "What it means is that they have qualified for Europe by winning just four games in the FA Cup, which is the same number Nottingon the bottom of the Premiership," Gregory said.
"It would have been interest ing to see what decision Uefa had made if Barnsley had beaten Tottenham Hotspur to reach the FA Cup semi-finals. I'm not so sure they'd have so readily granted a Uefa Cup place to one of our first division clubs," Ellis said: "Iı's ridiculous that priority should be given over the Premier League, in which 38 hard-fought matches are involved."

However, Ellis emphasised that Villa will confirm their entry into the InterToto Cup only if they qualify as the highesi-placed of the English applicants. That would mean playing their first game on July 17, three weeks before the start of the new season. The second English club will have to go into a preliminary round on July 3, which both Ellis and Gregory agree is too early.

Gregory: alternative route

Colin Calderwood, the Scotland defender signed for £250,000 from Tottenham last week, will make his Villa debut in the Premiership game with West Ham United at Villa Park tonight, Paul Merson is likely to return in place of the suspended Lee Hendrie, with Julian Joachim replacing Stan Collymore, who is un-dergoing counselling for clini-cal depression.

IN BRIEF

FIROZ KASSAM, a London hotelier, took control of Oxford United, the Nationwide League first division club, yesterday. The long-term future for Oxford. whose season has been overshadowed thus far by the threat of extinction. Kassam.

a Tanzania-born businessman, has acquired the 89.5 per cent majority shareholding of the Manor Ground club from Robin Herd, the former chairman.

Kassam has repaid £500,000 worth of club debts to Oxford City council and is expected to double that amount as part of the rescue package. In return, work should begin again on the club's new 15.000-capacity stadium at Minchery Farm. Work on the stadium was halted 18 months ago over a pay dispute. Ramon Vega, the Tottenham Hotspur centre back, looks like missing the rest of the season because of a chipped ankle bone. The Switzerland defender has returned to his homeland after undergoing an operation last week on the ankle he injured in the

Worthington Cup final

against Leicester City two Diemar Hamman, the Newcastle United midfield player, is expected to be fit for his side's FA Cup semi-final against Tonenham Hotspur next weekend. Hamman was injured in Germany's match with Finland on Wednesday night, but the ankle ligament damage is not as bad as first thought. Gaston Taument, the Anderlecht and former Holland winger, is to join Newcastle on a ten-day (rial.

Alex Ferguson, the Manchester United manager. is looking to establish links with three clubs in Argentina. United already have a "memorandum of co-operation" with Royal Antwerp, the Belgium club. and now three young players from Argentina have trained with United. Southampton have been given a £3.5 million grant by the Football Trust for the building of their new stadium. The club received permission for the 32,000-capacity arena on Nottingham Forest are expected to wait until the end of the season to approach Sammy Mcllroy, the Macclesfield manager, about taking over at the City Ground. Ron Atkinson, the Forest manager, is unlikely to be retained if the club is relegated to the Nationwide

McMenemy position safe

THE pep talk was delivered five miles above sea level, the rhetoric soaring as high as the Northern Ireland squad home to Belfast. Eyes may have been rimmed with red and faces gray with fatigue, but Jim Boyce had people to thank and a message of defiance to deliver.

In spite of the interminable goalless draw in Moldova that virtually closes a slender path to Euro 2000, the president of the Irish FA voiced his gratitude for the effort of players, staff and, crucially, manager; there will be no scapegoat for Northern Ireland's failings and no quick fixes. He was to embellish his sentiments yesterday, insisting that Lawrie McMenemy's po-

By George Caulkin

sition was, for the time being, until the end of the qualifying campaign and, without a shadow of a doubt, that remains the case," he said. "After that, the international committee will sit down and look at the situation."

In reality, there are few alternatives. McMenemy and his two assistants, Joe Jordan and Pat Jennings — dubbed the "dream team" when they took control 12 months ago were high-profile appointees and command the salaries to prove it. Paying off their contracts would not be viable even if it was desirable. A similar dearth of realistic my's choice of players. His side have scored just six goals in his eight matches to date ough Iain Dowie again performed heroically in the Republican Stadium, at 34, time marches on relentless-

For a clutch of players, Dow-ie included, Wednesday night's debacle will scupper their hopes of reaching the finals of a big competition. Should the Irisb subsequently decide that a change of direction is called for, however, the player-coach of Queens Park Rangers bopes to be oo hand to reap the benefit. "That may be a while away.

ly. "We need to unearth a goal-scorer," McMenemy said.

but it would be great to have that on my C.V. when they put me in my casket." Dowie said. options bedevils McMene-

Gould's enthusiasm wears thin

WHEN Bobby Gould, the Wales manager, and his wife, Marjorie, sent out their Christchuckle from the recipients. The cards depicted the usual Yuletide scenes, but were embellished by the scorelines "Denmark I, Wales 2" and "Wales 3, Belarus 2".

Gould could not resist reminding his friends of the most notable results during his three-year tenure of the Principality. They were achieved in the space of five days in Copenhagen and Car-diff last October and took Wales into second place in group one of the European championship qualifying series.

Yesterday, as the squad returned from Zurich after a 2-0

By Russell Kempson

defeat against Switzerland on from forlorn figure. His dry sense of humour had deserted him and the optimism generated by the two victories had evaporated. Switzerland leapfrogged

Wales into second place and, although not quite back to square one. Gould must again rethink his strategies before the next game - a daunting trip to Italy, the group leaders, in June. From looking favourites to fill the runners-up slot and earning a place in the play-offs, Wales must now scrap it out with the Swiss and perhaps Denmark and Bela-

What most frustrated Gould was that Switzerland, apart

the scored both goals, and the ele-gant Ciriaco Sforza, had posed only a limited threat throughout. Wales should have gained at least a draw, yet failed to seize the moment.

"It was a good opportunity. a great opportunity," he said. We were a bit short on personnel and had to ask people to do certain jobs, but it's not always easy for them to adjust. We were poor. We should have given the Swiss a better game, but we're still not out of it. There's still a lot to play for."

Paul Jones, the goalkeeper, was also pained, but more by the back injury that he sustained in the pre-match warm-up and which forced him to retire in the 26th minute, "I hope experienced it's not as bad as it looked and David Jones, the Southampton manager, is unlikely to have the services of his namesake for the games against Arsenal and Coventry City over the Easter weekend.

Nathan Blake, the Blackburn Rovers striker, failed to return from Zurich in time to appear at Newport magistrates in Gwent yesterday to answer a charge of threatening and abusive behaviour. He was arrested last week. while on an evening off from the Wales training camp, after being allegedly involved in a late-night incident in New-port. The case was adjourned until May 5.

Farnborough see light on horizon

NON-LEAGUE FOOTBALL BY WALTER GAMMIE

WHILE the confrontation between Rushden and Diamonds and Cheltenham Town may decide the eventual outcome of the title and domi-nates the Nationwide Conference programme this weekend, the pressure will be felt just as keenly when Barrow play Farnborough Town at Holker Street tomorrow.

It might not be promotion to the Nationwide League at stake, but retaining a place in the Conference is vital to the wellbeing of clubs that have spent the season fighting for their existence.

If Farnborough are to reach safety, they must win at Barrow, who lie fourth from hottom, four points away. At least Farnborough travel knowing that they have been saved from liquidation - even if a record of not having won away for II matches does not inspire confidence.

Graham Westley, the former Queens Park Rangers player, who appeared briefly for Farnborough before going on to coach Enfield and Kingstonian, took over a controlling holding in the club after an extraordinary meeting of the shareholders. He agreed to make up the difference to money raised by supporters to enable a £75,000 payment due under a Company Voluntary Arrangement to be met and also to underwrite the club's losses for the next 18 months. Tony Alper, the chairman, said: "At least it's a way forward. I'm not saying we won't came nosition in 18

TOP OF TABLE Flushden & O 35 18 10 6 61 32 67 Kettering ... 38 19 10 8 52 33 67 Chetterinsm 34 18 12 4 81 28 65 Yeovid ... 33 18 10 7 54 40 58 Hayes 35 17 7 11 49 45 58 Kingstonian . 33 14 12 7 46 39 54 months' time, but with football clubs these days it's as well to take it a year at a time." The Cheltenham and Rushden confingents came through unscathed in the England semi-professional international match in The Netherlands on Tuesday. England drew I-l at Genemuiden, with the home side equalising in the second half after Warren Patmore, the Yeovil Town forward, had given John Owens' team a first-half lead. Owens reported that Gary Butterworth, the Rushden midfield player, enjoyed an outstanding match and was also delighted with the defence - Mark Smith, of Stevenage Borough, Michael Danzey, of Woking, and Tim Ryan, of Southport. 'The back three and Steve Book of Cheltenham] in goal did well," he against a system that they don't normally play against." The England season concludes with a match against a Highland League XI at Chesham on May 21 and an international against Wales at St Albans on May 23.

said. The Netherlands played three up front with an attacking midfield player. It was a good challenge to come up

Denmark 4 0 2 2 3 5 2
RESULTE: Sept 5: Wales 0 lialy 2: Belanus
0 Denmark 0 Oct 10: Italy 2: Sentzerland 0
Denmark 1 Wales 2 Oct 14: Wales 3
Belanus 2: Switzerland 1 Denmark 1 Marr
27: Belanus 0 Switzerland 1, Denmark 1
Italy 2: Marr 31: Italy 1 Belanus 1; Switzerland 1 Wales 0 FOTURES: June 5: Italy v Wales: Denmark
v Belanus June 9: Switzerland v Italy; Wales
v Denmark Sept 4: Belanus v Wales; Denmark v Switzerland: Sept 6: Switzerland
v Belanus, Italy v Denmark. Oct 9: Wales v
Switzerland; Belanus v Italy PWDL F APts

4 2 1 1 4 2 7 4 2 1 1 7 6 7 5 1 3 1 5 4 8 4 1 2 1 5 5 8 4 1 1 2 2 5 4 3 0 2 1 2 3 2 RESULTS: Sept 5: Georgis 1 Albania 0
Sept 6: Greece 2 Slovenia 2, Norway 1
Latvia 3 Oct 10: Slovenia 1 Norway 2
Latvia 1 Georgis 0 Oct 14: Norway 2
Attania 2: Greece 3 Georgis 0: Slovenia 1
Latvia 0 Nov 15: Albania 0 Greece 0 Morray
2: Georgia 1 Slovenia 1, Greece 0 Norway
2. Mar 31: Latvia 0 Greece 0 Postponed:
Slovenia v Albania.
PRYTURIES: Ane 28: Albania v Latvia: Georgist 1 Skovenia v Albania.
FDXTURIES: Apr 28: Albania v Latvia: Georgia v Norway. Mary 30: Norway v Georgia June 5: Albania v Norway. Georgia v Greece Latvia v Slovenia. June 9: Albania v Slovenia: Greece v Latvia. Sept 4: Norway v Greece: Latvia v Albania, Slovenia v

Group four PWDLFAPES
S3208311
532088311
532088311
5230529
520313884
S0052150 France. Ukraine Iceland Russia Armenia RESULTS: Sept 5: Armenia 3 Andorra 1. Ukrane 3 Russia 2; Iceland 1 Franca 1 Oct 10: Andorra O Ultraine 2. Russia 2 France 3. Armenia 0 (celand 0. Oct 14: Ukraine 2 Ar-menia 0. Franca 2 Andorra 0, Iceland 1 Rus-sia 0 Mar 27: Andorra 0 Iceland 2. Armenia 0 Russia 3. France 0 Ultraine 0. Mar 31: Franca 2 Armenia 0; Russia 6 Andorra 0: Ukraine 1 Iceland 1

FIXTURIES: June 5: Urane v Andorra; France v Russa, ledand v Armenia June 9: Andorra v France, Russia v loaland, Ar-menia v Urcaine. Sept 4: Ukraine v France, tolend v Andorra, Russia v Armenia. Sept 8: Andorra v Russa; loeland v Ukraine; Ar-menia v France, Oct 9: France v losland; Russia v Ukraine, Andorra v Armenia. PWDL F A Pts 4 3 0 1 6 2 9 4 3 0 1 7 3 9 4 2 0 2 6 6 6 5 1 2 2 3 6 5 P W D L F A Pts
Sweden 4 4 0 0 6 1 12
England 4 2 1 1 7 3 7
Poiand 4 2 0 2 7 4 8
Bulgaria 4 1 1 2 2 4 4 8
Luxembourg 4 0 0 4 0 10 0

$ 1 2 2 3 6 S $ 0 2 3 S 10 2 RESULTS: Sept 5: Finland 3 Moldove 2, Turkey 3 Northern Ireland 0 Oct 10: Turkey 1 Germany 0, Northern Ireland 1 Finland 0 Oct 14: Moldova 1 Germany 3: Turkey 1 Fin-RESULTE: Sept 9: Sweden 2 England 1 Sept 8: Bulgane 0 Potond 3 Oct 10: Po-land 3 Luxembourg 0, England 0 Bulgand 0 Oct 14: Bulgaria 0 Sweden 1, Luxem-bourg 0 England 3 Mar 27: England 3 Po-land 1 Mar 31: Luxembourg 0 Bulgana 2, Poland 0 Sweden 1. Phanad 0. Moloove 0 varinem liceand v FEXTURES: June 4: Germany v Moldova June 5: Firland v Turkey June 9: 1 2 v Finland. Sept 4: Firland v Germany, Morthern Ireland; V Turkey Sept 8: Germany v Northern Ireland; Moldova v Turkey Oct 9: Germany v Turkey. Finland v Northern Ireland. Poland 0 Sweden 1.

FIXTURES: Jurie 5: Poland v Bulgaria, England v Sweden Jurie 9: Lisembourg v Poland, Bulgaria v England. Sept 4: Sweden v Bulgaria. England v Listembourg v Sweden v Poland v England Oct 9: Sweden v Poland Oct 10: Bulgaria v Lissembourg

Group six
 P W
 D L
 F
 A Pts

 Spain
 4 3 0 1 19 4 9

 Cypnus
 5 3 0 2 6 6 9

 Israel
 4 2 1 1 10 3 3 7

 Austria
 4 2 1 t 8 11 7

 San Manno
 5 0 0 5 1 30 0
 RESULTS: Sept 5: Austria 1 Israel 1, Cypnus 3 Span 2 Oct 10: Cypnus 0 Austria 3, Sen Manno 0 Israel 5 Oct 14: Israel 1 Span 2, San Manno 1 Austria 4 Nov 18: San Manno 0 Cypnus 1 Feb 10, 1999; Cypnus 4 San Marino 0 Mar 27: Span 9 Austria 0 Mar 31: San Marino 0 Spain 8

EURO 2000 QUALIFYING GROUP DETAILS FDCTURES: Apr 28: Austria v San Manno June 5: Spain v San Marino, June 6: Israel v Austria. Sept 4: Austria v Spain. Sept 8: Cyrins v Israel Sept 8: Spain v Cyrins, Is-rael v San Marino. Oct 9: Spain v Israel Oct 18: Austria v Cyrius.

P W D L F A Pts
Pontugal S 4 0 I 16 2 12
Romana S 3 2 0 10 1 11
Hungary S 2 2 1 11 4 6
Slovakia S 2 2 1 7 3 8
Liechtenstein S 1 0 4 2 22 3
Azerbaijan S 0 0 S 1 17 0 Azerbaijan S 0 0 S 1 17 0
RESULTS: Sept 2: Romania 7 Liechterstein 0 Sept 8: Slovakia 3 Azerbaijan 0 Sept 8: Hungary 1 Portugal 3 Oct 10: Portugal 6 Romania 1; Liechterstein 0 Stovakia 4: Azerbaijan 0 Hungary 4 Oct 14: Stovakia 4: Azerbaijan 1 Hungary 1 Romania 1. Lechtenstein 2 Azerbaijan 1 Hungary 1 Romania 1. Lechtenstein 2 Azerbaijan 1 Hungary 5 Lochtenstein 0, Mar 31: Azerbaijan 0 Hungary 5 Lochtenstein 0 Portugal v Stovakia (1 Hungary 0 Portugal v Stovakia; Portugal v Liechtenstein; Romania v Azerbaijan v Liechtenstein 1 Ventugal v Liechtenstein 1 Ventugal v Liechtenstein v Portugal, Stovakia v Romania, Liechtenstein v Hungary V Liechtenstein v Romania v Portugal, Stovakia v Romania, Liechtenstein v Hungary V Liechtenstein v Romania v Portugal, Stovakia v Liechtenstein v Romania: Azerbaijan v Stovakia v Ct 12: Portugal v Hungary.

Group eight.

Group eight

3 2 0 1 7 1 6 3 2 0 1 8 4 6 2 2 0 0 4 0 6 3 2 0 1 7 5 8 5 0 0 5 2 18 0 Macedonia Malta RESULTS: Sept 5: Ireland 2 Croalia 0 Sept 6: FYR Macedonia 4 Maria 0 Oct 10: Maila 1 Croette 4 Oct 14: Ireland 5 Meita 0 Croette 3 FYR Macedonia 2 Nov 18: Maila I FYR Macodonia 2, Vogosleve 1 Instand 0 Feb 10, 1898: Maita 0 Yugosleve 3 Miter 27: Postiponed: FYR Macedonia v Ireland, Vugoslevia v Croette Mar 31: Postiponed: Croette v Maita; Yugoslevia v FYR Macedonia

nia FDCTURES: Jume S: FYR Macedonia v Croalia; Ireland v Yugostavia Jume 9: Yugostavia v Maha. Sepit 4: Croalia v Ireland Sepit 8: Metia v Ireland: FYR Macedonia v Yugostavia Det 10: Coolia v Yugostavia ketand v FYR Macedonia. Group nine

P W D L F A Pts
Czech Rep S 5 0 0 12 3 1S
Estonia S 2 1 2 11 9 7
Scotland 4 2 1 1 6 5 7
Lithuana S 1 2 2 S 6 5
Bosnia-Her2 4 1 1 2 S 6 4
Farce Isls S 0 1 4 1 9 1

Parce Isls S 0 1 4 1 9 1

PRESULTS: Jume 4: Estoria S Faeroe Isles

0. Aug 20: Bosna-Herzegovina 1 Faeroe
Isles 0 Sept 5: Bosna-Herzegovina 1 Faeroe
Isles 0 Sept 5: Bosna-Herzegovina 1 Estoria 1, Lithuania 0 Scotland 0 Sept 6: Faeroe
Isles 0 Czech Republic 1 Oct 10: Bosna-Herzegovina 1 Caoch Republic 3
Lithuania 0 Faeroe Isles 0. Scotland 3 Estoria 2 Cet 14: Lithuania 4 Bosna-Herzegovina 2; Scotland 2 Faeroe Isles 1, Czech Republic 2 Lithuania 0 Poetponed: Scotland
V Bosna-Herzegovina Mari 31: Lithuania 1
Estoria 2, Scotland 1 Czech Republic 2
FIXTURES: Jume 5: Bosna-Herzegovina
Lithuania Estoria v Czech Republic, Faeroe
Isles v Scotland Jume 9: Estoria v
Lithuania Faeroe Isles v Bosna-Herzegovina
Czech Republic v Scotland Sept 4:
Bosna-Herzegovina v Scotland, Faeroe
Isles v Estoria Lithuania v Czech Republic
Sept 8: Czech Republic v Bosna-Herzegovina
Sestoria: Lithuania v Czech Republic
Sept 8: Czech Republic v Bosna-Herzegovina
Scotland Oct 9: Estoria v Bosnia-Herzegovina.
Czech Republic v Faeroe Isles:
Scotland V Lithuania.

Annual of the state of the stat

Quicksilver quartet turns tide An heroic mouse's tale

FROM CRAIG LORD IN HONG KONG

IT IS necessary to trawl back to 1932 to find the last mention of Great Britain among female freestyle relay medal-winners at world level, bronze having been won in the 4 x 100 metres at the Olympic Games in Los Angeles. The drought ended spectacularly at the world short-course championships here last night, when only a world record by Sweden stood between Britain and the 4 x 200 metres title.

The quartet of Karen Pickering, Nicola Jackson, Claire Huddart and Karen Legg with Vicki Horner having helped to produce a European record in the morning heats and so being a worthy winner of a medal as reserve - earned their silver stripes in 7min 53.98sec, a Commonwealth record and 2.28sec behind Sweden, who took gold in 7min

In two leaps, the Britain squad had taken a massive 5.20sec off the national record in a day. They now stand as the third-fastest of all time, behind Sweden and the discredited team from China, two of whom have since been suspended for drugs' use. China established the previous world mark of 7min 51.92sec when winning the world short-course title two years ago in Sweden.

The day had started well for the Britain team. Jackson, a 15-year-old newcomer to the senior line-up, who holds great promise of future success at world level, was timed almost two seconds inside her British junior record at Imin 57.24sec in the morning heats. That remained the fastest split time of the day, It was a pity that the lanky schoolgirl's progress came too late for her inclusion in the individual event here.

Her effort helped the British quartet to a European record of 7min 55.51sec in the morning, and another sub-lmin 58sec swim in the final, alongside a similar time from Pickering, saw them take another 2.53sec off the British record of 7min 59.18sec, also set in Sweden, when the team finished well outside the medals.

Pickering said: "It's a great start. We now know we can chase that world record. We came here hoping and believing we could win a medal and before today that would have been a good thing to achieve. But when you see how close you came to being best in the world, you feel disappointed with a silver. It's a strange feeling." Sweden's world record was the second of the day, the first having fallen to Ian Thorpe, the 16-year-old from Sydney with the size 16 feet. He recorded Imin 43,28sec in the 200 metres freestyle, his sublime effort snatching the title from Michael Klim, his team-mate and the world long-course champion over the same distance, by 0.50sec.

Thorpe's achievement also confined the name of Giorgio Lamberti to history. Until two weeks ago, the Italian had held the loogest surviving records in men's swimming. the 200 metres at both long and short-course. Then Grain Hackett, Thorpe's 18-year-old compatriot, broke the longcourse record in Brisbane.

Hackett will attempt to steal

Australia 4 x 200 metres team today, having failed to qualify for the individual event.

The fountain that rises from Thorpe's thunderous kick is a sight not seen in the wake of any other swimmer. Teammates admit to using tactics in short-course standard from Thorpe by leading the finals in any lane except the one next to him. Hackett describes racing next to Thorpe as like swimming in a waterfall, while Daniel Kowalski, the Australia No 2 over 1,500 metres, likened the experience to surfing in the wash when you miss a wave.

heats that will qualify them for

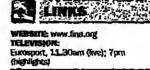

Hickman powers his way to victory in the heats of the 100 metres butterfly. The Briton is favourite for gold today

Seemingly unaware and certainly not carried away by the legend that is developing around him. Thorpe said merely: "I'm very honoured and very proud to break the world record. It's great for Australia to have both long and shortcourse records and take an Italian right out of the books," Klim had an excuse for his narrow defeat, even if he never uttered it. Fourteen minutes before the 200 metres, he had qualified for the final of the 100 metres butterfly, to be held today, just 0.02sec behind James Hickman, of Britain.

Hickman lowered the championship record in both the heat and semi-final, from 51.95sec to 51.78sec and then 51.51sec last night to establish himself as the title favourite, a fraction ahead of Klim and Lars Frolander, of Sweden. "I'm just warming up," Hick-

FIXTURES

FOOTBALL Kick-off 7.30 unless stated denotes all-ticket FA Carling Premiershi Aston Villa v West Hern (7.45).. reide League

First division *Crewe v Birmingham (5.0). Second division Colchester v Preston (7.45).

Northampton v Bournemouth (7.45).... Oloham v Luton (3.30)..... MONTAGUE TOURNAMENT: Under-15 International: England v China (3.0) DR MARTENS LEAGUE Southern division: Fleet Town v Havant and Waterlooville, Folkestone Invicta v Ashford. RYMAN LEAGUE: First division: Canvey

ISSAID V WINDOWSHIE.
THE FOOTBALL LEAGUE YOUTH ALLIANCE: Third division: Halifax v Grinsiby
(at Grinsiby FC, 1.0)
LEAGUE OF WALES: Conneit's Quey v FA PREMIER ACADEMY LEAGUE Under-19: Leicester v Everton (10) Under-17: Nottingham Forest v Leicester

ARNOTT INSURANCE NORTH LEAGUE: First division: Jenow Roofing v South Shields: West Auckland v Shildon, South sheds: West Audicand v Shidon, SCHEWFOX ORRECT LEAGUE: Premier dilyision: Bidelord v Burnstaple; Calne v Westbury; Chappenham v Melksham, Emprore v Tiverfon; Keynsham v Bishop Sutton; Mangotsfield Uld v Bristol Manor Fern.

JJB Super League

London v Hus (3.30)... Wigan v St Heiens (12.05).

Batley v Dewsbury (7.30).... Doncaster v Oldham (7.30).... Hull KR v York (3.0).... Huislet v Bramley (7.30).

Keightey v Featherstone (7.30).

Lancashire Lynx v Barrow (3.0).

Lagin v Wittens (3.0).

Swinton v Rochdale (3.0).

Workington v Whitehaven (3.0).

RUGBY UNION

Sundey's Well v DLSP (4.0). OTHER SPORT BASKETBALL: Budweleer Langue: Manchester v Sheffield (2.0), Milton Keynes v Derby (4 0) TELEVISION CHOICE

As this is a public holiday, parents should take the chance to sit with their children to watch this charming animation, the latest adaptation from the books by Jill Barklem, about a rural community of mice and their various rodent friends. A party sets off for the "High Hills" to take spare blankers to the voles before winter sets in. Narrated by Robert Lindsay and with Neil Morrissey voicing the young hero. Wilfred, it's briskly told and should not alarm even the most fearful child, although it has a fair ration of adventure and manages to confound expectations with its moral of ambition and risk-taking rewarded. It's not Wind in the Willows, neither is it quite Beatrix Potter, but it's a nice piece of work. quite Beatrix Potter, but it's a nice piece of work, perfect afternoon holiday viewing.

Hornblower: Frogs and Lobsters ITV, 8pm (not Ulster)

loan Gruffudd is back as C.S. Forester's naval hero, and this time it looks as though he may be losing some of that rather irritating innocence, thanks to an impossibly pretty Estelle Skornik (Nicole from the Renault car ads). She is Manette, an attractive young village maid-turned-reacher in post-Revolutionary Brittany. Hornblower is leading a detachment of sailors accompanying a rage. Freeth propsity force of the Engest attempting. tag French royalist force ("the Frogs") attempting to overturn the Revolution and restore King Louis to overturn the Revolution and restore King Louis to the throne. Sam West plays the commander of British infantry ("the Lobsters"), also along to help out. As the thoroughly vicious unreconstructed overlord of Mariette's village (complete with guillotine), Antony Sher chews the scenery and spits out some ripe cod-French. Our gallant British chaps naturally acquit themselves nobly . . .

The Dark Room BBC1, 9.30pm

This two-parter by Niall Leonard from a Minette Walters novel is as bloody as any previous Walters adaptation. Very little violence takes place on screen (at least in ionight's episode), but there are abundant sudden flashbacks which afflict the central character. Jinx Kingsley (an unrecog-nisable Dervla Kirwan), as she recovers from an apparent attempted suicide by car crash. Her head apparent attempted suicine by car crash. Her head is shaved and there are livid scars criss-crossing it; she is in a very fancy private hospital, refusing to co-operate with a young, handsome neuropsychiatrist (James Wilby). The story turns on what has happened to her former flance and her oldest friend, who have run off to get married.

Brambly Hedge, a new animation based on Jill Barklem's books (BBCI, 4.20pm)

Seinfeld: The Highlights BBC2, 11.45pm

Journey Into Space

Radio 4, Ham

The show has been described (in this country) as "the best sitcom ever". But most viewers will never have seen it, because BBC2 consistently buries it at varying times late at night on Tuesday. Tonight's compilation was created to mark the 100th edition. in 1995. Among many odd delights, the attempts of George (Jason Alexander) to pitch a show "about nothing" to NBC stand out. It seems the pitch went down well. Kramer (Michael Richards) and Elaine (Julia Louis-Dreytus) also contribute richly, but Jerry rightly remains the linchpin and comic pivot. Tony Patrick Booked your ticket for space? Nor me. We keep being told that within 20 years ordinary folk will be able to climb into a rocket for a holiday on the Moon, which raises several important questions, including: if the holiday is on the Moon, why is the luggage on Mars? This programme, shamefully, fails to provide an answer and instead describes what it is actually like to sit on top of seven tonnes of explosive and be blasted into the air at 25 times

the speed of sound. Worse than one of those rides at Alton Towers, by the sound of it. The programme explains how astronauts deal with days that last only 45 minutes (hardly worth shaving for) and what zero gravity does to the body.

BBC WORLD SERVICE

5.00cm The World Today 7.00 World News 7.15 Outlook 7.55 My Century 8.00 World News 8.05 World Business Report 8.15 Insight 8.30 Focus On Feith 9.00 World News 9.05 Westway 9.20 Off the Sheff Badfand 9.35 Science in Action 10.00 World

9.20 Off the Shelf Badtand 9.35 Science in Action 10.00 World News 10.95 Speaking OI English 10.20 The Virtiage Chart Show 10.50 Sports Round-Up 11.00 Newsdesk 11.30 Britain Today 11.45 World Business Report 12.00 Newsdesk 12.30pm Focus on Paith 1.00 World News 1.05 Outlook 1.45 Sports Round-Up 2.00 Newshour 3.00 World News 3.05 Science in Action 3.30 Music Review 4.00 World News 3.05 Science in Action 3.30 Music Review 4.00 World News 4.05 Football Extra 4.15 Coffee - A Heltish Brew 4.30 John Peel 5.00 Europe Today 5.30 World Business Report 5.45 Insight 6.00 Newsdesk 6.30 Short Slory 8.45 Sports Round-Up 7.00 World News 7.15 Britain Today 7.30 Focus on Fatth 8.00 World News 8.05 Science in Action 8.30 The Wey We Are 8.45 Off insight 1.00 World Business Report 10.20 Britain Today 10.30 Music Review 11.00 World News 12.05 m Outlook 12.45 Insight 1.00 The World Today 1.30 Science in Action 1.55 My Certury 2.00 The World Today 2.30 Merchan Books 3.00 The World Today 3.30 World Business Report 3.45 Insight 4.00 The World Today 3.30 World Business Report 3.45 Insight 4.00 The World Today 3.30 World Business Report 3.45 Insight 4.00 The World Today 3.30 World Business Report 3.45 Insight 4.00 The World Today 3.30 World Business Report 3.45 Insight 4.00 The World Today 3.30 World Business Report 3.45 Insight 4.00 The World Today 4.30 World Business Report 3.45 Insight 4.00 The World Today

CLASSIC FM

6.00mm Nick Balley's Easier Breeklast. Music to get the day off to 8 fine start 8.00 Henry Kelly. The Hell of Fame Hour and Classic Masterpece 12.00 Lunchtime Requests. Jane Jones introduces Isteners' tayourtle peces music 2.00pm Concerto.

Haydn (Trumpet concerto in E liat) 3.00 Jamie Crick, includes Afternoon Romance, Continuous Classics, plus sport updates and travel news 6.30 Newsnight. Top stories and interviews with guesta from the arts world 7.00 Smooth Classics at Seven.

John Brunning introduces classic sounds 9.00 Evening Concert. Schutz (Easter Historia). Haydin (The Severi Last Words of our Saviour on the Cross) 11.00 Mann at Night. Music and conversation through till the small hours 2.00am Concerto Haydn (frumpet concerto in E flat) (r) 3.00 Mark Griffiths. The Early Breakfast Show

2 - 2

4.20 Sports Round-up 4.30 Weekend

RADIO CHOICE

Bach: St John Passion Radio 3, 1.50pm

This performance of Bach's religious work, written earlier than his St Matthew Passion. was recorded yesterday as part of the Orchestra of the Age of Enlightenment residency at St George's, Brandon Hill, Bristol. Gustav Leonhardt, one of the great interpreters of Bach's music and one of the composer's greatest admirers, directs the performance. The soloists are Michael Chance (counter-tenor). Michael George and Stephen Varcoe (basses) and Mark Padmore (tenor). Other programmes for Good Friday include Good Friday Liturgy (Radio 4, 3pm), a meditation on the seven last words spoken by Christ given by Cardinal Basil Hume with the choir of Westminster Cathedral.

RADIO 1 (BBC)

6.30mm Zoe Ball 9.00 Kevin Greening 12.00 Jo Whitey 2.00pm Mark Radcliffe 4.00 Chris Moyles 6.00 Pete Tong's Essential Selection 9.00 Judge Jules 11.00 Westwood: Rap Show 2.00mm Febro and Grooverider 4.00 Scott Mills

RADIO 2 (BBC)

8.00am Sarah Kennedy 7.30 Wake Up to Wogan 9.30 Kent Bruce 12.00 Songs of the Century 2.00pm Ed Stewart 5.00 Des Lynam 7.00 The Michael Fernsten Songbook — Turns Another Pagee (3/8) 7.30 Finday Night Is Music Night 9.15 Single and Single (6/8) 9.30 Stainer's Cruchison. The Hudderstield Choral Society perform a classic choral work for Good Friday 10.30 Shendan Morley 11.45 The People's Pselms (6/6) 12.00 Lynn Parsons 4.00am Lata Sharma

RADIO 5 LIVE (BBC) 5.00am Morning Reports 6.00 Breaktast 9.00 Brian Haves

11.56 Super League. Wigan v St Hetens 2.00pm Early Drive 4.55 Friday Match. Crewe Alexandra v Birmingham City 7.00 News Exta 7.30 Alan Green's Sportsvight. Coverage of the FA Premiershyp clash between Aston Villa and West Ham United at Ville Park 10.00 Late Night Live 1.00am Up All Night

TALK RADIO

6.00am The Big Boys Breakfast 9.00 Scott Chisholm & Saft James 12.00 Motoring 1.00pm Anna Raeburn 3.00 CKI to Tak 5.00 The Sports Zone 8.00 Nicky Home's Access all Areas 10.00 James H Reeve 1.00am Mike Dickin.

VIRGIN

i.30am Russ Williams 9.30 Mark Forrest 1.00pm Nick Abbot 4.00 Harriet Scott 7.00 Wheels of Steel 11.00 Janey Lee Grace

5.00arp On Air Penny Gore with erts news and music.

6.00aim On Air Penny Gore with arts news and music, including a look et music for Good Friday. Pergolesi (Stabat mater); Haydn (Piano Trio in C, H XV 27); Sibelius (Pinlandia)
9.00 Masterworks with Peter Hobdey. Schumenn (American Festival Overture); Ravel (Valses nobles et sentimentales); Mozart (String Quartet in F, KS90); Canticloube (Songs of the Auvergne, Series 4): Ravel (La valse) 4); Flavel (La valse)
10.30 Artist of the West: Simon Rattleo 11.00 Sound Stories; Five Music Critics A profile of Neville Carcus

Neville Cardus

12.00 Composer of the Week: Reger

1.00pm The Radio 3 Lunchtime Concert Borodin Cuartet. Beethoven (String Quartet in B flat, Op

130, Grosse Fuge) [/)

1.50 Bach'e St John Passion Chris de Souza introduces a concert given yesterday. See Choice

4.00 Music Restored Lucie Skeaping introduces a selection of works passed off by the virtuoso violinist Fritz Kreisler as those of obscure

18th-century correposers when they were, in (act.)

18th-century composers when they were, in fact

4.45 Music Machine To mark the and of Music Mechine, Verity Sharp and Tommy Pearson take a trip through the archives to sample some of the enormous variety of music, musicians and experts to have leatured on the programme over the past five years (r) 5.00 in Tune with Sean Rafferty. Including Stamitz

(Oboe Quartet in D. Op 8), performed by Terzetto

(Oboe Quartet in D. Op 8), performed by Terzetio and Paul Goodwin, oboe Performance on 3: Parsittal Wagner's final music drama, in the moving new English National Opera production by Nikolaus Lehnhoff, With Kim Begley, tenor, Kathryn Hames, soprano, Gwynne Howelf, bass, Jonathan Summars, baritone, ENO
Chorus and Orchestra under Mark Elder, Part 1
9.05 Postscript: Rereading Auden (5/5) 9.25
Parsital, part 2 (n)

9.05 Postscript: Rereading Auden (5/5) 9.25
Parsifal, part 2 (r)
11.00 Glenn Gould The Canadian pianist plays music written for the virginals by Byrd and Gibbons
11.30 Jazz Century (Sounding the Century) Rusself
Daviss presents a 52-part history of jazz (r)
12.00 Composer of the Week: Schubert (r)
1.00am Through the Night 1.00 Choral Music Irom
Lativa. Patrick Burgan (Stabat maler): Cestovas Sesnauskas (Requiem) 2.05 J.C. Bach (Quntet in
D) 2.20 J.S. Bach (Fitteen Three-Part Inventions, BW/787-801): Glenn Gould, pano 3.00 Mozart
(Symphony No 41 in C, K551, Jupiter): Darish National Radio Symphony Orchestra under Michael Schonwandt 3.35 Mendelssohn (Organ Sonata in A, Op 85 No 3). Martti Miettinen 4.00
Blaz Arnic (Suits about the Welt): Sloventan Radio
Symphony Orchestra under Lovrenc Arnic 4.40
Beethoven (Violin Sonata in G, Op 30 No 3) 5.00
Hendrik Andriessen (Miroir de Peine) 5.25 Calcara (Stabat maler) 5.35 15th-century anon (The Bordesholm Lament of the Virgin Mary, Part 3)

RADIO 4

5.30am World News 5.35 Shipping Forecast 5.40 Inshore Forecast: 5.45 Prayer for the Day 5.47 Farming Today with Arna Hill 6.00 Today introduced by John Humphrys 9.00 Desert Island Dises Sus Lawley's castaway is the Oscar-winning actress Luse Rainer (r) 9.45 (PM) Serial: Pitate Flona Shaw reads the final extract from Arn Wroe's new book about the line ambulliant of the Sester story.

extract from Ann Wroe's new book about the line arch-villain of the Easter story

9.45 (LW) An Act of Worship

10.00 Wormen's Hour with Jenni Murray and guests

11.00 Wormen's Hour with Jenni Murray and guests

11.30 Married Comedy drama, by Tony Bagley. Former bachelor Robin Lightloot womes he's starting to like his new Jamily. Starring Hugh Borneville, Josie Lawrence and Barbara Murray (2/6)

12.00 (LW) News Headtlines; Shippling Forecast

12.00 (FM) News 12.049pm You and Yours Consumer ssues and oublic service records, presented by

12.00 (FM) News 12.04pm You and Yours Consumer issues and public service reports, presented by Liz Barclay

1.00 The World at One

1.30 Puzzle Panel Chris Maslanka presents nddlas and bran-leasers

2.00 The Archers Yesterday's edition (r)

2.15 Afternoon Play: J Edgar Hoover — Public Enemy by Mike Walker. Second of four plays about the anti-communist FBI director. Starring Michael Neil, John Guerresio and William Roberts

3.00 Good Friday Liturgy: The Seven Last Words Cardinal Basil Hume leads a meditation on the final words of Jesus, with Pessiontide hymns and music by Casals and Poulenc. See Choice

3.30 Rigby's Red Herrings Graeme Rigby searches for lamprays in Gloucoster. Last in series (4/4) (r)

3.45 Titls Scaptred late Part 65 of the history of Britain, narrated by Anna Massey Ir)

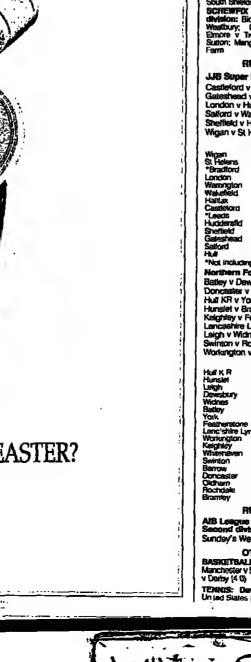

4.00 Open Book Humphrey Carpenter and guests Laik about the latest reads (r)

4.30 The Message Alex Brodie and his guests discuss current media trends
5.00 PM 6.00 Six O'Clock News
6.30 The News Quiz Topical quiz with the Times columnist Alan Coren and Andy Hamilton, hosted by Simon Hoggart
7.00 The Archers The latest from Ambridge
7.15 Front Row The author Vitram Seth discusses his new novel An Equal Music, a Tale of lost love in London

new novel An Equal Music, a late of lost love in London
7.45 High Days, Holy Days Actors including Leo Mickern, Leste Phillips and Denys Hawthome read works on an Easter theme by Vera Brittain, Boswell, Kilvert and Christina Rossetti. Broadcast earlier as pan of Woman's Hour [7]
6.00 Any Questions? Audience members from Coine in Larcashre put questions to panellists Ron Davies, MP. Claire Fox. MP. Theresa May, MP and Alex Salmond, MP. Chaired by Nick Clarke
8.45 Letter from America Allstair Cooke with another slice of stateside lie
9.00 The Friday Play: Missing the Melody Karen Hope's drame about a profoundly deaf woman awanting the results of an operation performed to restore her hearing. With Emme Fielding and Richard Hope (7)
10.00 The World Tonight with Robin Lustig
10.45 Book at Bedtime: My Michael's House Janet Suzman reads the final part of Colette's story (7)
11.00 Late Night on 4: Late Tackle Eleanor Oldroyd chairs the sporting magazine
11.30 Nowhere to Hide Prose from Joyce Carol Cates's classic study On Boxing
12.00 News 12.30am The Late Book: Age of Aussterity Michael Frayn reads his ironic account of the 1951 Festival of Britain, with its uncarry forecast of the Mitennium Dome

FREQUENCY GUIDE, RADIO 1. FM 97.8-99.8. RADIO 2. FM 88.0-90.2. RADIO 3. FM 90.2-92.4. RADIO 4. FM 92.4-94.6; LW 198; MW 720. RADIO 5 LIVE. MW 693, 809. WORLD SERVICE. MW 848; LW 198 (12.45-5.55am). CLASSIC FM. FM 100-102. VIRGIN RADIO. FM 105.8; MW 1197, 1215. TALK RADIO. MW 1053, 1089. Television and radio Retings compiled by Perry Cleveland-Peck, Ian Hughes, Gillian Maxey, Jane Gregory and

Far too much soap in the changing rooms

Playing the Field (BBCl) lurched to their various denouements last night. The women's football team drama finished in a cascade of multiple dimaxes, peaked by Castlefield Blues' triumph on the pitch, bringing promotion to the National League and a third series.

The show's strength lay in the fine writing and ensemble acting, both underplayed, witty, humane and sharply observed. This final episode, however, was taken up with sorting out the plot, as the tangled webs of deceit unravelled before our very eyes.

The match itself became the cathartic moment of resolution and redemption, but it was completely upstaged by the changing-room crises which preceded it. First the fiddling young entrepreneur. Ryan, was beaten up by the Mullen brothers in front of the team, including his horrified girlfriend. Jo. Then Theresa ended up telling Jo that her real dad was exciting or intriguing, but, like the oxen or horses of yore, they all end Geraldine's father with whom she, Theresa, had had an affair at the age of 14. This was news to Geraldine, who was listening in the doorway.

Geraldine's life fell apart on the spot. The rest of the team were gobsmacked too. Ryan decided his gob had been smacked enough and legged it, leaving coach John psyching the girls up with his pre-match peptalk. I bet Arsene Wenger and Alex Ferguson don't have to cope with this nonsense. But then, of course, the show isn't really about football, any more than Soldier, Soldier was about the army, On the Buses was about London Transport or Harbour Lights is about anywhere in the known universe. All these ensemble yarns, even well written ones like this, invariably end up as domestic melodramas. They may start as something powerful.

up as soap.

The same is certainly true of NYPD Blue (Channel 4). Stephen Bocheo did not invent this genre. When he was planning his first big multi-plot ensemble series, Hill Street Blues, he made the cast watch old episodes of the BBC's Z Cars, which created the template. But Bochco's productions defined the style and it was NYPD Blue which developed the hand-held. fly-on-the-wall camerawork, interspersed with montages of raw New York life.

There is probably a neologism for these shows, "cop-u-soap" perhaps or "soap-coperas". It is a tribute to Bochco's success that the style has been so widely imitated in America and Britain that NYPD Blue now seems perfectly normal, verging on the quaint.

HTV

10.40 The Easter Storykeepers (T) (1000550) 12.00 Crossing Rome (T) (58958)

12.30pm ITV Lunchtime News (1) (74700840)

12.45 WEST: Getaways (r) (T) (831260)
12.45 WALES: Wish You Were Here?
Amsterdam, Egypt, Jamaica and the Swiss Alps (r) (T) (831260)

1.15 Daffy Duck's Egg-Citement (I) (838173)

1.45 The Greatest Story Ever Told (1965)
Epic drama charting the life of Jesus, starring Max von Sydow, John Wayne.

5.15 Living a Bug's Life Behind the scenes

Hyde Pierce (2687482) 5.40 HTV News and Weather (1) (212005)

5.45 (TV Evening News; Weather (1)

6.00 Mr Been Double Bio Rowan Atkinson's comic atter-ego wreeks havoc. In Back to School Mr Bean, just parking the car proves too much for the hapless hero, while in Mr Bean in Room 426, he somehow manages to get locked out of his hotel room (68821)

7.00 Bruce Forsyth's Play Your Cards

7.30 Coronation Street Leanne faces ar

agonising choice (1) (85)

Right Popular game show (1) (4598)

Chariton Heston and Angela Lansbury. Directed by George Stevens (1) of the new computer-enimated Disney film, which features the voice of David

5.30am ITV Morning News (38444)

9.25 Hey Arnold! (1) (7367753)

12.43 HTV Weather (76298395)

9.50 Angry Beavers (1) (8011579)

6.00 GMTV (2204208)

10.20 Oggy and the Cockre

Paul Hoggart

There was an investigation at the heart of last night's episode. A prostitute's "John" had been stabbed to death and robbed in a park, and detective Andy Sipowicz had to follow a trail through the evidence of a bunch of hookers, junkies, bar-flies and sleazehalls to get at the mobster responsible.

This was a brief, almost halfhearted rerun of every American big-city crime yarn you ever saw, with the rough diamond dick getting down and dirty on the mean streets. The real interest, however, was over on the set of the hospital drama, where Sipowicz's partner, detective Bobby Simone, was learning that his heart had suffered permanent damage and he would need a transplant

Simone, of course, is played by Jimmy Smits. His glamorous good-looks make him an incongruous figure in the grubby world of the police precinct and the contrast with the short, stocky, pugnacious Sipowicz (Dennis Franz) could not be more marked. But this is a "buddy" story, so the real interest lay in the emotional stress suffered by Sipowicz as his partner lay at death's door. It made him even more aggressive than usual.

Still, Simone's prognosis doesn't seem too bad. Sipowicz's colleagues stopped him doing anything really dumb; they managed to crack the murder case, and at least they didn't even have to play a crucial football match afterwards.

m thinking about having a 'professional character alarm" installed on top of our television. This is a red light and siren device which will flash and sound every time a really irritating new personality appears, giving viewers the chance to change channels or leave the room before they can get under your skin.

It would have gone off during 2DIY4 (BBC2), as soon as "master carpenter" Rics Martin put in an appearance. The idea of this programme is that Rics and his colleague, the plumber Tony Elvin, will show us all how to perform simple DIY tasks by teaching members of the public in their own homes.

It's like Ground Force or Home Front without the outlandish designs. Instead they are just putting up a few shelves or changing the taps. Last night a research analyst called Nicky had very handsome mixer tap with shower attachment fitted, while social worker Chris Mamby got a useful MDF desk and shelving combo installed in the alcove in her son's bedroom.

Although I have undertaken a wide range of DIY projects in my time. I have never attempted to change a tap unit, so I watched with something vaguely approaching interest. Tony's presentation was clear, systemacic and logical and the next time this problem arises I will feel fully confident to call a plumber.

Rics, on the other hand is an insufferably chirpy cockney geezer, straight out of an Ealing comedy and horribly pleased with himself. Perhaps he will show us how to install a professional character alarm so we can switch channels before he appears.

BBC1

7.00am News; Weather (T) (5779918) 7.10 Children's BBC: Spot and Grandparents Go to the Carnival (6440622) 7.40 Sperky's Magic Prano (7076192) 8.30 The Silver Brumby (29444) 9.00 Inch High Privata Eye (7353550) 9.25 The Midas Touch (7363937) 9.55 Teletubbies (7397937) 10.20 The World of Peter Rabbit and

10.50 News; Weather (T) (8043821) 11.00 The Shadow of the Cross (51192) 12.00 The People's Passion (1956802) 12.50pm News; Weather (T) (74702208)

· l'aind

1.05 Battersea Dogs' Home Two lurchers are admitted (84191376) 1.25 Neighbours Susan takes on the local radio station (T) (84195192) 1.50 Back to the Future (1985) Michael J. Fox stars in the blockbusting sci-fi adventure about a teanager who is transported back to the 1950s. Directed by Robert Zemeckis (T) (32600260) 3.40 L & K Mystery Toons (T) (7156444)

4.20 Brambly Hedge Animated adventura for all the family (T) 4.45 Swap 'Tli You Drop (T) (481314) 5.15 News; Weather (1) (2692314)

5.40 Neighbours Susan takes on the local radio station (r) (T) (481685) 6.05 Beethoven (1992) A slobbering St Bernard invades the home of an all-American family and ingratiates himself with the household. With Charles Grodin, Bonnie Hunt, Oliver Platt and

David Duchovny. Directed by Brian Levant (T) (3956173) 7.30 Top of the Pops The week's chart-toppers, featuring the UK's number

8.00 Ground Force An update from Whitley Bay, where the green-fingered team revisit a family's once-neglected front garden which they transformed into a horticultural paradise (1) (8550)

8.30 Changing Rooms Redecorated The designers return to the sites of some of their earlier creations (T) (318598) 9.10 News; Weather (T) (200289)

Dervia Kirwan stars as a disturbed young accident victim (9.30pm)

9.30 CHOICE The Dark Room First of e two-part adaptation of Minette Walters's thriller (T) (2906685) 10.45 Parkinson Meets Woody Allen comedian. Last in senes (T) (551463) 11.35 The Word on the Street People affected by the Troubles in Northern Ireland (6/7) (599173)

11.50 Far and Away (1992) Ron Howard's romantic drama set in the 1890s, with Tom Cruise as a poor Insh larmer lorced to accompany a landowner's daughte (Nicole Kidman) to the US (T) (69342753) 2.00em Weather (5024512)

·BBC2

7.00am A Miracle of Tears (3501598) 7.45 The Old Dark House (1932) Classic comedy horror starring Borls Karloff, Directed by James Whale (8450482) 8.55 Man's Favourite Sport? (1964) Rock Hudson stars as a hapless salesman who is entered into an angling competition. Directed by Howard Hawks

10.50 Kidnapped (1971) Michael Caine stars as Albert Breck, who escapes the Redcoets at the massacre of Culloden and ends up having to decide between

Scotland's cause or saving an innocent man's life, With Trevor Howard, Directed by Delbert Mann (20530314) 12.30pm Birds with Tony Soper (3747550)

Tim Henman will be hoping to add to Britain's recent success (12,50pm)

12.50 Davis Cup Tennis; Great Britain v USA Sue Barker introduces live coverage of the first day of the singles contest at the National Indoor Arena in Sirminghen Britain are riding high on their 3-2 success over India in September and the American team will be well aware of the home side's determination to progress in a tournament that Britain has not won since 1936. Lining up for Britain are Tim Henman, Greg Rusedski, Miles MacLagan and Neil Broad. The US contingent consists of Todd Martin, Jim Courier, Jan Michael Gambili amd Alex

7.00 Lee and Herring's This Morning with Richard, Not Judy Cornedy chat show hosted by Slewart Lee and Richard Herring (r) (7444)

7.30 Local Heroes Adam Hart-Davis tells the fascinating stories of scientists and inventors from Merseyside (T) (31) 8.00 As the Crow Flies Janet Street-Porter meets David Steel and Sting on the second leg of her trek (1) (6192) 8.30 Gardeners' World Alan Titchmarsh welcomes the timely arrival of spring into his Hampshire garden (1) (5227) 9.00 Murder Most Hordd Faced with the prospect of staff cutbacks, school dinner lady Tiffany Drapes decides to get rid of the opposition (T) (3463) 9.30 Never Mind the Buzzcocks With Bill Balley (T) (443685) 10.15 Reality Bites (1994) Drama detailing the exploits of a group of graduates struggling to cope with their different careers and complicated relationships Starring Winone Ryder and Ethan Hawke, Directed by Ben Stiller (T) (649821)

11.45 CHOICE Seinfeld Highlights from the first 100 shows of the popular sitcom(T) (223598) 12.30am The Bride of Frankenstein (1935)

Baron Frankenstein sets about building a mate tor his creation. Classic horror starring Boris Karloff and Colin Clive Directed by James Whala (T) (9865932) 1.45 Weather (2559512) 1.50 Close 3.00 BBC Learning Zone 5.00 Close

CENTRAL

As HTV West except:

12.45-1.15pm Dinosaurs (831260)

5.40-5.45 Central News; Weather (212005)

11.20-11.30 Central News: Weather 1482735

11.30 Midnight Caller (878647) 12.35am FILM: Age of Treason (321951)

2.20 Chib@vision (7382932)

4.00 Central Jobfinder '99 (7452116) 5.20-5.30 Asian Eye (9965574)

5.15-5.45 Westcountry Live; Weather (473395)

11.30-1.35 FILM: St Elmo's Fire (69328173)

5.15-5.45 Meridian Tonight (473395) 7.29-7.30 Meridien Weather (161227)

11.20-11,35 Meridian News; Weather (734024)

A new adventure for the naval officer played by loan Gruffudd (8pm)

8.00 CROICE Hornblower Last in the swashbuckling adventure series (4/4) (T) (2005)

10.00 Tarrant on TV The wacky world of global television (r) (59685) 0.30 Pleasure Island Two swingers tie the knot (3/5) (T) (35005) 11.00 ITV Nightly News; Weather (T) (119666) 11.20 HTV News and Weather (T) (734024) 11.35 Wonderful You Heather falls for her film class lecturer Alan, and Joe frets that his parents' marriage is heading for the rocks, while Henry gets a call from a record company rep keen to discuss his demo (4/7) (r) (1) (320840)

12.35am ITV at the Belfort Festival Highlights (r) (6975777)

1.35 Age of Treason (1993) Bryan Brown stars as a man on a mission to find the missing son of a Roman emperor. Directed by Kevin Connor (T) (413932) 3.15 Club@vision Dance scene (4924154) 4.00 The Haunted Fishtank (r) (39-146636) 4.25 Soundtrax (72114390)

4.45 ITV Nightscreen (25486864)

5.00 Coronation Street (r) (T) (87319)

5.15 Campus Cops (2687482)

3.05 Box Office America (84807999)

3.35 The Haunted Fishtank (44239970)

 WEST CONTROL

As HTV West except:

12.44pm Westcountry Weather (76298395) 12.45-1.15 The Baidy Man (831260)

11.20-11.30 Westcountry News; Weather

The state of the s

As HTV West except:

12.45-1.15pm 5hortland Street (831260)

5.00-5.30em Freescreen (87319) MGIA

As HTV West except: 12.45-1.15pm Shortland Street (831260)

5.14 Angita Air Watch (6822519) 5.15-5.45 Anglia News and Weather 11.19 Angila Air Watch (628024)

11.20-11.35 Anglia News and Weather (734024)

Starts: 5.55am Sesame Street (r) (28330579) 5lats: 3.55am Sesame Street (f) (2633076) 7.00 The Big Breakfast (21639686) 9.05 FILM: Bilty Rose's Jumbo (f) (76579050) 11.25 Boy Meets World (f) (61304937) 11.50 Up the Creek (f) (14147376) 12.40pm The Three Stooges (f) (f) (42234376) 1.00 Planed Plant (f) (69260802) 1.30 FILM: Scott of the Anterctic (f) (34432181) 3.30 Collectors' Lot (T) (99683956) 4.00 Fifteen-to-One (T) (99662463) 4.30 Ricki Laka (T) (99668647) 5.00 Planed Plant (41033260) 5.30 Countdown (1) (99682227) 6.00 Newyddion 6 (1) (49116647) 6.10 Py Newis I (r) (38761916) 6.30 Moby-Dick (99663192) 7.00 Pobol y Cwm (1) (41053024) 7.30 Newyddion (1) 49712192) 7.45 Offeren o Fawl (64060460) 8.50 Y Clwb Rygbi (1) (52 109043) 9.20 Friends (1) (1) (57683289) 9.50 Ramssry's Boiling Point (3/5) (1) (56980208) 10.20 Brookside (1) (51427956) 10.55 Fresier (1) (81487550) 11.25 So Graham Morton (T) (8783918) 12.05am TF! Friday (42626086) 1.15 4 Later; Pulp (84344593) 1.30 Flava (23112135) 2.00 The Mod Squad (21801512) 3.00 Vids (r) (87187654) 3.30 FiLM: The Howling (T) (60458654) 5.05 Diwedd

CHANNEL 4

5.55am Sesame Street (5300647) 7.00 The Big Breakfast (99624395) 9.05 Billy Rose's Jumbo (1962) Circus

musical, starring Doris Day. Directed by Charles Walters (T) (82021289) 11.25 Boy Meets World (T) (1200869) 11.50 T4orce: Sesame Street (56596) 12.30pm Bewitched (r) (T) (58444)

1.00 Pet Rescue (T) (55918) 1.30 The Ocean World of John Stones How the world's oceans reveal evidence of environmental change affecting the future of the planet (r) (80043) 2.00 The Victous Circle (1957) Thriller about a Harley Street surgeon who sets out to clear turnset of a trumped-up murder charge. John Mills, Derek Farr and Noelle Middleton star. Directed by Gerald Thomas (1) (74163)

3.30 Collectors' Lot Comedy memorabilia (r) (1) (79)

4.00 Fifteen-to-One (1) (14) 4.30 Countdown (T) (7827314)

4.55 Ricki Lake (1) (9672647)

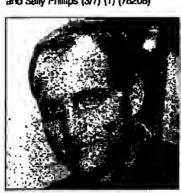

5.30 Pet Rescue Animal welfare tales (T) (50) 6.00 TFI Friday Music and chat, with Chris Evans (66463)

7.00 Channel 4 News; Weather (1) (795208) 7.15 The Long Good Friday The story behind tast year's peace agreement in Northern ireland (T) (527032)

8.00 Trading Up Car-swapping game show (3/8) (1) (1260)

tragic past (T) (3145) 9.00 Friends The gang celebrate new year with a party at Monica and Rachel's flat — will they all keep their promise not to bring dates? (r) (T) (8531) 9.30 Smack the Pony Officest sketch show, starring Fiona Allen, Doen Mackichen and Selly Phillips (3/7) (1) (78208)

Woody Harrelson pays a surprise visit to Seattle (10pm)

10.00 Frasier Woody turns up out of the blue (T) (57227) 10.30 So Graham Norton Comedy (179918)

11.10 King of the Hill Bobby signs up for the soccer team (T) (238395) 11.50 TFI Friday Shown earlier (r) (324666) 12.50am 4 Later Introduction; Pulp (1496574) 1.10 Flava The black music scene (1777067) 1.40 The Mod Squad Julie's mother arrives in Los Angeles (3050883) 2.40 Vids Offbeat video review (r) (5025241) 3.10 The Howling (1980) A TV newswoman staying at a Californian retreat discovers the rimates are werewolves. Tongue-incheek shocker, with Dee Wallace and Patrick Macnee. Directed by Joe Dante (T) (758338)

4.45 The Audition An actor struggles to cope as the boundaries between illusion and reality become blurred (r) (42677970) 5.10 To Kill a Dead Man Film noir by trip-hop band Portishead, Inspired by their love of movie soundtracks (r) (9049932)

CHANNELE

6.00am 5 News and Sport (5165869) 7.00 WideWorld Part one. The lite and work of Copernicus (r) (T) (2015685)

7.30 Milkshake! (2803043) 7.35 Dappledown Farm (r) (4234956) 8.00 Alvin and the Chipmunks (r) (8014289) 8.30 Witchworld; 5 News Update (8006260)

9.00 Nancy Lam (r) (T) (4978685) 9.25 Russell Grant's Postcards (3445753) 9.30 The Oprah Winfray Show (r) (6034937) 10.20 Sunset Beach Antonio admits his teelings for Gabi (T) (4410111)

11.10 Leeza (r) (3182376)

12.00 5 News at Noon (T) (8017376) 12.30pm Family Affairs Clive humiliation (r) (T) (5934555) 1.00 The Bold and the Beautiful Jast

confides in Justine (T) (2014956) 1.30 The Roseanne Show Veronica's Closet stars Kathy Najimy and Kirstie Alley talk to the bubbly comedian (6384096)

2.00 100 Per Cent Gold (2318173) 2.30 Good Afternoon (8901043) 3.30 Hanover Street (1979) American pilot Harnson Ford falls for a married nurse in war-tom London. With Lesley-Anne Down and Christopher Plummer. Directed by

Peter Hyams (2076573) 5.30 100 Per Cent (6305840) 6.00 5 News and Sport; Weather (6302753) 6.30 Family Affairs Roy is released from prison (1) (6393005)

7.00 Knight Rider A magazine publisher is killed while working on a lop-secret story and the police show little interest in the case (r) (2329289) 7.30 Animal Marvels The composer Nick Glennie-Smith unveils his symphony of animal noises (1) (6399289) 8.00 Was It Good for You? A retired Stockport couple embark on an historical ...

tour of Tuscany (11/14) (2338937) 8.30 Nick's Queet Nick Baker discovers the plight of the South American Orinoco crocoolles (7/8) (1) (2317444)
9.00 A Family Divided (1995) Faye Dunaway

stars as a devoted mother whose dyll is shattered by the discovery that her son was involved in a brutal gang rape — and to make matters worse, her husband is prepared to conceal the crime from the authorities. With Cameron Bancroft and Stephen Collins. Directed by Donald Mrye (I); 5 News Upda 10.50 Lexic The Dark Zone Storles Part one.

The intrepid insect encounters an intergalactic cannibal (r) (3068444) 11.50 Improper Conduct (1993) A woman is raped by her devious boss, who then sets out permanently to silence any Psychological thriller, with Steven Bauer,

Directed by Jag Mundhra (2010821) 1.40am Godspell (1973) Musical updating of the New Testament, set on the streets of New York (7024512)

3.25 Face the Edge (1989) Two triends realise it's time that they taced up to adult responsibilities, and embark on a skang trip together to enjoy their youthful recklessness one last time. Drama, starring Tracy Scoggins. Directed by Peter Winograd (87180680)

VIDEO Plus+ and VIDEO Plus+ codes
The numbers after each programme are for VIDEO Plus+ programming Just enter the VIDEO Plus+ number(s) for the relevant programme(s) into your video recorder for easy raping.
For more details call VIDEO Plus+ on 0640-750710.
Calls charged at 25p per minute at all times.
VIDEO Plus+®, 14 Biacklands Trc, London, SW3-25P
VIDEO Plus+®; is a registered trademark of Generalar Development Corporation. © 1998.

4.40 Prisoner: Cell Block H (4389067)

5.30 100 Per Cent (r) (6109319)

2.05 BBC News 24 (65915512) SATELLITE (CABLE AND DIGITAL

• For further listings see Saturday's Vision

SKY ONE 7.00em Count Duckula (90127) 7.30 Grammy (84444) 0.00 Earthworm Jm (79463) 5.30 Godolla (78734) 9.00 Poka-mon (82314) 8.30 Sampsons (71078) 10.00 Smpsons (67289) 10.30 xena Warnor Princess (65024) 11.30 Earthworm Jim rincess (65024) 11.30 Earlbworn Jim (2011) 12.00 Tarzan (26869) 1.00pm Mad About You (40669) 1.30 Jeopardy (21555) 2.00 Saily Jessy Raphael (6916) 3.00 Jenny Jones (31227) 4.00 Star Trek, Deep Szace Nine (10734) 5.00 Star Trek, Voyager (5963) 0.00 Friends (4005) 6.30 Friends (6865) 7.00 Sampenne (1802) 7.30 1963) 0.00 Fnends (4005) 5.30 Fnends (8685) 7.00 Simpsons (1602) 7.30 Simpsons (1602) 7.30 Simpsons (4869) 8.00 Simpsons (5550) 8.30 Simpsons (6685) 9.00 World's Gresses (40848) (41192) 10.00 Copt (6885) 9.00 World's Gresses (40848) (41192) 10.00 Copt (6885) 9.00 Simpsons (6885) 9.00 World's Gresses (40848) (41192) 10.00 Copt (6885) 9.00 Simpsons (6885) 9.00 Simps 80579; 10.30 Cops (99227) 11.00 Friends (11453) 11.30 Friends (56173) 12.00 Star rsk Voyager (25593) 1.00am Lew and Order (33561) 2.00 Long Play (1144319)

SKY BOX OFFICE Sky's pay-per-view movie channels. view any tilm telephone 0990 800888 3AY BOX OFFICE 1 (Transponder 51) Chasing Amy (1997) SKY BOX OFFICE 2 (Transponder 60)

Jackin Brown (1997) SKY BOX OFFICE 3 (Transponder 59) Flubber (1997) Shy BOX OFFICE 4 (Transponder 58) Kise the Girls (1998) SKY PREMIER

6.00am The Incredible Journey (1963) 120005) 0.00 Matilda (1996) (73840) 16.00 Betman and Robin (1997) (71032) 12.00 (63463) (33173) 2.00pm Narrow Escape (1997) (33173) 2.00pm Narrow Escape (1997) (3373) 4.00 Natilida (1995) (3647) 6.00 Milasion: impossible (1996) (53937) 8.00 Batman and Robin (1997) (53482) (0.00 The Gilimmer Man (1995) (148444) 11.40 The Crow: City of Angels (1996) (193314) 1.15cm Home for the Holidays (1995) (19363) 3.00 The Deliverance of Elaine (1996) (1984) 4.30 Narrow Escape (1996) (54864) 4.30 Narrow Escape

SKY MOVIEMAX 5.35am Miracia in the Woods (1997) 64547314) 7.10 Mayday at 40,000 Feet (TVM 1976) (80364550) 9.00 Fatso (1980) Pinocchio (1986) (48918) 1.00 Mayday at 40,000 Feet (TVM 1978). (66550) 3.00 Fatso (1980) 187314) 5.00 The Adventures of Pinocchio (1996) (88111 7.00 Preview (6588 7.30 UK Top 10 (9337) 9.00 Action Herces: Kevin Costner (2918) 9.00 Action Heroes: New Costine (2819) 8.30 Movie Magic Your Worst Nightmare (4753) 9.00 Intensity (1997) (377005) 12.00 Sudden Impact (1983) (16845) 2.00mm Fear (1990) (59338) 3.35 Adams: His Song Continues (1986) (247048) SKY CINEMA

(1430203) 5.00 Close

4.00pm Pony Express (1953) (7627937) 8.00 Jesus Christ Superster (1973) (2906078) 8.00 Revenge of the Pink Pen-ther (1978) (7958573) 10.00 Who's Afreid of Virginia Woolf (1969) [8131531 12.10em Big Bounce (1969) [4111067] 2.00 Lucky Me (1954) (5806749) 3.45 Obsession (1948) (53787574) FILMFOUR 6.00pm The Scent of Green Pepaya 1993) (8750802) 0.00 Est Drink Mari Woman (1994) (38879043) 10.10 Delicatessen (1990) (8895647) 12.00 La Grande Bouffe (1973) (40532932) 2.10am Like Weter for Checolate (1992) (2899715) 4.25 Jamon Jamon (1992)

9.00pm WCW Nitro (65991753) 11.35 WCW Thunder (42735227) 1.30em Eye of the Davil (1967) (44819777) 3.00 Once a Third (1965) (84984241) 5.00 Close

SKY SPORTS 1 7.00am. Sports Centre 7.15 Footbell League Review 7.45 What a Weekend 5.15 You're On Sky Sports! e.00 Furbol Mundial 9.30 Aerobots 10.00 Good Morring Sports 9.30 Acrobics 10.00 Good Morning Sports Fans — Good Finday Special 12.00 Live
Super League 2.00pm Live Baskelball 4.00
Motor Racing 4.30 World Sport Special
5.00 Super League 8.00 Sports Centre
7.00 Live Football Special 19.00 Sports
Centre 11.00 Hold the Back Page 12.00
Sports Centre 1.00am Football Special 9.30 Super League 3.30 World Wrestling Federation, Raw 5.30 Total Sport

7.00mm Aerobics 7.30 Sports Centre 7.45 Survival of the Fittest 8.15 Motor Racing 8.45 Sports Centre 9.00 The Rugby Club 10.00 Motor Racing 12.00 US Golf 2.00pm

Golf Arnold Palmer — Golf's Hearl and Soul 4.00 Futbol Mundal 4.30 Live Nationwide League Footbal 7.00 Rugby Unon 9.00 Rugby Super League 10.00 Live US Golf 12.00 Nationwide League Footbal 1.00am Rugby Union 3.00 Hold the Back Page 4.00 Sports Centre 5.00 Moto-Plus 5.30 Extreme Sailing SKY SPORTS 3 12.00mm Trans World Sport 1.00mm Sports

Unimited 2.00 Bobby Cheriton's Footbell Scrapbook 3.30 Extreme Saling 4.00 Inside the Senior PGA Tour 4.30 Baseball May 5.30 Moto-Plus 6.00 Golf: Arnold - Gott's Heart and Sout 3.00 sketball 10.00 Wreating 12.00 Closs EUROSPORT 7.30em US Golf 8.30 Extreme Sports 0.00 Football 10.30 Racing Une 11.30 Uve Swimming 2.30pm Footbell 4.80 Live Women's Tenns 5.30 Trial 8.30 Extreme Sports 7.00 Swimming 8.00 Live Women's

Tennis 9.30 Boxing 18.00 Ten-Ph Bowin 11.00 Extreme Sports 12.00 Extreme Sports 12.30mm Closs UK GOLD 7.00am Crossroads 7.30 Neighbours 7.55
EastEnders 8.30 The Bif 9.30 The House of Eiel 10.30 Rhoda 11.00 Dallas 11.55
Neighbours 12.25pm EastEnders 1.00
Bugs 2.00 Dallas 2.55 The Bif 3.55
EastEnders 4.30 Rhoda 5.00 All Creatures
Great and Small 8.00 Dynasty 7.00 Ever

Decreasing Circles 7.40 Last of the Summer Wine 8.20 The Britiss Empire 0.00 The Thin Blue Line 9.40 FZLM: Jews (1975) 12.05am The Bill 1.05 FILM: Play Misty for Ma (1971) 8.00 Screenshop

GRANADA PLUS 5.00em Within These Walls 7.00 How's Your Father? 7.30 The Odd Couple 8.00 Familes 6.30 Mind Your Langeuge 9.00 Classic Coronation Street 9.30 Emmerdale Fam 16.00 Upstars, Downstars 11.00 The Genile Touch 12.00 Classic Coronation Street 12.30pm Emmerdale Farm 1.00 Sireel 12.30pm Emmerdele Farm 1.00 Mmd Your Language 1.30 Me and My Gri 2.00 Upstairs, Downslairs 3.00 The Love Boal 4.00 The Professionals 5.00 Harl To Hert 6.00 Emmerdale Farm 6.30 Classic Coronation Street 7.00 The Professionals 8.00 The Benny Hill Show .8.00 The Sweeney 10.00 Hale and Page 10.30 Wheelappers and Shurters' Social Club 11.00 Granada Men and Motors

Deficatessen, a bizarre comedy from Marco Caro and Jean-Pierre Jeunet, set in a post-apocalyptic landscape (FilmFour, 10.10pm)

CARLTON SELECT

5.00pm What's Cooking? 5.30 Gridock 6.00 My Two Yives 6.30 Our House 7.60 State on History Moon 8.00 Blue Heelers 8.00 Love Hurts 19.00 The Good Sex Guide 10.30 The Screen 11.00 Hit Street Blues 12.00 My Two Wives 12.30am Gridlock 1.00 The Last Place on Earth 2.00 Close

DISNEY CHANNEL 6.00mm Gurrani Bears 6.25 Classic Toors 6.35 Tale Spin 7.00 Classic Toors 7.10 Aladdin 7.35 101 Darmahars 0.00 Goof Troop 8.25 Classic Tooms 8.30 Timon and Pumbas 0.00 Art Attack 9.35 Doug 10.00 Recess 10.15 Pepper Arm 10.30 Ned's Newt 11.00 Smart Guy 11.30 Teen Angel 12.00 Boy Meets World 12.30pm Brotherly Love 1.00 Omosaurs 1.30 Amazing Animals 1 55 New Adventures of Winne the Pooh. 2.10 Bits Size 2.20 Bear in the Big Blue House 2.45 Nes Adventises of Winne the Poch 3.00 The Little Mermard 3.30 Art Attack 4.00 101 Delmarans 4.30 Hercules The TV Show 5.00 Recess 5.15 Pepper Arm 5.30 Smart G.ry 6.00 Teen Angel 6.30 Boy Meets World 7.00 FE.M.: D3: The Alighty Duelos (1996) 8.45 Honey I Shrunk the Kds: The TV Show 9.05 Dinosaurs 10.00 Home Improvement 10.30 The Wonder Years 11.00 Touched by An Angel 11.50 Classic Toons 12.00 Class

FOX KIDS NETWORK 5.00am Masked Rider 6.30 Beetleborgs

6.00am Masked Rider 8.30 Beetleborgs Metalite 6.55 Power Rangers Turbo 7.45 Saver Surier 8.10 Montal Kombet 8.35 Mowdi 0.00 Goosebumps 9.25 Eene, Indiana 9.50 Oggy and the Cockroaches 10.00 Goosebumps 10.25 Med Jack the Prate 10.40 Secret Files of the Spy Dogs 10.50 Oggy and the Cockroaches 11.00 Goosebumps 11.25 Eenns and Grasher 11.50 Oggy and the Cockroaches 12.00 Goosebumps 12.25eam Incredible Huis. Goosebumps 12.25pm Incredible Hus 12.50 Oggy and the Cockroaches 1.00 Goosetumps 1.25 Fartastic Four 1.50 Oggy and the Cockroaches 2.00 Goosebumps 2.25 x-Men 2.50 Oggy and the Cockreaches 3.06 Goosebumps 3.30 x-Press 3.35 Spiderman 4.00 Gooseburnes 4.25 Hero Turties 5.00 Derms and

Kong Country 6.30 EeklStravaganza 6.55 Oggy and the Cockroaches 7.00 Close NICKELODEON

6.00em Brothers Flub 7.00 Azahhi Rea Monsters 0.00 Catdog 8.00 Rugrats 10.00 The Wild Thomberrys 11.00 Sabrana the Witch 11.30 Sebrina the Te

TROUBLE 7.00mm USA High 7.30 USA High 8.00 Saved by the Belt The New Class 8.30 Saved by the Belt The New Class 9.00 Hang Time 9.30 Hang Time 10.00 Sweet Valley High 19.30 Sweet Valley High 11.00 Saved By the Belt: The College Years 11.30 Saved By the Belt: The College Years 12.00 The Fresh Prince of Bel-Arr 12.30pm The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air 1.00 Backstreet Boys 1.30 Backstreet Boys in Concert 3.00 City Guys 3.30 City Guys 4.00 The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air 4.30 The Fresh Prince of Bel-Ar 5.00 in the House 5.30 in the House 6.00 Ready or Not 6.30 Movies, Games and Videos 7.00 USA High 7.30 USA High

BRAVO 8.00om Martiel Law 0.00 Extreme Championship Wrestling 9.30 Cope 16.00 The Late Lounge 10.30 Erotic Confessions 11.00 Fills: Frankeribooker (1990) 1.00am Erotic Confessions 1.20 The Late Lounge 2.00 Martel Law 3.00 Fillst Sec-with the Stars (1990) 5.00 Edneme Championship Wresting 0.00 Close PARAMOUNT COMEDY

7.00pm Civeless 7.30 Grace Under Fire 8.00 Mad About You 8.30 Spin City 8.00 Drop the Dead Dorkey 9.30 Viticae Line Is It Anywey? 10.00 FILLS: Meathatis (1879) 11.45 Lancelot Link 12.00 Late Night with David Letterman 1.00mm Garry Shandling's Show 1.30 Nurses 2.00 Almost Perfect 2.30 Tibs and Fibs 8.00 Mork and Mindy 3.30 Abbott and Costelio 4.00 Class

THE SCI-FI CHANNEL SATELLITE: Spm-MIDNIGHT ONLY 7.30am Bloomberg Information Television 8.00 Sightings 9.00 Battlestar Galactica 10.00 The Sa: Million Dollar Man 11.00 Dark Shadows 11.30 The Ray Bradbury Theatre

12.00 The Twight Zone 12.30pm The

1 Wilight Zone 1.00 Tales of the Unexpected 1.30 Tales of the Unexpected 2.00 Amazong Stones 2.30 Mystenes, Magic and Miracles 3.00 Bartiester Galaxiaca 4.00 The Incredible Huk 5.00 Sightings 3.00 The Ray Backbury Theatre 6.30 New Afred Heahcock 7.00 The Six Million Doltar Man 0.00 Amazing Stones 8.30 Highlander: The Raven 9.30 FILM: Waterworld (1985) 12.00 FILM: Amageddon 1.45am Sci-Focus Special 2.00 Cycemet 2.30 100 Years of Hor for 8.00 Dark Shadows 4.00 Close

HOME & LEISURE

B:00es, Fishing with Paul Meredith 7.00
Andy little's Anging Adventure 7.30 Andy Little's Anging Adventure 8.00 Screaming Reels 8.30 Screaming Reels 8.00 Rex Huril
Fishing Adventures 9.30 Fishing Australia
10.00 Salmon Run with Jack Charlton
10.30 Salmon Run with Jack Charlton
11.00 A River Somewhere 11.25 The Home and Lesure House 11.30 A River
Somewhere 12.00 Total Fishing with Matt
Haves 12.30em Total Fishing with Matt Heyes 12.30pm Total Fishing with Matt Hayes 1.00 Great White Shark 2.00 Go Fishing 2.30 Go Fishing 3.00 Hooked on Fishing with Paul Young 3.30 Hooked on Fishing with Paul Young 4.30 Andy Little's

4.00pm Rex Hunt Fishing Adventures 4.30 A River Somewhere 5.00 Searching for Lost Worlds 0.00 Wildfile SOS 6.30 Love in the Wild 7.30 Futureworld 8.00 Outback Adventures 8.30 Uncharted Africa 8.00 Wild Rides 10.00 Sty Truckers 11.00 Weapons of War 12.00 One Way Tickel to Situs 1.00am Searching for Lost Worlds 2.00 Close

Angling Adventure

DISCOVERY

ANIMAL PLANET 12.00em Hollywood Salari 1.00pm Crocodile Humer 2.00 Crocodile Hunter 3.00 Crocodile Hunter 4.00 Crocodile Hunter 5.00 Crocodile Hunter 6.00 Rediscovery of the World 7.00 Crocodile Hunter 8.00 River Dinosaur 3.00 The Big Animal Show 9.30 Crocodile Hunter 10.00

12.00 Close NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC 7.00pm Myths and Glants 7.30 Clues to the Past 6.00 The Shark Files: The Fox and the Shark 0.00 Insects Myths and Legends

Hunters Dawn of the Dragons 11,00 Croccodile Hunter 11,30 Croccodile Hunter

9.30 Hippol 10.00 Island of the Glant Bears 11.00 Nepal. Life Among the Tigers 11.30 Primeval Islands 12.00 Seal Hunter's Cave 12.30am The Sea Bephants Beech HISTORY

4.00pm The Winter War: Counter-Attack 5.00 Clocks 8.00 The Cluest for the Holy Lance 7.00 Story of the Gun. Next Generation 8.00 Memories of 1989 CARLTON FOOD

9.00em Food Network Daily 9.30 Coston's 9.00am Hood Network Daily 9.30 Coron's Nutchen College 10.00 For Better, For Worse 10.30 Simply Balang 11.00 Simply Antony 11.30 Caribbean Light 12.00 Food Network Daily 12.30pm French Lunch 1.00 Coxon's Nutchen College 1.30 Gordon Farnsty's Passion for Flavour 2.00 Can'l Sland the Heat 2.30 Food Network Daily 3.00 Earl Earliers 2.30 Toxet of England 3.00 Food Factory 3.30 A Taste of England 4.00 A Year at Bellymaine 4.30 s 5.00 Close

LIVING

6.00em Tiny and Crew 6.25 Johnson and Friends 6.40 Tiny Tales 6.45 Babalcos 6.50 Police Dot Shorts 7.00 Practical Parenting Polis Dol Shorts 7.00 Practical Parening 7.05 Professor Bubble 7.30 Califou 7.35 Bug Alert 7.35 Practical Parening 8.00 Barney and Friends 8.25 My Zoo 5.30 Thy and Crew 8.50 Practical Parening 3.00 Special Babes 9.30 The Roseante Show 10.00 The Jerry Springer Show 10.50 Maury Povich 11.40 The Heat is On 13.40 The Through 12.60 1 Maury Povich 11.40 The Heat is On 12.10pm Through the Keyhole 12.40 Rescue 911 1.10 Beyond Belei. Fact or Fiction 1.40 Maury Povich 2.30 Fill.M: The Day Christ Died (1980) 5.10 The Heat is On 5.40 Ready, Steady, Cook 6.15 The Jerry Springer Show 7.05 R escue 911 7.35 Animal Rescue 8.00 LA Law 0.00 Fill.M: Saved By the Light (1995) 11.00 The Spoy Sex Fies 12.00 Close

ZEE TV

5.30am Guidasta 6.00 Sony Men Lony 6.30 Mast Must Show 7.00 Faith 7.30 News 8.00 Music Mag 8.30 Tara 2 9.00 Achikar 10.00 Yeh Zindag 11.00 Zake Ka Safer 11.30 Parampera 12.00 Fil.M 3.00pm Bangta TV 3.30 It's My Choice 4.00 Akbar Ruhel 4.30 Cho Cho Cho Cho 7.00 7.00 2.000 Sargia IV 3.30 it is My Chibb 4.00 Zee Zone 2 8.30 Amanai 6.00 Artst of the Fortught 6.30 Zee TV: Showcase 7.00 Chasme Bacidoor 7.30 Entertainment Express 8.00 News 8.30 Aashinead 9.30 FEUM 12.00 News 12.30mm Ru-Ba-Ru 1.00 X-Zone 2.00 FILM

RUGBY UNION 50

Will King rule in the game of two halves?

SPORT

SWIMMING 54 Records fall as Britain open medal account

FRIDAY APRIL 2 1999

Davis Cup draw favours hosts

Britain look to Henman for inspiration

THE easy part is over. The draw for Great Britain's first lie in the world group of the Davis Cup since 1992 went without a hitch yesterday. Now it is down to Tim Henman and Greg Rusedski to do the rest. Today they begin their grand adventure against the United States with Henman starting proceedings against Jim Courier, followed by Rusedski against Todd Martin.

In theory, the draw has fallen well for Britain, with the chance to get the first point on the board there for the taking - Henman is ranked No 7 in the world, while Courier lingers at No 54 - but the Davis Cup is different from any other tennis tournament and the weight of expectation will sit heavy on Henman's

This is the realisation of David Lloyd's ambition. In 1995, Britain were struggling to stay in the Euro-African zone group two, the equivalent of the Naconwide League third division in football, and playing Mona-co in a relegation tie. Britain won 5-0, but it was not much to celebrate. Then Lloyd, as Davis Cup captain, announced that within three years his team would be in the world group, the Premiership of ten-nis. While the potential of Hen-man and Rusedski was obvious, it was the sort of prediction that even Kevin Keegan would hesitate to make.

"When we played Monaco, we were starting out at rock bottom and we appreciated that," Henman said. 'We knew we were on a mission to get back into the world group. But I think that, with Greg's and my ability, we don't just want to settle for the first round. I think that with a little bit of luck, we firmly believe we can go all the way.

TIMES

TODAY: Singles (1pm): Tim Henman v Jim Courler, Greg Rusadski v Todd Martin. TOMORROW: Doubles (4pm): Henman and Rusedski v Couries and Alex O'Brien SUNDAY: Singles (2pm): Henman v Martin, Rusedski Courier

TELEVISION: Live on BBC2

captain were gung-ho, but no one was underplaying the ten-sion of the situation. They are professionals, they are experienced, but they are as prone to nerves as the next man.

"You are excited and you are nervous before you play a match, but, if anything, the easy bit is playing." Henman said. "You are out there, you're running around and, hopeful-ly, you're in control of the situation. When you're on the sidelines watching, you're 100 per cent behind your team but there is nothing you can actual-

Henman and Rusedski will have all the help they could wish for. The 9.400 seats at the National Indoor Arena in Birmingham are sold and the faithful have been provided with rattles, banners, flags and any number of patriotic to-kens with which to wave. make noise and generally get behind their team. Not that it seems to have made any impression on the Americans. Martin and Courier sat im-passively as the Davis Cup banner fell off the wall behind them and landed in their laps. "I'm assuming this is a bigger deal, perhaps, than Britain's other ties leading into this," Courier said, without a flicker of a smile. "but we just go about our business of prepar-ing and probably we are shel-tered from what you are witnessing and experiencing. We have a job to do. We come here, we prepare and try to do

TWO

Neither Courier nor Martin are big on emotion, but they have come to Birmingham with a point to prove. In the lead-up to the tie, much of the attention has been focused on Pete Sampras and Andre Agassi and their refusal to partici-pate, while Martin and Courier have been branded as second-string players.

That, though, is dangerous.
Both are climbing back up the rankings after a series of injuries and while Martin, ranked No 8, has risen faster, Courier's Davis Cup efforts cannot be ignored. Last year, against Russia, he took Yevgeny Kafelnikov to five sets before losing. but came back from two sets down to beat Marat Safin and settle the tie. He did il again against Belgium, winning the opening rubber and then the tie in a five-set doubles match with Martin.

Serving power - and the ability to deal with it - will be the key. The indoor Greenset surface is fast enough to let Henman and Rusedski show off their serving prowess, but not so fast that they will struggle to make returns. Martin believes that it will get faster once the arena is full and

In all the excitement, no one was mentioning the fact thal Henman and Rusedski have an II-2 losing record against Martin and Courier and Lloyd, the eternal optimist. was unusually cautious. "You can't predict Davis Cup," he said. "You can only predict it at about ten minutes past one when they have hit the first ball, then you know what is going to happen." And then it really will be up to Henman and Rusedski to do the rest.

Flintoff pulls Robert Croft for four during an innings of 112 from 67 balls that embarrassed the England attack. Photograph: Russell Boyce

THE England selectors had every reason to feel that they had made an inspired choice in naming Andrew Flintoff in the World Cup squad last night after the Lancashire all-rounder scored 112 from 67 balls in the first warm-up fixture. Unfortunately, Flintoff struck the runs against his

Along with Vince Wells, he was playing for a Lahore Gymkhana side, to allow all of the party match practice ahead of the Coca-Cola Cup in Sharjah next week, itself a "net" before the tournament in England. Angus Fraser bowled for England despite not being in the batting XI. Quite apart from his evident good form, it might be as well for the morale of the bowlers if the strapping Flintoff is promoted to the firstchoice learn. He hit seven sixes and Il fours during an innings lasting 127 minutes and forced Fraser out of the Flintoff flourishes at Fraser's expense picturesque ground twice in single over. Once Adam Hollioake had bowled Flintoff with a yorker, England progressed to victory by 137 runs. Their own total of 315 for five from 50 overs featured half-centuries by Alec Slewart, Graeme Hick, Neil Fairbrother and Adam Hollioake. All four retired to allow the lower order opportunities with the bat. Flintoff, 21, is the youngest player in the England squad and the only member of the party yet to appear in a one-day international. Although he made his Test debut against South Africa last season, he struggled to impose himself during the victories at Trent Bridge and Heading-ley. Elevation to the highest level may have arrived too

However, his powerful strokeplay came to the fore on the A tour to Zimbabwe and South Africa, where the mangement were also impressed that Flintoff had responded to instructions from David Graveney, the chairman of selectors, by slimming from 19st to less than 17st and improving his all-round fitness.

limited-overs cricket and bowls at a useful medium pace. England have nine or ten games — depending on whether they reach the Coca-Cola Cup final — before the World Cup proper begins against Sri Lanka on May 14. Flintoff can expect to be given an opportunity in at least one of the two day-night matches against Pakistan A this weekend. These fixtures will present a far more searching examination than yesterday of England's capabilities.

16

the batting for Lancashire in

No 1681

ACROSS

I Put up with (6) 4 Shock absorber (6)

10 Warm and sticky (5)
11 Unfriendly, severe (4) 12 Without worries (8) 14 Exuberantly cheerful (9)

event (5) 23 Tanned skin (7) 24 Distant (6)

S Dead body for meat (7) 3 Formal test (4)

t8 Disruptive change (8)

20 Highest noble rank (4) 22 Broad comedy: ludicrous

1 Leave (eg union) (6) 2 A strengthening metal tip (7)

5 Ignored (8) 6 Thigh bone (5) 7 Recover from pawn (6) 9 Paper. not electronic, post

(slang) [5.4] 13 Capital of Hungary (8) 15 More difficult, rugged (7)

16 Dunce (6) 17 Be disloval to (6) 19 Collection of wives (5) 21 James - steam engine pio-

SOLUTION TO NO 1680 ACROSS: 1 Haggis 4 Offend 8 Acrae 9 Immolate
10 Termagant 13 Bligh 15 Houri 16 Joker
18 Open-ended 21 Garfield 22 Able 23 Dinner 24 Revere DOWN: 1 Health 2 Gimerack 3 Swing 5 Frostbile 6 Elan 7 Drench 11 Aphrodite 12 Azure 14 Inedible 16 Jagged 17 Adhere 19 Nadir 20 Bran

Jumbo Times Two Crossword, page XX

THE SEE TIMES BOOKSHOP

NEW TIMES CROSSWORD BOOK AVAILABLE!

The Times Two Crosswords Book 8 is now available, at £3.50 inc. p&p. Call 0990 L34 459 for credit card orders, or send a cheque payable to News Books, to The Times Bookshop, PO Box 345, Falmouth TRU 2YX

he will abandon England BY OLIVER HOLT, FOOTBALL CORRESPONDENT

KEVIN KEEGAN moved last night to soothe fears that England's bleak prospects of qualifying automatically for the European championship next summer might force him to abandon his role as part-time nacional coach at the end of his initial four-match period at the

Sweden's I-O victory over Poland in Katowice on Wednesday night increased their lead at the top of group five to five points and almost certainly condemned England to chasing a place in the two-leg playoffs for runners-up in November. That means that Keegan, who will review his position af-ter England's tie in Bulgaria on June 9, would have to take time off from four Fulham matches next season, rather than the two occasioned by the scheduled fixtures against Poland and Luxembourg in September that England had, per-haps naively, been andcipar-

Such is his loyalty to Fulham and his concern not to abuse the opportunity they have given him that many thought in the aftermath of the Swedish victory, that the prospect of a four-match commitment might prove to be too over the Poles certainly damp-ened the euphoria surround-However. Keegan, who led England to a 3-1 victory over ing Keegan's arrival and

Poland at Wembley last Saturday that began to repair some of the damage caused by Glenn Hoddle, hinted last night - with the usual riders and caveats — that he would see the job through, at least un-

Keegan moves to calm fears til the end of the play-offs.

'The prospect of the playoffs does not change my position," he said. "I have still not said 100 per cent whether I will be staying or going. All I have said is we will wait and see. That has not altered by England being in the play-

That is a long way off. A lot could happen and there are a lot of options to consider. I struck a deal, which my club agreed to, that I would do the England job until the end of the season and it is not right for me to start working on anything else just yet. We have time to talk everything through and when we are on the plane home from Solia in June after the match against Bulgaria, we will have a clearer idea of what is going to happen." The reality of the situation is that England need Keegan and his inspiration now more than ever. Sweden's victory

GROUP FIVE

PRESIATS: Sept & Sweden 2 England 1. Sept & Bugora 0 Poland 3. Oct 18: Poland 3 Lusambourg 0; England 0 Bugora 0 Oct 14: Bugara 0 Swed 0 1, Lusambourg 0 England 3. Mar 27: England 3 Poland 1. Mar 31: Lusambourg 0 Bugora 2: Poland 0 Sweden 1

POTURES: June 3: Potend v Bulgere; England v Sweden June 8: Luxembourg v Potend, Bulgarie v England, Sept 4: Sweden v Bulgerie; England v Luxembourg Sept 8: Luxembourg v Sweden; Potend v England. Oct 9: Sweden v Potend Oct 10: Bulgerie v Luxembourg.

served as a reminder that it will take more than one morale-boosting victory to usher in a new era.

England's chances of qualifying for Euro 2000 are not dead, but hopes of finishing top of the group are close to be-ing extinguished. Sweden have played their hardest games already and can afford to lose at Wembley on June 5 and still be confident of finishing on top of the group. Sweden have come out of the blocks so quickly it already looks as if the rest of us are playing for second place." Keegan said. "It just shows that at this level you cannot afford slip-ups, because as soon as we lost to Sweden and drew al home to Bulgaria, a situation was developing which was out of our hands. Now it is completely out of our hands.

"But from the moment I came into the job, I knew there was a chance this could hap-pen. You hope you will be lucky, but really this was very predictable.

"We just have to try to get there any way we can. At least we would be there and we have to try to be positive and say that no one remembers who does well in the qualifying heats for the 100 metres at an Olympic Games. I am not saying those guys don't try, but it is all about the final, the big event.

Football is the same. Look at Denmark. They came off a beach to play in the European championship in 1992, when Yugoslavia were suspended.

and went away as winners. "Our job is to make sure we stay ahead of Bulgaria and Poland and give ourselves that same chance. There was 'always a possibility this could

"It has happened. Now it is up to us to deal with it and be ready to pounce if Sweden do slip up."

McAllister misery, page 53 Villa take back door, page 53

Tropical rainforests, mountain peaks, white sandy beaches, and the great Cuban party atmosphere - what else do you want to be doing next January?

Set the tone for the new millennium with this adventure to remember. Cuba entices you with its picturesque colonial towns, intriguing Afro-Cuban culture, rousing revolutionary monuments, almost 300 unhlemished beaches, enchanting countryside, and potent rum.

er's role, the pivotal positions at No 6 and No 7 are the most open in the side and Flintoff is putting pressure on Hollioake, who is a canny operator

but was disappointing in the recent one-day tournament in Australia. He has also opened

All this and more is on offer on this wonderful Cuba trek, in the footsteps of Fidel Castro and the revolution. The registration fee is £375 and you'll also need to raise a minimum sponsorship of £2000 to help these two terrific causes: Kidscape was founded in 1984 to keep children safe from danger, from bullying in schools and abuse. The One to One Children's Fund helps chronic illnesses and who face Merry Don't miss the party. Call 0800 783 8831 or fax 0181-458 9971 to children around the world with

Kidscape CHILDREN'S

TREK THE MILLENNIUM 20th - 31st January 2000